You'll find such a wide range of new styles, shapes, patterns, and colors to choose from, it may be hard to make up your mind.

2. Provide adequate lighting. Many kitchens have only a single overhead fixture, Radloff reported.

A glare-free light above the dining table is important, especially if you use the area for homework, sewing, games, etc.

Other lights are needed above the sink and range so you don't cast a shadow as you work there.

3. Vent away kitchen odors. So many types of range hoods and fans are available, there's no excuse for odors to linger.

4. Check the flooring. Is the pattern worn through? Are tiles popping loose? Kitchen flooring takes constant abuse, so look for durability as well as good looks in new floor covering.

5. Dress up the windows. Try shutters instead of curtains for a change, or hang a bright valance across the top if there's a view.

6. Camouflage unattractive things like pipes under a sink (a fabric skirt perhaps), waste can (in a base cabinet or below sink), and unwashed dishes (with a folding screen or room divider).

7. Consider the wonders paint can do. Surfaces that accumulate grease soon become worn from frequent washing, so kitchen walls and cabinets may need painting more often than other rooms do.

For the eating area, look into washable wallpaper to complement the plastic table top and practical vinyl chair covers of that new metal dining set.

★ NEW FINISH ENDS SINK SMUDGING ★

Stainless steel sinks are now available in a florentine finish that requires no special polishing.

According to Gloria Lewis, home design consultant for Just Mfg. Co., Franklin Park, Ill., makers of stainless steel sinks, the finish utilizes a cross-grain effect that hides fingerprint smudging.

As a result, Miss Lewis said, the sink doesn't have to be polished. You treat it as you would an ordinary porcelain sink.

There has been some criticism of stainless steel for kitchen use in general because of its susceptibility to fingerprints, she said.

"Insofar as sinks are concerned, this problem only lasts until the special polishing compounds applied at the factory wear off," she said. "Then fingerprinting becomes almost entirely unnoticeable.

"With the new florentine finish, this problem is solved at the beginning.

Miss Lewis pointed out that in addition to being functionable, the new finish is also highly attractive, and a complement to the kitchen.

THIS IS the powerful new furnace cleaner obtained by Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning. It's called the "Power-Vac" and uses gale-force cleaning power to remove dust, soot, dirt and even foreign objects from home heating units.

Bogen Adds Powerful Furnace Cleaner To Line Of Services

Arthur D. Bogen, general manager of Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, 490 N. High-st, announces the introduction of a powerful new furnace cleaner to their line of services.

The new cleaning unit is dubbed Power-Vac. Bogen reports that his firm has been looking for a satisfactory furnace cleaner for 45 years. They've inspected many types from many different manufacturers. In their opinion, Power-Vac is the first unit they've found that is good enough to do a thorough cleaning job. The Bogen firm's reputation for superior quality workmanship is known and respected throughout Central Ohio.

In describing the Power-Vac equipment, Bogen stated that the unit produces gale force cleaning power. A suction force, equivalent to 70 miles per hour, removes all dirt, dust, soot and even foreign objects from the furnace and ducts. The controlled force generated by the Power-Vac is strong enough to move an object the size and weight of a building brick.

"If you've ever seen what a 70 mile per hour gale does to trees in Florida, you can better visualize the cleaning strength of this new Power-Vac furnace cleaning equipment," he added. Of course, this tremendous power is completely controlled during the operation.

Completing his description of the useful Power-Vac furnace cleaner, Bogen stated that 12,000 cubic feet of air-per-minute is sucked through the flexible pipe attached to the home owner's heating system. To better understand the tremendous volume of air involved, Bogen suggested that a person might bear in mind the fact that the average size home 12,000 cubic feet of space. contains approximately 12,000 cubic feet of space.

"This Power-Vac furnace cleaner," continued Bogen, "is definitely superior to any we've found on the market so far. From the customer's point of view, it incorporates three important and desirable features. Power-Vac is powerful, efficient and economical.

On the average, a homeowner's heating unit operates eight months of the year, Unless a furnace has an electronic air cleaner, it should be cleaned thoroughly at least once a year."

To introduce the benefits of Power-Vac furnace cleaning to Central Ohio home owners, the Bogen firm is extending a special "get-acquainted" offer. A complete cleaning of a gas, oil or coal fired furnace may be obtained for only $22.50. A thorough furnace tune-up is available for $11.50. For a limited time, customers may obtain both the "tune-up" and the furnace cleaning—a $34.00 value — for just $29.50.

Customers may call the Bogen firm at CA. 8-6543 for an appointment.

Roof Is Low Cost Item

A roof may be at the top of your house, but it's way down on your list of home expenses.

Considering the area it covers, and the fact that it services and protects the entire house, a roof is actually one of the lowest expense items for the homeowner.

An average ranch or split-level house requires from 1800 to 2000 square feet of roofing, while an average two-story house needs only about 1000 square feet.

Even a high-grade roofing material like heavyweight asphalt shingles represents less than three percent of the building expense in a $20,000 house. And since heavyweight shingles can be expected to last up to 25 years or more, the cost is amortized over a long period.

LOWE BROTHERS INTRODUCES '880'

Local Lowe Brothers paint stores are introducing the company's new "880" tint base color system which allows the consumer a choice of 880 colors.

The color console displays provide ten different colors per card — all in the same family. Some 88 different color cards are for customer "take-home" use.

The console is a revolving unit 16 inches square, and gives easy access to any color selection.

The new tinting base system consists of three new base colors and white. The new colors are forsythia, platinum and yellow tinting base.

The system is available in five major lines — high standard house paint, latex house paint, mello-latex, mellotone and mello-gloss.

LOCATE APPLIANCES WITH CARE

When planning your kitchen, place major appliances in areas where they can operate at maximum efficiency.

Don't, for instance, locate a refrigerator-freezer next to a clothes dryer or where it will be hit by direct sunlight for long periods of time. By exposing it to heat, you may be forcing the appliance to work extra hard to keep foods at their prescribed degree of coldness.

In the days before no-frost refrigerator - freezers, other efficiency drains could occur. Excess frost on manually-defrosted units often made the appliance work hard to stay cold. With no-frost models, which do not permit frost to form in either the freezer or refrigerator compartments, this is never a problem.

Absence of frost, together with precise temperature controls and improved thin-wall foam insulation, make it easier for modern refrigerator-freezers to operate at peak efficiency. Ease of operation means that power consumption — and costs — are also kept down.

Outdated Drafty House Windows Are Replaced By Low-Cost Nu-Sash

Doing something about those old-fashioned, drafty, hard-to-wash house windows that cause high heating bills has been a vexing and costly problem for homeowners who want to modernize. However, a handsome new product now provides an easy, inexpensive solution.

The product — Nu-Sash — is an aluminum double-hung unit specifically designed to replace old house windows. What's more, the cost, including installation, is approximately 40% less than any other method of updating old windows. They can be purchased with no down payment and modest monthly installments.

Despite the low cost, Nu-Sash windows are packed with outstanding features not found in windows used in many new homes being built. For example:

Five-way complete fiberglas weatherstripping seals out cold, dust, drafts, and dirt.

Stretching and straining on tipsy ladders or sills to wash outside window glass is completely eliminated. Nu-Sash lift out easily for convenient cleaning inside the home.

Eye-catching, modern design updates the appearance of the home, inside as well as out.

Painting, puttying and almost all other maintenance is completely eliminated, since Nu-Sash are constructed entirely of aluminum and rigid vinyl. An anodized protective coating keeps the aluminum finish bright and new-looking indefinitely.

Coil spring balances raise and lower the sash smoothly, effortlessly, without binding or sticking. Sash cords and weights are eliminated.

One of the reasons Nu-Sash is much less expensive than other methods of replacing old windows is the unique manner in which they are installed. There is no costly construction work. Inside plaster and woodwork is never disturbed.

Expert mechanics merely remove the old sash, insert jamb liners and snap the Nu-Sash into place. The usual window can be converted in just 20 minutes.

The product can be used to replace all types of house windows — oriel, double-hung, casement, stationary, and in-swinging French type. A picture window model also is available to replace single-pane fixed windows, as well as double and triple units found in older homes. The picture window features a large center section flanked by double-hung or sliding sash for ventilation.

BEFORE:
Old window is unsightly, hard to wash, is difficult to open, and lets in wind and cold.

AFTER:
Nu-Sash replacement window is attractive, seals tightly, lifts out for easy cleaning.

Nu-Sash has been tested under rigid laboratory conditions. Results show it is superior to standards for air leakage set by FHA for new house windows. Savings in heat alone should pay a large share of Nu-Sash cost.

A heavy-duty model window also has been designed for schools, apartments, factories, and commercial buildings at a comparably low cost. Detail drawings and estimates available.

Homeowners Are Demanding Bigger Kitchen Areas

REMODELING (above) arranges work center in compact area behind counter, uses free space for snack area.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE KITCHEN

Home owners are getting ready to launch their own space program — and the favored site is the kitchen.

A recent survey conducted for the National Home Improvement Council reveals that the kitchen is the center of attraction for most families planning home improvements. It's the room they would most like to do something about — and "more space" is the head of the most-wanted list.

While the survey brings out the need for more electrical outlets, better lighting, new sinks and new floor coverings, greater priority goes to improvements aimed at providing more cabinet and counter space, more space for better working arrangements, more space for built-ins, more space for eating, more space for activities such as kitchen desk-work and ironing.

Whether the kitchen space program calls for an all-out, all-over remodeling job or step-by-step changes within the framework of the existing floor plan, major appliances are likely to play a large part in the modernization.

Logically, kitchen remodeling time is an appropriate time to make needed replacements of major appliances—and to take advantage of some of the new developments in these appliances. Even though appliances are not outworn, they may be outdated.

New developments include, for space-eager home owners, space-saving designs.

Refrigerator-freezers, now frost-free for "no defrosting ever" convenience, provide increased food storage capacity yet take up less floor space.

Ranges, along with self-cleaning features and more automatic cooking controls, offer flexibility in design aimed at solving space problems. There are, for example, ranges that provide a built-in look without the cost of installing built-ins. For flexibility, too, are built-in wall ovens and separate surface-cooking units.

Dishwashers come in a wide range of designs calculated to fit in with any space-making kitchen plan—over-counter, under-counter, under-sink, free-standing, portable.

COLUMBIA STARTS FINANCING PROGRAM

Whole house natural gas air conditioning now is within the reach of every Columbus homeowner, thanks to a financing program provided by Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc.

Elden H. Davis, Columbus, Central District manager for Columbia of Ohio, said that the cost of purchasing and installing home air conditioning now may be financed through the gas company by customers in Columbia of Ohio's 61-county territory.

Cost of a typical 3-ton, gas-fueled whole-house air conditioner for an average-size-home, including normal installation, will be $14 per month under the new program, Davis said. Units for larger homes, or where special duct work is required would be slightly higher. Terms may be arranged with monthly payments over a 10-year period.

"For anyone considering air conditioning, the first step is to have a survey made of the existing warm air system. Columbia of Ohio experts make these surveys and there is no charge for the service," Davis said.

A survey will establish: (1) the effectiveness of the present duct system for cooling use, (2) what, if any, duct work, air intakes, and circuit connections need be added and (3) the size of the gas air conditioning unit needed to cool the house.

If the present forced air furnace is in good operating condition, there is no need to replace it in order to enjoy year-around air conditioning. All that is necessary is to install an air cooling unit outside the home, Davis said.

Columbia of Ohio also provides service and maintenance on gas air conditioning equipment after it is installed and has service policies available for all units purchased under the new program, Davis added.

ELDEN DAVIS

The gas industry and gas appliance manufacturers have led in the development of whole-house air conditioning systems to a point where natural gas central gas air conditioning now is competitive with units using other fuel, Davis pointed out.

"This, coupled with the principle of quiet operation and dependable maintenance-free service, is an important reason why natural gas — long established as the favorite fuel for all types of space heating in Ohio —is increasing so rapidly in popularity as the preferred fuel for air conditioning area homes, commercial establishments and industries," Davis said.

Natural gas air conditioning installations increased 61 percent in Columbia of Ohio territory in 1965 over the preceding year, Davis said.

Another important reason for the steady increase in gas air conditioning installations, Davis said, is the fact that homes equipped with whole-house air conditioning will be worth more in the years ahead.

Recently the Federal Housing Administration issued a statement encouraging inclusion of air conditioning systems in new homes, observing that "within a few years any house not air conditioned will be obsolescent."

Where formerly only one manufacturer was producing gas-fueled home-air conditioning models, now four — Bryant, Arkla, Whirlpool and Janitrol — have models in production.

One manufacturer's model has become a standard of efficient and dependable operation. It is a single unit, fueled by natural gas, and produces either warm or cool air as needed throughout the house. One thermostat, located in the main part of the house, controls its operation.

This same manufacturer has developed a chilled water-hot water unit that also provides year-around air conditioning — and the unit may be placed outside the house as a space-saver, or inside if desired, Davis said.

Another manufacturer now is in production with a simple-design gas-fired air conditioner that is particularly suitable as an add-on to the heating system in existing homes.

One leading gas furnace manufacturer recently completed a new three-million dollar factory with plans to produce 30,000 to 40,000 home air conditioning units a year, Davis said. As the demand for gas air conditioning continues to increase, others are expected to follow suit.

LINCOLN HOMES:

They Ask Customer Preference

When Lincoln Homes decided to design a new housing series, they went about it with the customer's wants foremost in their minds. They called on the owners of the more than 16,000 houses they have sold in 18 years and asked, "What do you look for in a new home?"

This is what they found:

Good traffic circulation—from entrance foyer to rear door.

Maximum privacy — complete separation of living and sleeping areas.

Distinctive exterior stylings.

Lincoln went to work and came up with the Mary Todd series of ranches . . . the "perfect home" in three distinct designs: A California with double-door entrance, a Provincial with a distinct Norman look and a Colonial with fieldstone combining with wood for an Early American flavor. All emphasize the "total use" concept.

All exterior treatments have the same floor plan—a sheltered entry into a large traffic-directing foyer, three spacious, well-buffered bedrooms plus powder room and main bath. Straight ahead is the dramatic living room with high beamed ceiling and an imposing stone fireplace wall. Here, too, is the formal dining room and kitchen-family room area of 11 by 14 feet. Two-car garage has a large workshop area and could become a three-car garage.

The lower level continues the "total use" theme—with a 14 by 22 foot game room with snack bar area, separate laundry and utility areas and two additional bedrooms and bath.

Clothes closets and storage rooms seem to be within arm's reach everywhere.

A prime feature of the Mary Todd is that the owner-builder can complete only as much of the design as his present family requires. The lower level can be finished right away — or later.

This means that 1,400 feet of original construction becomes 2,800 feet of house. The basic house can be expanded to five bedrooms and three baths at very little extra cost.

DRAMATIC ROOF of this contemporary-style home was created with heavyweight asphalt shingles, special application techniques. Horizontal effect is achieved by using a triple or double course of light-colored shingles.

Eagle Did Sentinel Duty

That symbolic American bird — the eagle — had a practical use in late 19th century architecture. It's also found occasionally on roofs today.

The roofs of many houses and barns built in snowy regions of New York and New England sported cast iron sculptures of eagles. Called snow eagles, these figures were set at intervals around the roof's lower edge, or in staggered patterns along its lower quarter.

In addition to being decorative, their purpose was to keep snow that had heaped on the roof from clogging roof gutters or falling on the heads of passersby. A blanket of snow kept on the roof in this fashion also helped to insulate the house.

Snow eagles from old homes are valued today mainly as collectors' items and are found not infrequently in antique shops. For protection against heat loss and for decorative impact, modern homemakers usually rely on effective insulation and heavyweight asphalt shingles instead of snow eagles, although snow birds are still used with some types of roofs today.

'Designed Roofs' Are Home's Crowning Glory

One of the ways homeowners can achieve individuality for their homes is to give special attention to the roof. The roof is the largest exterior surface of a home, yet it is often taken for granted in the development of the structure's esthetics.

Four out of five homes are roofed with asphalt shingles, but the design possibilities of this versatile material are often overlooked. An important step toward making the roof ttruly the "crowning achievement" of a home is the new trend of "designed roofs."

These special effects can take the form of extra-heavy shadow lines, vertical and horizontal stripes, bordered effects and even silhouettes. The simplest and most common approaches to designed roofs are listed below:

1. Ribbon course application. This method was pioneered by the famed architect Frank Lloyd Wright. It involves the use of a triple-thick butt line at the eaves and at every fifth course of shingles.

Adaptations of this method include a double course instead of a triple course of shingles where a slightly less emphatic horizontal line is desired.

The spacing between the extra-heavy courses may also be varied. The ribbon course may be every sixth or seventh course. Doubling or tripling every third or fourth course will give the roof a more pronounced parallel emphasis.

Another variation of the ribbon course application is the use of the black starter strip on a white or light colored roof in place of the double or triple course of shingles. A one-inch exposure of the starter strip is usually sufficient to give the roof the effect of a strong shadow line.

Depending on local conditions and the type of ribbon course, the additional cost for 15 squares of a ribbon course roof will be only ten to 15 dollars for material and five dollars for extra labor.

2. Complementary-color course. Alternating courses of different but complementary colors of asphalt shingles will give a roof a striped effect. This approach may involve no extra cost for materials, but the labor cost may be slightly higher for the extra time required to distribute the different colors.

3. Horizontal panels. The shingles are applied in the usual way, except that a given number of courses have shingles of different colors.

LOW INTEREST RATE

Ask your realtor to arrange a low cost First Federal mortgage loan at low interest rates.

LOW CLOSING COSTS

The interest you pay is important . . . so is the cost of closing. At First Federal you're assured of low closing costs — efficiently, quickly and without red tape.

NO PREPAYMENT PENALTY

A First Federal mortgage permits you to pay off all or part of your loan without penalty. If you receive a bonus or earn extra money, you can apply it to your loan and save interest costs. Interest is figured monthly on the unpaid balance.

During the past thirty years we have made thousands of first mortgage loans amounting to millions of dollars. Yet in this period of time we have not filed a single foreclosure.

TRIM THOSE hard-to-get-at-places, where the mower won't fit, with grass shears. Clip stragglers, for neatness around rocks, trees, steps, walk.

REMEMBER that hedges should be wider at the base than up top and clip accordingly. Quality hedge shears with scissor-sharp blades help.

SHAPE TOP and sides of hedge — and keep an eye out for stray shoots at front and rear. Light-weight "ladies' model" shears ease the chore.

Regular Schedule Can Lighten Garden Chores

A little garden maintenance can pay big dividends.

"Putting off" garden-care chores means the work load mounts up until it's truly awesome. The garden suffers, too—never quite looks its best, and some favored, but neglected, plantings may die out altogether.

With the wiser course of frequent attention, at regular intervals, to lawn and garden needs, gardening is no longer a chore but a joy. And the results are more rewarding.

As a part of the schedule, protect health and appearance of the garden by proper pruning. Learn pruning rules, and follow them.

Know that certain flowering bushes must be pruned after flowering — including forsythia, honeysuckle, climbing roses, shrub roses, camellia, poinciana. Others may be pruned while the plant is still dormant, in winter weather. They include holly, red fruited barberry, dogwood, lilac, hydrangea.

Spring into summer pruning is recommended for rose of Sharon, boxwood, dogwood (shrub), everblooming roses, azaleas.

The clipping of hedges should be scheduled once monthly. Use hedge shears with superior balance and "cushion-comfort" grips to avoid back strain and callouses.

Lawn care plays a vital role in the maintenance schedule. How often to water depends to a great extent on geographical location. But the general rule is from seven to 10 days, if no rainfall has occurred.

Keep in mind that overwatering can be at least as harmful as under-watering.

With an established lawn, the rule is "water deep"—from six to eight inches. Helpful might be a Water Timer, "set- table" at either Light, Average or Heavy, to be certain sufficient penetration is achieved. The Timer may be attached to either faucet or sprinkler.

Where a new lawn is being nurtured, water lightly.

For Financing

Anyone who owns a home can finance landscaping of the grounds by applying for a loan at a bank. Under Title I, of the Federal Housing Act, government-insured loans can be made up to $3500 for landscaping.

Most large nurserymen will arrange for financing at local banks if the home owner desires it.

The best procedure is to find out how much the cost of landscaping will be from a nurseryman or landscape architect, then apply to a bank for a loan.

It is preferable to have a plan for the landscaping, if any considerable sum is to be spent.

As a rule of thumb, a first-rate landscaping job should not cost less than five percent of the value of the home.

Landscaping costs can be added to a mortgage in many cases if the same bank handles both the loan and the mortgage. This holds true generally for Savings and Loan Associations as well.

Landscaping Today More Open, Simpler

Gone are the days when landscaping was a pile-up of plants at the foundation and elsewhere about the property. Today landscaping is more open, so one can see the individual characteristics and beauty of each plant and its flowers coordinated in the general planting scheme to provide a magnificent look to the whole property.

According to the American Association of Nurserymen, no landscaping is suitable unless it pleases the home owner and adds to the family's pleasure in living. Landscaping is not just to look at, but should be functional contributing to family living.

Centered around the patio, there are three things landscaping should achieve. The first of these is color. Plants should be set out to provide year-round color — flowers in the spring and summer, deep green that provides a summer look even in winter. Secondly, landscaping should achieve good living. It need not be costly to have continuous flowering to brighten spring, summer and fall outdoor living. Nurserymen can offer advice on plants with long season blooming, such as roses, or with typical seasonal blooming like crabapples and cherries and azaleas in spring, followed by rhododendrons or other plants to bring on the results wanted. Every patio for example, needs annual flowering plants in the summer months.

Third, every property should have certain outstanding flowers in their season. The north without forsythia, etc., in the springtime would be desolate. Camelias and azaleas in the south, add the spark that is typical of the area.

Flowering trees should combine shade and beauty wherever possible. Home fruit, too, is part of the general picture of abundance. In the fall, of course, one wants foliage colors in areas where they occur most vividly. The delight of a brilliant foliage tree warms the family's heart and grows in value with the passing years.

Landscaping is not a set affair, like the Japanese Garden, or the English formal garden, but a thing of beauty which pleases the family throughout the year. People at times have rages for gardens like the Japanese, English, French, Italian or similar gardens, but this is ridiculous if one has to sacrifice his own idea of beauty for the imported idea which may not fit into the American scheme of beauty in any sense of the word. It's like wearing sandals on a rough and tumble trip into the Rocky Mountains.

On The Lawn

Keep your credit green. Readers of a trade paper were recently advised by a top official of one of our biggest store chains: "All you have to do to check customers' credit is to cruise the streets. Those who keep up their homes are the best risks." (Excuse me while I mow the front lawn!)

Darn that Dog. A man from Scotts, the lawn people, tells me that the vast majority of all so-called "brown spots" are caused by dogs. And apart from training Fido to go behind the bushes, there really isn't any effective preventative or cure. Instead of trying to reseed an unsightly brown spot, replace it with a plug of good sod from the edge of the lawn.

Fuel Oil Damage. The grass around a fuel oil intake pipe is soon killed by spillage. Before replanting, dig out all saturated soil and replace. And if the oil man won't mend his ways, put a 8-12" circle of loose stones or sand around the pipe to catch the drippings.

Wise Gardener Protects Hands

Instead, she protects her hands with colorful household gloves.

Gloves are now textured for non-slip gripping, have curved fingers for better fit, and are made of weather, oil and chemicals-resisting neoprene processed to be soft and flexible for more comfort.

Beautiful Plantings Transform Home

What does your home look like to your neighbors? In a recent survey of areas where homes are well landscaped, most residents felt that even one neglected home could spoil a whole neighborhood.

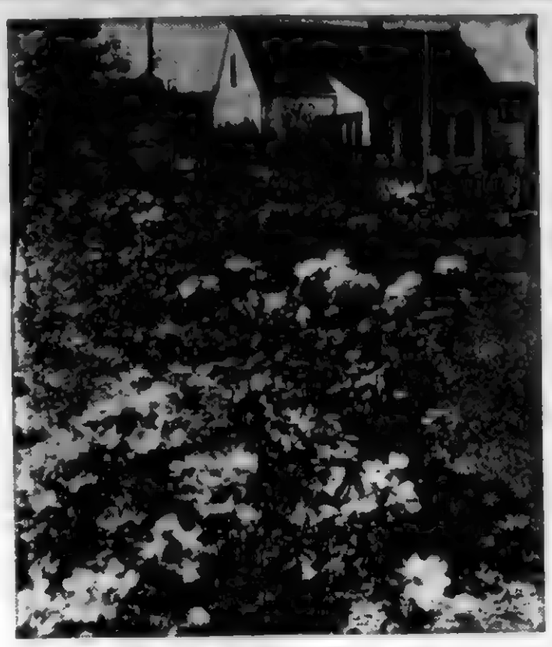
It is not difficult to landscape the entrance to a home, providing the homeowner will continuously look at it from the curb and see what needs to be planted, in accordance with his own creative instincts, or what other neighbors have done in the area.

In some areas, a homeowner will have a lawn facing the street, perhaps a low hedge along the sidewalk and a driveway to the garage.

In such an "average planting," one should stand on the sidewalk in the exact middle of the property and face his house.

All large trees should be planted outside of imaginary lines to the corners of the house. This prevents the house from being dwarfed or obscured by large trees.

Smaller trees such as dogwood or crape myrtle may be planted inside such lines, close to the house.



Shrubs usually are planted in curved beds close to the house, with taller shrubs at house corners. Flowering and evergreen shrubs should be intermingled to provide contrast.

Foliages likewise should provide contrast. Taxus, or yew, is the deepest green of all coniferous evergreen shrubs; junifers may have a bluish cast, while arbor vitae may be lighter green or golden.

Some excellent flowering evergreens for entrance plantings include the rhododendrons and azaleas, although there are many more such as the hollies and pyracanthias and coloneasters.

Beds of annual plants often are used near entrances. These include the pelargoniums, or geraniums, petunias, dwarf snapdragon, marigolds, and numerous other plants.

As with all landscaping, good taste is required. It is recommended by the American Association of Nurserymen that a plan be prepared to make the home entrance most attractive.

THERE'S A rose for every purpose — climbers to beautify a fence; floribundas for rose hedges; hybrid tea roses for quality blooms; tree roses to dignify gardens.

Ever-Blooming Roses Serve Every Purpose

There are roses for every purpose — from the "living fence" to the lovely exhibition roses and climbers that beautify porches, garages and arbors.

All modern roses are "ever blooming," that is they have a burst of bloom in spring, quite a few blooms all summer and then a big bursting of bloom again in the fall until heavy frost.

The different types of roses include:

1. Hybrid teas. These generally offer the most perfectly formed blooms for the formal garden or for cut flowers to decorate the home. The colors are magnificent.

2. Floribunda roses offer many blooms on a single plant. If you are most interested in the quantity of blooms, many of which also are of good quality, these plants are for you. They are excellent as living fences and landscape decoration.

3. Climbing roses grow vigorously against a post, fence, arbor, porch, garage, and similar supporting structure.

4. Polyanthas are known as ramblers. They bear clusters of small flowers and they bloom profusely. They are colorful when massed in beds.

5. Tree roses are usually specimen plants used to set off a walk, porch, or some particular spot on the home grounds that may need a little "dressing up." They usually are around four to five feet in height, giving the effect of bouquets of lovely roses as guests walk between them.

6. Grandiflora rose is named because of its large size and wealth of blooms. It makes a fine accent plant, either in gardens or singly to add color where needed.

Whence Came Grass?

During your life you have learned to recognize the following as the first words in the Bible, Chap. 1 — first three verses of Genesis.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said 'Let there be light and there was light."

In verse 11: "And God said 'Let the Earth bring forth grass'." It was the first mentioned of all plants. One can assume that in His great wisdom, He recognized the importance of grass.

For Gardening

Helpful tips for indoor and outdoor gardening are offered in the booklet, "How Does Your Garden Grow?" by Lucile Bush, consumer education director of Johnson Wax. Suggestions concerning safe and proper use of sprays and other garden chemicals are included.

HOMEMAKERS: It's About Time You Saved Some

"If only I had more time . . ." Heard that line before? More likely it's a favorite of your own, often muttered as you watch your neighbor or fellow worker accomplish all that you do — and then some! The real reason you never have time for the "and then somes" is that something's probably askew in your timetable.

Actually, it isn't more time we need, but less waste of it. There are exactly 1440 minutes a day, no more, no less. Start whittling down the ones you waste until they add up to something significant.

What better place to begin than when you first peek out of sleep-filled eyes in the morning. Rule number one: Get up when scheduled to wake up! Or if you're not the bound-out-of-bed type, you can try to learn to be a successful stay-in-bed like Sir Winston Churchill who dictated letters, went through mail and otherwise worked in bed until noon. If you can use this time to schedule your day, or solve a family problem, you may make a success of the extra 20 minutes or so you steal in bed in the morning.

GET ON A SCHEDULE

Above all, put yourself on schedule. This may sound regimented, but sitting down every morning, perhaps over that second cup of coffee, and writing out the day's activities can mean the difference between that satisfying sense of accomplishment at day's end versus the I-ran-around-all-day-and-didn't-accomplish-a-thing syndrome. It may even be a good idea to "diet" your schedule if it's overweight with too many household errands and civic and social activities outside the home.

Women with families should limit themselves to no more than three outside activities. Once they sign up for PTA, Symphony Association and Church Bazaar, for instance, that's enough.

When you make your list of activities, post it where you can keep an eye on it. Ideal spots are the kitchen bulletin board or on the dresser mirror. Now consider these time-saving tips:

A breakfast table set the night before saves time in morning's usually frantic pace. And, speaking of serving meals, use a tray when setting or clearing the table of dishes, silverware or condiments.

JOT DOWN CHORES

If you're spending the day around the house, have a pad and pencil handy for on-the-spot recordings of chores that need doing and items that need buying. Also a clock in every room — is important especially in the kitchen, bedroom, and bathroom.

Particularly useful are timers. Keep a couple in strategic places around the house, and you'll be saved by the bell many times — when the school bus arrives, children's bedtime, study time, when dinner's ready. In the kitchen, gadgets like onion choppers, egg slicers, strawberry hullers and apple corers are indispensible when preparing meals and snacks. Stock up on them. Blender cooking is a new gourmet art, but it's also time saving for the cook.

Instead of storing leftover foods in containers or on plates which need washing, store them in seal-proof plastic bags which you simply throw away. As for washing dishes, you're two steps ahead of the game if you own a dishwasher. If you don't, let the dishes dry themselves on the drainboard. And have you ever tried cooking double or triple recipes for meals all at once — then freezing the extra for quick dinners in the future?

ORGANIZATION IS KEY

When cleaning, avoid frustration and back-tracking by organizing equipment in advance. A piece of plywood mounted on casters makes a good cart for moving around pails of water, or other heavy items. A basket is handy for carrying small cleaning accessories from room to room. As a matter of fact, keep these supplies stored right in the basket.

If you're elected window washer, avoid the frantic running back and forth to find which side of the window the stubborn streak is on. You'll know at first glance if you clean with vertical strokes on the inside, horizontal strokes on the outside.

Here's Check List For Storm-Screens

One home improvement that adds considerably to both living comfort and the sales potential of a house is the installation of self-storing combination storm-and-screen windows and doors.

Since aluminum storm-and-screen windows and doors should be capable of withstanding all kinds of weather for many years with little or no maintenance, they should be chosen with care. The Insect Wire Screen Bureau suggests that home owners use the following checklist when choosing storms-and-screens.

1. Examine cutaway sections of the frames in the dealer's showroom to be sure construction is sturdy.

2. Look out for poor fits, open mitres and dirt-catching corners. Glass in storm panels should seal tightly all around and should be heavy, with no distorting flaws.

3. Since the screening must stand up for years in all kinds of weather, choose it carefully. Aluminum screening doesn't rust, rot, fade or sag and is made under U. S. Commerce Department standards.

4. Choose a design and color that blends well with the exterior of the house.

5. Test display models to make sure self-storing panels open and close easily.

Paneling Is Inspiration For Your Remodeling Ventures

PANELING adhesives speed-up panel installation.

What's New for the ... home

Popularity of paneling as a practical and convenient way to redecorate and remodel is finding its counterpart in a variety of panel adhesives in cartridge form, designed for use with a caulking gun. Application of paneling to dry-wall and solid plaster, as well as to studs and furring strips, is facilitated with the new adhesives.

On the market now, for do-it-yourself paneling projects and other home improvement uses, are:

Non-Flammable Weldwood Panel Adhesive, by U.S. Plywood.

Royalcote General Purpose Adhesive, by Masonite Corp.

Glu-On Paneling Adhesives, by Wilhold Glues.

Fiberglas:

Polyplastex Decorative Fiberglas sheeting, previously available only to architects and interior designers, is now sold by the yard through retail lumber yards and department stores.

The translucent sheeting, from Polyplastex United, Inc., comes in a variety of patterns. Uses include window treatments, room dividers, indirect lighting, lamp shades and luminous ceilings.

Shower:

A shower in the round is an innovation from The Swan Corporation. The Swan Circle Shower is a fiber glass reinforced plastic cylinder which occupies no more than nine square feet. Capable of installation by do-it-yourselfers, the shower may be framed with any desired thin-wall construction.

Hobbies:

For hobbycrafters is Woodhill Chemical Corporation's new "Gook," a plastic that can be molded to any surface. Non-toxic, non-staining and non-flammable, it is said to cement, bond and coat any surface, including glass, metal, cardboard, styrofoam, leather, wood, fabrics and most plastics.

Guaranteed:

"Acrypolyrene House Paint," new exterior paint from Luminall Products, Inc., carries the manufacturer's five-year guarantee for all-weather performance, on all new or previously painted exterior sidings.

Noise:

Adding a room? Finishing an attic? Noise through floors can be reduced by installing a sound deadening insulation board below the rough or sub-flooring, prior to the tile installation.

This product, available from the manufacturer-members of the Insulation Board Institute, absorbs noise and results in a much quieter floor.

Ceilings:

Mineral ceiling products, once available only through special contractors, can now be purchased by homeowners from their local lumber dealers.

The principal feature of mineral ceilings is that they are incombustible and comply with building codes when such products are required in hazardous occupancies or exitways.

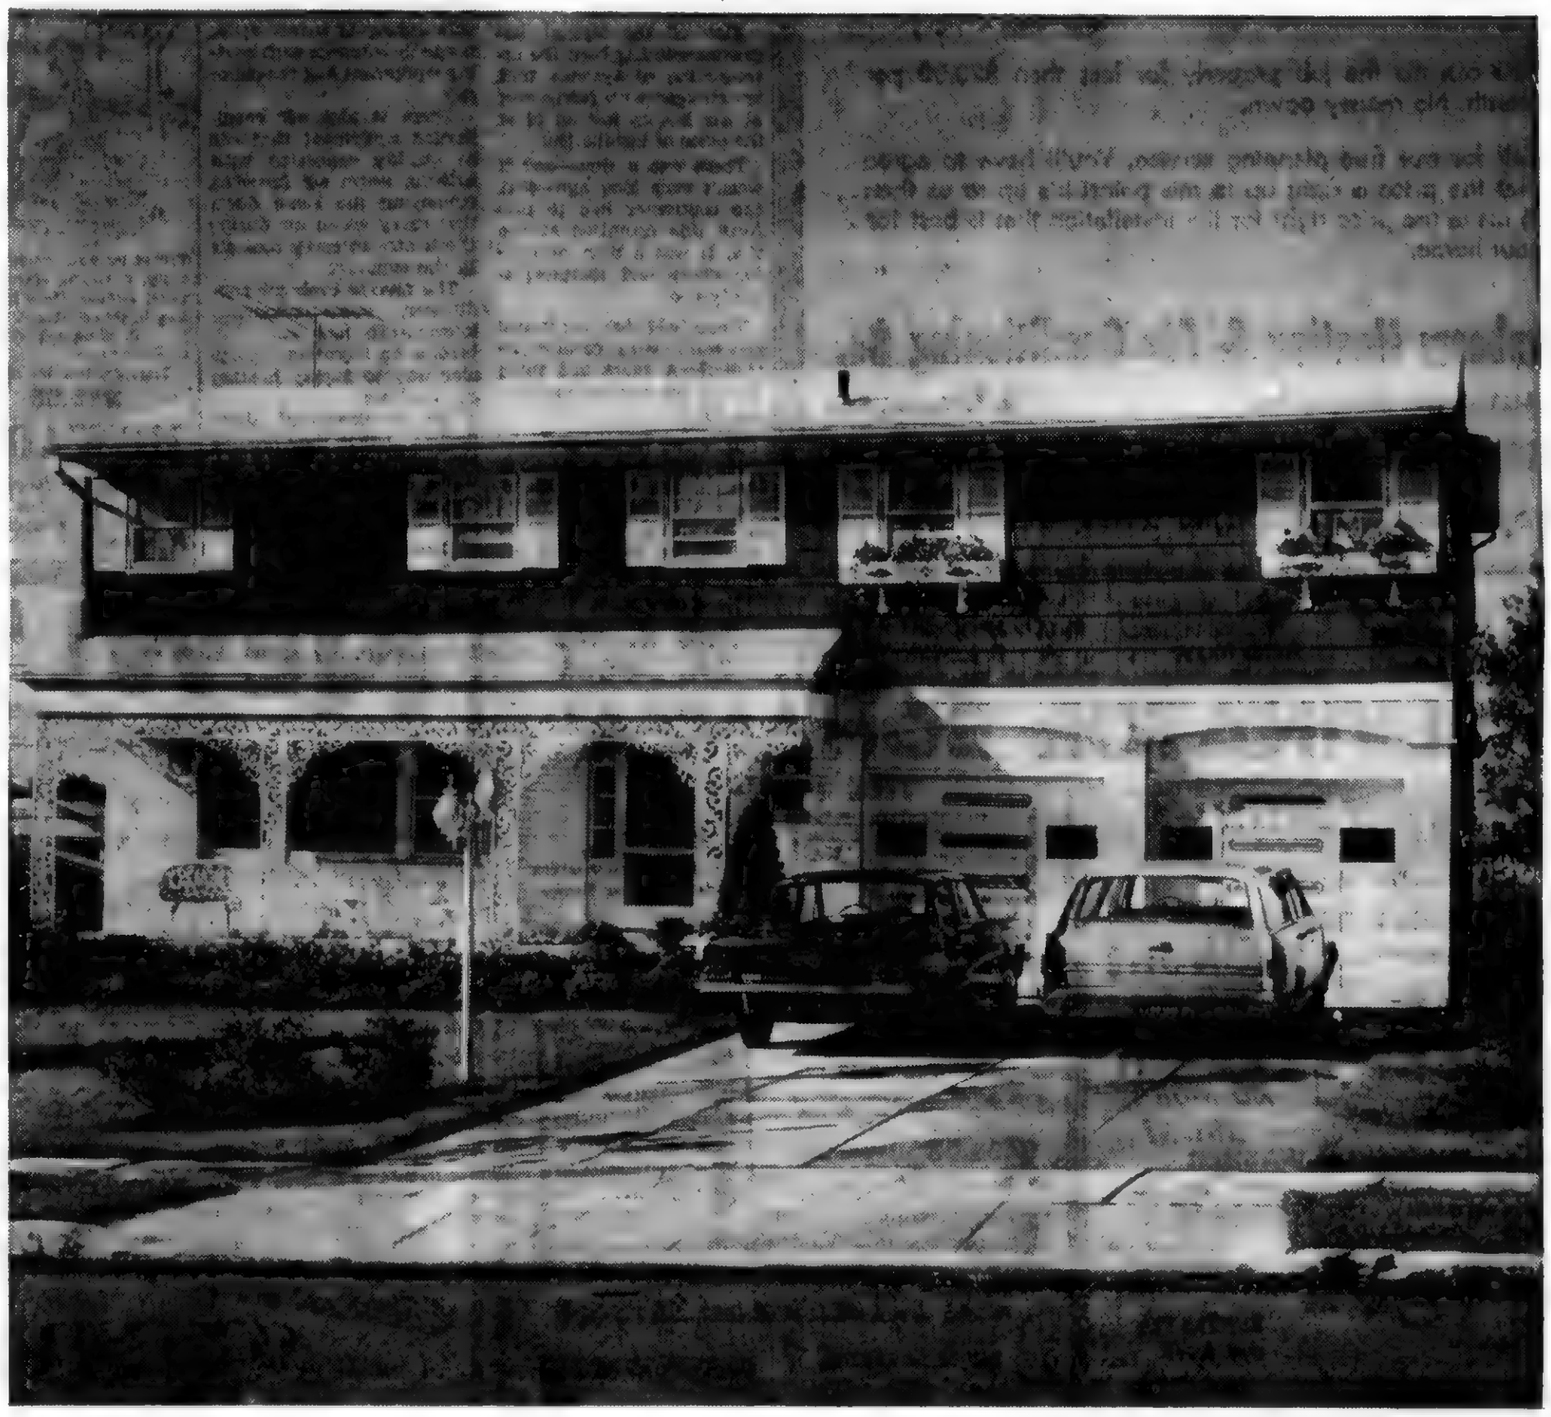
New "Power-Vac" From Bogens Gives Gale-Force Furnace Cleaning

Arthur D. Bogen, general manager of Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, announced today the arrival of their brand new furnace cleaner — Power-Vac.

"In 45 years we have seen and tested many furnace cleaners," Mr. Bogen said, "But this is the first one we believe in; the one we have approved! This cleaner is definitely superior, and never before have we seen anything so efficient, economical and powerful as Power-Vac!"

Mr. Bogen continued. "Power-Vac, for the first time, cleans the entire heating system . . . cleans places never before reached, including all piping as well as the vent pipe and chimney. This machine produces a 70 mile per hour gale force cleaning power, and sucks in 12,000 cubic feet of air per minute through a line attached to the home heating system."



Mr. Bogen explained that the main spreader of dirt in the home is the furnace. He pointed out the fact that the average furnace works 8 months out of the year. For greater heating efficiency, as well as a cleaner home, every furnace, unless it has an electronic air filter, should be cleaned thoroughly once a year. He said Power-Vac challenges embedded dirt, dust, pollen and air pollution in the home. This is the very first really complete furnace cleaner that actually makes Spring cleaning worth while, he added.

"The best time to have your furnace cleaned is now, after the long, hard heating season," said Mr. Bogen, "and right before Spring house cleaning. We're giving a special introductory offer — the complete cleaning of your entire heating system, only $22.50. A complete furnace tune-up is only $11.50! Now, customers may obtain both these services . . . a $34.00 value . . . for only $29.50. A saving of $4.50. We believe in this furnace cleaner and we want as many people to take advantage of this offer as possible! And, it's good to remember that the cleaning and tune-up are available separately if only one is needed."

Call CA. 8-6543 now and arrange for an appointment to the famous Bogen Power-Vac. have your furnace cleaned by Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning. Central Ohio's most reliable total comfort specialists, are located at 490 North High Street.

WHAT ABOUT THE PRICE OF AIR CONDITIONING?

Well, we can talk about only one room, this costs the least.

Or, we can talk about a flat price for a certain size central conditioner.

But, if we are going to consider what to do about warm ceilings, sun exposure, duct sizes, register locations, kitchen heat, etc., etc., then we find that your house is not the same as your neighbors.

If you are interested in results, then you must do some planning. Otherwise it's difficult to get your money's worth in results.

LOOK INTO AMERICAN-Standard WHOLE-HOUSE AIR CONDITIONING AND SAVE MONEY NOW!

You can do the job properly for less than $20.00 per month. No money down.

Call for our free planning service. You'll have to agree that the price is right up to this point! It's up to us then to make the price right for the installation that is best for your home.

Lighting Fixtures Bring Look That's Flexible And Functional

"A new look' 'in the home can be achieved merely by replacing old lighting fixtures. It can be done quickly, easily and often at less cost than other methods of redecorating.

Well-planned installed lighting is fundamental to modern living, points out the American Home Lighting Institute. It provides flexible, functional illumination for family work or play in comfort and safety. Increasingly lighting fixtures are being used by interior designers for beauty and drama.

Whether the furnishing scheme of a room is rustic or modern, formal or casual, properly selected lighting fixtures help provide definition.

Besides adding beauty, accent and emphasis, the right light in the right place does two things.

Adequate illumination helps enrich colors and bring to life the patterns and textures of furniture, furnishings and floor and wall coverings. Balanced lighting eliminates harsh shadows or glare, which, at night, can defeat the intended effect of a beautifully furnished and decorated room.

Interior designers are taking a leaf from theatrical lighting technicians, who artfully use light of different intensities and from different directions to alter moods.

Actually, when you have enough lighting in your home, you can do pretty much the same things, says the Institute. For relaxed conversation or listening to music, you can set a subdued mood with a low level of light.

But if there is a party taking place and you want to create a gay atmosphere, you will want more light. Drab light is bad enough. But people absorb light. So when there is plenty of company, you should increase the lighting wattage to offset the loss.

The Institute has excellent guidelines to help the homemaker plan a lighting system and solve the mystery of "proper lighting." The Institute's "Minimum Light" for Living Standards," widely used by electric utility lighting specialists, and the "Guide to Advanced Light for Living" for more elaborate installations are now available in one publication.

To obtain a copy, send ten cents in coin and a stamped, self addressed envelope to "Lighting Standards," American Home Lighting Institute, 360 N. Michigan-av, Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Now It's Easier To Air Condition

The cost of home air conditioning has been reduced substantially with the recent introduction of new types of equipment that can be installed quickly and more efficiently.

Some authorities in the field say that these costs have been cut by as much as a third to a half.

One of the biggest improvements has been the introduction of systems that are charged with refrigerant at the factory instead of at the place of installation.

There was a time—and it wasn't very long ago—that the contractor had to perform this operation at the site. It was a time consuming chore and therefore a costly one.

While field charging is still necessary with certain installations, more and more factory charged units are being used.

This one factor—probably more than any other—has brought the cost of whole-house air conditioning within the means of thousands of families who would not have been able to afford it a few years ago.

Meanwhile, new devices have become available that combine heating and cooling in a single compact cabinet.

These devices, which utilize all the popular heating fuels, can be mounted completely outdoors on a slab or even on the roof—a valuable saving of indoor space normally taken up with heating equipment and the chimney.

There is also air conditioning equipment that can be quickly connected with existing warm air furnaces, employing the same ducts that carry warm air during the winter to carry cool air in the summer.

The reverse cycle air conditioner, more commonly known as the heat pump, has become an increasingly popular way to supply heating and cooling.

The advantage of these devices is that they provide air conditioning during the warm months and heating during the winter without the need for any other form of heating equipment.

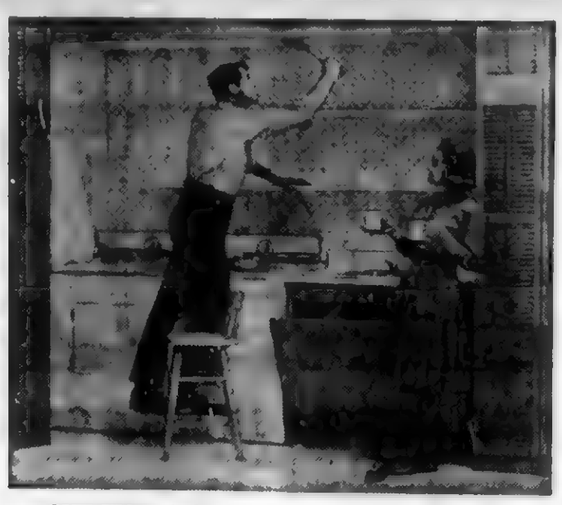
Plushness Is In For Smart Set



For the smart set, sitting on plush chairs is "in." Sitting on the floor is "out."

That's the word from the Howard - Parlor Furniture Company, Chicago, manufacturer of upholstered furniture.

Howard Niederman, executive vice-president and designer for the company, suggests that a plush chair or two will spark up any living room decor.

For example, a swivel arm chair in a showy boucle textured matelasse will fit into almost any decor while adding new form and color interest.

He noted that today's well-furnished home has a wealth of cushiony seating, replacing much of the bare floor space in vogue in recent years.

ONE END of the family room makes space for this home laundry, and shuttered bifold doors conceal the automatic equipment when not in use.

Making Room For The Home Laundry

There's a space race going on today — inside the house.

Sometimes in the hustle for living and working space, it's difficult to add that complete home laundry, particularly when so much room is needed for the young family and its many activities.

One solution to this problem is a laundry center that can be closed off by shuttered bifold doors added at the end of a family room. With this arrangement, Mother can join in the family fun while doing the laundry.

This type of laundry not only saves on space, but may be easy on the budget, too. It can be finished with a minimum of expense if the man of the house can complete most of the carpentry work himself.

One plan of this type calls for shuttered doors that close off the work area when not in use, providing an attractive wall.

When open, however, the bifold doors reveal a compact center equipped to handle everything from sorting and stain removal to clean clothes storage.

A small sink should be provided convenient to the automatic washer and dryer for pretreating heavily soiled areas on clothes, starching and removing stains. The sink will come in handy, too, for such activities as washing any dishes used in the family room or removing fingerpaint from small hands.

Another space saving feature of the plan is a cabinet that holds the sink and provides a tilt-out bin with three sections for sorting soiled laundry. Though one load of clothes is laundered at a time, such bins will come in handy for storing future wash loads — all pre-sorted.

The wall space above the sink and laundry equipment may be utilized as storage space by the addition of a pegboard and attached shelves. The shelves come in handy for holding detergent, bleach and other laundry aids, as well as a complete stain removal kit well out of the reach of small children.

Enough shelf room can be provided, too, for temporary storage of the folded clean clothes and linens after they come from the dryer. This type of storage space saves many extra trips to the linen closet and bedrooms.

Folding Doors Add Beauty

Folding doors, which are often used for closets, can also turn an awkwardly located doorway into a graceful passage.

Because these doors fold back against themselves, they require a minimum of floor clearance. Where standard single or double doors would be unwieldy or impractical, folding doors leave floor and wall areas free for more flexible furniture arrangement.

Modern folding panel doors of ponderosa pine also add a decorative touch to a doorway. Available in stock sizes and in a variety of elegant designs, they can be installed as single or double units for doorways, or hung in a series to form an entire closet wall.

Folding doors can be used to good advantage in corner entrances and hallways where floor space is restricted, to close off studio-type kitchens, and as connecting doors between kitchens and dining rooms or dressing rooms and bathrooms.

In addition to being decorative, panel doors reduce the passage of sound. In areas where ventilation is important, folding louvered doors are often used because they provide free circulation of air as well as privacy.

Huff 'Shocked' By Board's Letter

IN THE NEWS THIS WEEK...

From Spectator Area News Sources

Mr. Eisnaugle Dies

Ralph Eisnaugle, 53, managing editor of the Canal Winchester Times since last August, died moments after a doctor was called to his home about dawn Tuesday morning. Cause of death was unknown at press time, although he had awakened with a violent headache shortly before. He is survived by his wife, Wilma, and two sons, Barry, a freshman at Capital, and William, who practices law in Cincinnati. Arrangements for the funeral, which will be held in Jackson where the body was taken immediately, are incomplete.

Up Go Salaries

A hike in wages from $200 to $300 annually will go into effect for Canal Winchester employes June 1. Council adopted the pay raise upon recommendation of the Mayor's Advisory Board, in lieu of city-paid hospitalization for the men. Other business at the regular April meeting included the news that the new municipal building, complete with paneling and wall-to-wall carpeting will be ready for occupancy next month, and that radar is just around the corner, with an application for a license for some awaited. A study is under way to determine if insurance rates in the village can be dropped through the extension of water line out Groveport-pk, and the summer program of street repair is being mapped. Council will meet in special session next Monday night.

Round-Up The Kids

Birth certificates and immunization records are the tickets needed for the Spring Roundup in the Madison Local School District the week of May 2. Registration is being held in the elementary school of each attendance area during regular school hours of that week, for children entering kindergarten and first grades not now enrolled in kindergarten. Kindergarten students must be five years old by Sept. 15, and first graders six by that date.

Mutual Aid Pact?

Seven hundred persons had a feast at Canal Winchester High School Saturday when Tri-County Kiwanis threw the annual pancake festival. And none got their money's worth any better than Ivan Gundy, vice-president of the local branch of the Huntington National Bank who won the $25 Series E bond donated by the Canal Winchester Bank. Tom Moore, president of the Kiwanis and vice-president of the Canal Winchester Bank, reportedly gulped a bit when he heard Gundy's name called. Making a quick recovery, he is busy with the bank's computers estimating the odds on Mrs. Moore's winning an identical bond Gundy has already pledged as top woman's prize at the 1967 festival.

When's Your Birthday

Although children in the Hamilton School District may enter the first grade next September if they are six by Dec. 31, the kindergarten age requirements have been moved back to five by Oct. 31. All kindergarteners and those first graders not now enrolled in the district must register between 1 and 3 p.m. the week beginning Monday, May 2. Parents are requested to bring birth certificates and health immunization records.

Earn State Degrees

The outstanding FFA programs carried out by Jim Dill and Jim Graves of the Groveport chapter have led them to be selected to receive the State Farmer Degree, the highest honor awarded by FFA in Ohio. Only two out of each 100 boys in the program will receive the Golden Keys which will be awarded Saturday, Apr. 23, at the state convention at the Ohio Youth Center. The degree is based on leadership in the group, the school and the community.

Twyford Names Rose

Columbus attorney Clayton W. Rose has been named general chairman of the committee backing Reynoldsburg Mayor George Twyford for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the 12th District. Clifford A. Tyree, chairman of East Central Community Organization (ECCO), was named secretary-treasurer of the Twyford For Congress Committee and Benson Wolman was named treasurer. Other committee members include Columbus Councilmen William P. Hoermle, M. D. Portman, James L. Bauman and Donald L. Woodland. Utilities Director William Brooks, Safety Director Frederick J. Simon, City Treasurer Hugh Dorrian and City Clerk John Gordon. A suburban subcommittee is headed by Whitehall Mayor Paul Haytcher. Secretary is Gahanna Mayor B. N. Murray and treasurer is Canal Winchester Mayor K. L. "Mike" Miller.

HUNDREDS CAN ENJOY IT

D'Alan Huff, superintendent of the Hamilton Local Schools has answered his letter from clerk Albert Knodel, sent at the direction of the Board of Education.

The letter stated he was expected to attend all official board meetings and be "physically available to members of the community, board of education and school representatives during the normal working hours of the school system, starting Thursday, Apr. 14, 1966." Withholding of pay was threatened for failure to comply with the directive.

In his reply, Huff referred to a recent conversation with the education officer at Lockbourne AFB who attributed the sharp decline in numbers of Base children attending parochial schools to the "better organization, administration and program at Hamilton." According to Huff, the officer backed up this contention with the fact his office had not received a negative telephone call from military personnel during the entire school year.

The superintendent also pointed out that next year two men will share the responsibility he has carried during his tenure and that in addition to routine administrative duties he has provided the planning and organization that have brought "positive and beneficial results."

The balance of the letter dealt with his reaction to the board's resolution.

It reads:

"Quite frankly, I was shocked by the content of the board resolution. After reading and studying your letter, my amazement has not abated. As I understand the matter, the president of the board of education is going to decide on each pay date whether I have EARNED my salary. This is a ridiculous situation!

"The position of the board as listed in your letter constitutes not only a lack of consideration, but a denial of professional status, and revocation of basic rights in the form of EARNED benefits from one employe without any effect upon more than 180 other employes. One may conclude that this is deliberate harassment of a serious nature. In my judgment, the situation in this school district has deteriorated to the point that a professional person cannot tolerate the conditions.

"I am dealing with a number of personal problems including employment, disposition of real estate, housing for my family, et cetera. In addition I do not feel well. As you know, I have an extensive amount of accrued annual leave, personal business time, and sick leave. I shall lose all this when I leave the district. In order to resolve some of my problems, I shall utilize some combination of the above benefits.

"I certainly hope to maintain a good working relationship with you. Please do not hesitate to confer with me if you have any question concerning my situation."

H-T Principal Backs Athletic 'Balance'

Second In A Series

THE EMPTY BENCH:

By The Spectator's
By JACK WITTENMEIER

"There's been a fantastic change here in the past five years," said Hamilton principal Jack Rumora, looking out the window at the proud brick extension to the old Township high school.

"Perhaps the progression came too rapidly for some people. When a school develops as this one has in these few short years, some things appear to suffer.

"There is no deemphasis of athletics at Hamilton Township," Rumora stressed. "We have confidence in our coaching staff and we want our boys to participate in sports."

The H-T principal underlined his statement by pointing out that money has been set aside for both baseball and tennis facilities on school property — facilities which will hopefully be ready next spring.

"This school has also been very active in the formation of the new Metropolitan League," Rumora added. "Although we are the smallest school (with the exception of Teays Valley) in the new league, we are anxious to get started because we believe it will help upgrade our inter-scholastic athletic program.

"It's necessary to walk a narrow tightrope to maintain balance in the total school program," Rumora continued.

The Hamilton principal added that the school now offers a more complete athletic program than it had in the past.

"It's our intention to make our athletic program diverse enough to appeal to all our students. Before the addition of tennis and golf to our spring schedule, those students who didn't care for track or baseball were simply out of luck."

The H-T principal pointed out other problems which admittedly created scheduling problems in H-T's athletic facilities.

For example, Rumora offered a typical school weekday which found varsity and jayvee basketball in the gym from 3:30 till 7:15 p.m.

A boys and girls intramural program followed that on some evenings with an adult physical education program taking up another evening.

"I can see where some coaches who had gotten used to having the facilities at their disposal whenever they wished might not readily accept a more balanced program," Rumora added.

The Hamilton principal agreed that the "opening"

BUSINESSMEN'S AUCTION CHANTS TO SUCCESS

The Groveport Businessmen's Association proved Saturday its members mean business.

When they announced a few weeks ago they were going to throw the biggest auction ever seen in the community there were more scoffers than believers.

But when the final gavel fell some four hours after the opening, $1,800 had been taken in, with net profit estimated at nearly $1,000.

As the Fourth of July celebration (a joint venture with the local Lions) is set up to pay for itself, the problem at the moment is to what worthwhile community project the funds now in the treasury can be put.

According to Jim Young, the decision has already been made.

The high school boys who donated their time and muscle to helping collect items for the merchandise and making themselves generally useful at the sale are going to be treated to "the biggest steak in town" Wednesday night.

Tentative plans call for the steak to be eaten at King's Inn.

The boys who also have a fishing trip in their future are Rick Tangway, Ted Wolf, Jimmy Franks, Dave Flowers, John Maki, Steve Mason, Bil and Ronnie Stoot, Jeff and Bill Nelle, John Ray, Morris Hottle and Ronnie and Raymond Clark.

BAUMANN TO REVIEW HUMANE SOCIETY HERE

By The Spectator's
JOHN AUBLE, JR.

City Councilman James Baumann says he is taking a look into the activities of the county's Humane Society to determine the validity of a recent rash of complaints about the Groveport-pk operation.

An animal lover himself, Baumann says he plans to meet with Society Director Tom Justice next Tuesday in efforts to iron out any problems that may exist.

"Perhaps a review of the situation may lead to a need for the state legislature to take another look at the operation. If any upgrading needs to be done in this state, I'd like to help," Baumann says.

Mayor assistant Richard Sensenbrenner had told The Spectator that "numerous" complaints have been telephoned into city hall. Few officials in the state — or county—seem to know, however, if the Society's operation is answerable to any governmental authority.

The majority of the complaints deal with the public having trouble locating lost dogs. A Humane Society spokesman dismissed the complaint two weeks ago by saying they have no way of keeping tabs on the huge number of dogs picked up everyday.

A leading kennel owner in the area, Mrs. Robert Alexander, proprietor of the Kingswood Collie Kennels, 4000 Scioto-Darby Creek-rd, termed the excuse "ridiculous."

Mrs. Alexander says that her kennels can handle some 100 dogs a day (the approximate amount the Humane Society claims it picks up) with "two or three people."

As Mrs. Alexander sees it, the biggest problem with the animal shelter is having employes who know enough about dogs. "They don't seem to know a thing about any breed of dog," she says.

"No one down there seems to want to be bothered with families who lose animals. They demonstrate a great lack of cooperation and blame it on the fact that they have too many dogs to control."

She suggested that the society devise some sort of code system to keep closer tabs on animals picked-up and speed-up the process of getting them back to their owners.

State To Finance Magazine Layout, Lynch Says

Democratic lieutenant governor candidate Paul J. Lynch is charging that Ohio businesses are being "sandbagged" by the Rhodes administration to finance a 20-page Ohio section in Fortune magazine.

Lynch, who will oppose Democratic State Chairman William L. Coleman in the May 3 primary, said the section would cost $1-million and that various areas of the state have been given advertising quotas to fill by the Department of Development.

"This is an all-out promotion of the Rhodes administration," Lynch charged. He called the section in Fortune "a paid political ad supported by the tax-paying public."

In letters to Henry Luce, publisher of Time - Life, Inc., and John McElroy, top aide to Gov. James A. Rhodes, Lynch asked for details of the agreement between the Development Department and the magazine for publication of the section.

Lynch hinted he feared the article might be reprinted and used as campaign literature by the Republicans prior to the November election.

"While the special magazine section will have all of the appearances of straight reporting, it actually will be prepared by a Columbus advertising agency under the complete supervision of the Department of Development," Lynch charged.

"Businesses regulated by the present administration seem very receptive to suggestions that they advertise," he said. "Banks, utilities, insurance firms and trucking companies have been among the first to sign up."

Lynch said several businesses approached for advertising wanted to include sections on their own cities.

"Their civic initiative was quickly squelched when they were apparently told to play ball because the Fortune-Development Department pitch was designed to promote Gov. Rhodes," he said.

Lynch specifically asked Luce whether Rhodes' picture or name would appear on the cover of Fortune as part of the "deal" and whether Fortune or the state would repay the Columbus ad agency handling the section.

His letter to McElroy urged that Rhodes call a news conference to explain the administration's side of the question.

Ohio Union Features Exhibits

In the Ohio Union this month art exhibits offer a wide selection of work by contemporary artists. In the Main Lounge and Main Lounge showcase are displayed works by the Fine Arts Faculty of Ohio University; in the Leather Lounge on the first floor the German embassy to the United States presents a photographic exhibit entitled "Germany — A New Generation," and in the Terrace Lounge Simon Clopper's work is exhibited.

The record of the Ohio University Faculty is an impressive one. The following are some of the artists who have received recognition for their work: John Baldwin, fiberglass sculptor, presented one-man shows around the state and recently won a competition held for Bethesda Hospital, at Zanesville, where a large sculpture and fountain done by him were installed in January.

Dana Loomis won many regional awards for his abstract painting and was invited to the last Pittsburgh International Exposition of Painting.

William Kortlander, painter, won the Mead Corporation Painting of the Year Award for 1966, in addition to many regional awards. James Leedy, ceramist, is exhibiting in three different international exhibits, and is a leading exponent of ceramic sculpture.

The work of J.E.L. Elridge toured England last year. In addition to these media, works in silver, stoneware, weaving, watercolors, and wood-sculpture are on display.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Separating Men From The Boys

WHITE

WASHINGTON — The Republicans nationally are moving into the morning-after phase of recovery from their uncharacteristic intoxication with what is elegantly called "the youth kick."

More and more it now appears that their brief vision of putting up a 1968 Presidential ticket of young, unscarred and "modern-minded" men is to join all the other transient dreams of middle age.

More and more it now appears that in the G.O.P. convention of the summer after next they will turn instead to the older, seasoned politicians as their field of choice for the Presidential nomination. The betting is now on some such veteran as Richard Nixon, rather than on a John Lindsay, a Mark Hatfield, or a Charles Percy.

Though Lindsay's victory of last November did, indeed, put a more-or-less Republican into New York's City Hall over the massed hosts of Democrats, it is becoming a hollow triumph. For Lindsay as Mayor is finding it increasingly difficult either to run the city or to keep in any kind of array the odd coalition of wildly liberal maverick Democrats and reluctant Republicans which brought about his election.

The other Republican "new faces" are also going down and not up, Charles Percy in Illinois can never even win his immediate test — his race for the Senate against the Democratic incumbent, Paul Douglas — without giving IOUSs to violently anti-Viet Nam war far-liberals who are simply anathema to the Republican party generally.

Mark Hatfield of Oregon is apparently favored to win a Senate seat there, from what one can hear from afar. But even if he does, he, too, will be tarred with the same kind of ultra-liberal, highly non-Republican brush.

So it is that the Republicans are perforce — and on the whole gladly — turning back to their more tried and experienced politicians. And it is not a moment too soon. For though the theory that the voters are simply mad for youth may well be sound where relatively minor offices are involved, it has always been a most doubtful one as applied to the great and terrible office of the Presidency.

Public awareness of the unique and frightful demands of that office has never been so high as now And coupled with this is the now sharply-renewed awareness of the Republican professionals as a class that glittering public images of happy and confident youth on the march and all that can overnight turn into sour public disillusionment when the hard, unglamorous test of performance under fire is reached.

In politics, as in most everything else, it is experience that at last separates the men from the boys. —Copyright 1966, United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Recognize Red China? Absurd!

GOLDWATER

Russia is the worst possible case to cite in arguing for U.S recognition of Red China.

Our recognition of the Soviet Union by President Roosevelt 33 years ago didn't move Stalin one inch from his ruthless path of personal and national aggrandizement. After one-third of a century, Russian treaties are still made to be broken at Soviet convenience.

Every so-called period of sweetness and light in our Soviet relations was preceded and followed by acts of treachery. Stalin and his people were our "gallant allies" in World War II, but only after Russia double-crossed international decency by making a pact with Hitler and was itself double-crossed.

America went all out for her Soviet ally, pouring tons of armaments, materials and food over the perilous supply route to Murmansk. Stalin wanted and got a second front. He demanded and got unreasonable concessions at Potsdam and Yalta.

U.S. recognition and the war greatly increased Russian contacts with the West—in the fashion advocated today by Sen. J. William Fulbright and others who think we are "isolating" Red China — and whetted the Soviet appetite for world domination.

Any mellowing on the part of Russia is not from U.S. recognition or the broadening effects of social, cultural and economic contact with the West, but from such hard-headed moves as the Greek-Turkish aid program, the Berlin airlift, the dispatching of the Seventh Fleet to Quemoy and Matsu, the Marines to Lebanon, the blockade of Cuba.

The Khrushchev era, mild and affable compared to the Stalin period, was studded with treachery. While the fat premier was laughing and drinking his way around the western world his countrymen were building the Berlin Wall, plotting the subversion of Latin America, threatening the Middle East, playing anti-American power politics in Africa and erecting long-range missiles in Cuba 90 miles off our coast. They also broke the voluntary test ban agreement.

Today's liberals in the drive to recognize Red China deride as "absurd self-righteousness" the arguments presented by American statesmen in the 1920's who demanded that Russia earn the right of recognition. But anyone who can read history knows that they were right and President Roosevelt was wrong, that the arguments they presented are applicable today to Red China. As Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes put it on July 19, 1923:

"There cannot be intercourse among nations any more than among individuals except upon a general assumption of good faith. We would welcome convincing evidence of a desire of the Russian authorities to observe the fundamental conditions of international intercourse and abandonment of persistent attempts to subvert the institutions of democracy . . ."— Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

ONIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

"An Informed Citizen Is The Cornerstone Of Democracy"

Robert Burdock, Publisher — Don R. Bucknam, Advertising Director — John Auble, Jr., Managing Editor — R. H. Rogers, Business Manager

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, April 20, 1966

Labor's Love Lost

City Hall Democrats in Columbus obviously worry more about their enemies than they do about their friends. This, of course, explains to some degree why Democrats have trouble rounding up many friends when elections roll around.

A case in point is the anti-strikebreaking ordinance which is being "studied" into oblivion by city council. The ordinance would make it unlawful for a struck firm to employ professional strikebreakers.

Labor, apparently, feels it has a commitment from Democratic members of council to pass such a piece of legislation. Labor's friends in council appear to be more wary of what their enemies think about the proposal than they are of their friends' reaction to the stall.

Regardless of the merits of the proposal, here is a bit of poetic advice to those who would keep their feet planted on both sides of the fence.

If you kiss the foot that kicks you
You'll find it kicks you more
Than the foot whose toes are stepped upon
Until they're good and sore.

Let Truth Ring, Too

Let a Herbert Aptheker set his left foot on tax-supported Ohio State's campus and the local cannons open up full bore.

But when the Birchers stake out tax-supported North High School for a right-wing rally, nary a B-B is fired in anger.

Such was the case here when Julia Brown was trotted into town to address the "Community Lecture Series" flying the colors of an ex-FBI undercover agent. Mrs. Brown, more correctly, is an undercover agent for the John Birch Society and her appearance here was arranged by William Ohlney, promoter of the local Birch-oriented canned hate "Let Freedom Ring" telephone messages.

But these tidbits of truth escaped the watch dogs of the public prints.

The Spectator is confident that the minds of this community can resist the rantings of the left as well as the right.

But the ranters should be properly labeled. Aptheker, at least, did not try to pass himself off as a spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Monkey See

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

Men and women who seemed to have made it are heroes to the slum child.

Heroes in the ghetto are the racketeer, the prostitute, the gambler and the con artist.

Middle class children usually look to their parents for models. But the slum child wants to escape the world into which his parents have brought him. And he'll do anything.

One young man explained his problem this way. "I got tired 'a lookin' at things in windows and askin' for 'em only to be told pop had to pay rent; so I got it th e best way I knew how." It started with purse snatching. He was incarcerated for stealing cars.

"Man, on the street you see but you don't see, know? You hear but you don't hear."

The explanation is if one is on the street and one sees a crime committed, one keeps one's mouth shut. The same with what is heard.

"If you don't keep quiet, you may be next."

Dropping out of school early, youths in the slums gather in gangs. The gang is the social vehicle for the acceptance these youths, like all others, crave. But gangs mold an anti-social personality which is unused to work and its rewards. Frequently, the youths become known to the law. And if the offense is serious enough, they are sent from the community to an institution where care is mostly custodial, rather than rehabilitative.

The method of attacking the problem is to substitute better models.

This has been started in the larger cities by using indigenous case workers. These are men who have been the route, are street-wise, and are able to cope with the problems of the youth with whom they work.

If they are effective enough, they themselves become the model to which the youngsters aspire. Nothing is more effective than to see the living model of one's hopes.

They Said It

"It is discouraging and dangerous for a village to be taken by surprise at apartment pressures. If village planning is adequate, this will not happen. Suburban municipal officials should examine their laws and policies to make sure they can maintain a firm grip on the reins and guide growth in the direction their citizens wish." — Arlington Heights (Ill.) Herald.

"No Fooling, Men — Let's Try To Avoid Losing Any More Of Them"

MARQUIS CHILDS: Fulbright The Man

WASHINGTON — He sits hunched over his big desk, stacks of books at either end, his glasses slipping down the bridge of his nose. Sen. J. William Fulbright, looking rather like a bemused college professor, is the least likely candidate one could imagine for embattled leader of the opposition on the highly emotional issue of Viet Nam.

Whatever the public image, and from time to time Fulbright has managed to arouse the ire of almost every organized group in the country, this is not how the Senator sees himself. He believes in a sober examination of the realities, which is what, as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he considers the goal of the hearings on Viet Nam and Red China.

CHILDS

The hearings were widely reported but Fulbright, who can never be charged with being a cheery optimist, shakes his head sadly as he says that he cannot see that they had much effect on public opinion.

Fulbright is frank to admit that at this stage he sees no way to check the forces set in such seemingly unrelenting motion. The one court of appeal is the President. So far as Johnson and the Senator are concerned it looks like the irresistible force meeting the immovable object.

They have talked together, the President in their last meeting urging the Senator to meet with Secretary of State Dean Rusk. For Fulbright this sounds like a prescription to agree with Rusk. That is, of course, the great divide, with the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee differing more sharply over Rusk's definition of America's worldwide responsibility to contain communism than on Viet Nam.

The weakness of the position of those who, like Fulbright, seek a de-escalation of the war is their alternative. They are not for scuttle and run despite the calculated campaign to pin that label on them. This leaves the enclave strategy of Generals Matthew Ridgeway and James L. Gavin, a holding operation meaning eventual disengagement. It would not necessarily be a static operation, since Vietnamese-American units could move out from the coastal cities to keep the Viet Cong off balance.

With this as his alternative Fulbright realizes that the President is the court of last appeal. He wants to talk with him again. But he is aware of how time is running out as the pressure to bomb Hanoi and Haiphong builds up.

When Karl Meyer in 1963 brought out an impressive collection of Fulbright's speeches and statements, with the subtitle "The Public Positions of a Private Thinker," the consistency of his stand in his more than 20 years in Congress was clear. In his memorandum on the Bay of Pigs invasion he raised the only major voice against that hapless Cuban misadventure. Later in 1961 in a speech on Southeast Asia he said:

"What these voices (opposing any political settlement in Laos) are saying is that the United States is the strongest country in the world and should not hesitate to commit its strength to the active defense of its policies anywhere outside the Communist empire. This is dangerous doctrine; nothing would please Communist leaders more than to draw the United States into costly commitments of its resources in peripheral struggles in which the principal Communist powers are not themselves involved."

It is hard to put a charge of ambition against Fulbright. Liberals invariably fault him for failing to take a stand on civil rights, which is one reason he could never be Secretary of State. Yet as a private thinker he promises to go on taking public positions. — Copyright 1966, United Features.

Letters To The Editor

Confusing Smoke Screen

To The Spectator:

Service Director Warren Cremean's statement is just another smoke screen to confuse the voters of the city. There are no funds allocated or plans drawn at present to implement the acquisition of park lands, just as there are no funds allocated for the building of the expressway at present.

Mr. Cremean is simply stating that if the referendum is defeated in the May 3 election, the city might ask the state to ask the Federal Government for funds for parkways.

According to our interpretation of Title 3 of the 1965 Highway Beautification Act, Federal funds must be involved in the construction of the roadway. There are no Federal funds allocated to the Olentangy Expressway.

Even if the proposed parks were to be created, they would be but a cheap substitute for the age-long natural beauty which the highwaymen propose to destroy.

CHARLES A. JONES
Chairman
Save the Scenic Valley Committee

Letters for publication must bear the writer's name and address. The editors, at their discretion, may permit use of initials or pseudonyms if this is requested for a good reason. In general, preference will be given to writers willing to take responsibility for their views. Letters should be kept as short as possible. All letters are subject to editing.

Vote 'Yes,' He Says

To The Spectator:

What a pity it would be if Columbus is cheated out of a beautiful new scenic Olentangy freeway along the river where all the people could enjoy it. Should a few private property owners prevent the public enjoyment of this lovely river? Besides, Columbus needs this north freeway.

The propaganda carried on against this needed freeway by a northside neighborhood publicity medium does not express the wishes of thousands of north end residents who want the Olentangy freeway built, with miles of riverside parks just like the Scioto River.

A "yes" vote is needed May 3 in Columbus on the special ballot. Be sure to vote "yes" for the highway as an important part of our freeway system.

A Tribute

To The Spectator:

Oscar L. Fleckner, who passed away Apr. 9, was well-known in Democratic Party circles in Ohio.

Oscar belonged to that small minority of Americans who are in politics, raising funds, helping other candidates, etc., primarily because of their profound belief in our political system and, secondarily, because they sought public office.

To Oscar Fleckner, being a politician was a Badge of Honor.

Oscar Fleckner once expressed his political faith when he said, in effect, that for good or for ill, everybody is affected by government so everybody should be interested in government.

It was this capacity for poise and equanimity amidst political conflict that made Oscar L. Fleckner the affable and attractive person that he was and made him popular with political people, newspaper reporters and others.

Lazarus Empire: 115 Years Later...

Simon Lazarus
Founder, 1851

The largest department store in Ohio—the F&R Lazarus Co.—will be 115 years old tomorrow. This is the story of the Lazarus organization from its conception in 1851. It is a proud story of a proud family which grew to be a household word in this city:

Columbus was a plank sidewalk town of 17,000 people in 1851 when Simon Lazarus and his wife, Amelia, opened a one-room men's clothing store on South High-st, three doors south of Town-st. Tomorrow, Lazarus begins celebrating 115 years of growth in Columbus.

Now the largest department store in Ohio, Lazarus is still headed by descendants of Simon Lazarus. Robert Lazarus, grandson of the store's founder, is chairman of the board. Charles Y. Lazarus, great-grandson of the founder is president.

Simon's sons, Fred and Ralph Lazarus, entered the family business at early ages and as they became active, the store grew rapidly. By the 1890's the store had taken on rooms on either side and had become a large street-floor emporium. It was famous for its large clock tower beaded with electric lights and for a steam whistle which tooted weather forecasts daily. Columbus had a population of over 30,000 and was known nationwide for the electrically lighted arches that spanned High-st.

Ralph, who died in 1903, never married but Fred Lazarus had four sons. His elder boys, Simon and Fred, Jr., talked their father into building a new store. In 1909 the new store opened on the northwest corner of Town and High, the present location.

Simon succeeded his father as president of the company in 1917. His younger brother, Robert Lazarus, had entered the store in 1912 and his brother, Jeffrey, joined the family business after World War I.

Jeffrey Lazarus moved to Shillito's in Cincinnati in 1931. He became president and later chairman. Shillito's and Lazarus are both divisions of Federated Department Stores, Inc.

Fred Lazarus, Jr., was secretary of the Lazarus store until 1944 when he became president of Federated. Federated is now the largest affiliation of major department stores in America.

Lazarus has continued to grow at a rapid rate. In 1926, when the Town-Front building was completed, assortments were expanded to include home furnishings, housewares and appliances. The store had previously been known for its slogan, "Everything Ready-to-Wear."

The State-st building of the store was completed in 1939. Seven years later a commercial auditorium at Front and Town-st was converted into the Lazarus Annex. The first Parking Garage was ready for service in 1947 and the Bulk Service Building at 568 W. Whittier-st was opened in 1949.

Lazarus West, the department store's first branch, opened in 1962. It is currently being doubled in size. Lazarus Northland opened in 1964. In 1967, the Eastland Shopping Center Store will open.

WOMEN'S HOBBIES BENEFIT FAMILY, OFTEN THE COMMUNITY, SURVEY SHOWS

April is National Hobby Month.

With this in mind The Spectator inquired as to the hobbies of five of Columbus' leading women.

• Mildred (Mrs. M. E.) Sensenbrenner states that long before her husband took office as the city's mayor, her hobby was traveling and updating old homes.

She and her husband have had lots of opportunity to indulge the first hobby during the past several years—since Mayor Sensenbrenner likes to take her along on most convention trips (on her own money) . . . but she hopes that eventually they'll be able to travel "just for fun."

Their home at 335 Guernsey-av is an excellent example of her second hobby. She is mainly responsible for the complete replanning of its interior and the old-new addition.

• Hattie (Mrs. Robert) Lazarus' hobby has been working . . . and working hard (from their home at 2075 Fair) since 1932 when she was one of several women in the city who established what is now the Planned Parenthood Clinics.

Her efforts have saved the city thousands of dollars since the cost of clinic care is only $10 per year per person, whereas the cost of a child on welfare is about $1500 to $1800 a year and continues for 18 years, she points out.

• Jeanne (Mrs. Walter) Cummins of 1220 Georgesville-rd, loves to sew, especially formal attire, and finds that in her work (she's a singer and TV personality in case you didn't know) it pays an extra dividend. She never appears in a gown similar to anyone else's at a function.

What's her other hobby? Besides six children — she likes refinishing furniture, and many items around her home prove the fact. At the moment she's refinishing shelves from their old bakery on W. Broad-st and making them bright and gay for a new family room that is under way.

• Jerrie (Mrs. Russell) Mock of 2490 Bedford-pl brought fame to Columbus through her love of flying—which originally started out as a hobby.

Now she's experimenting with new recipes — ideas which she gleaned during her visit to Hawaii.

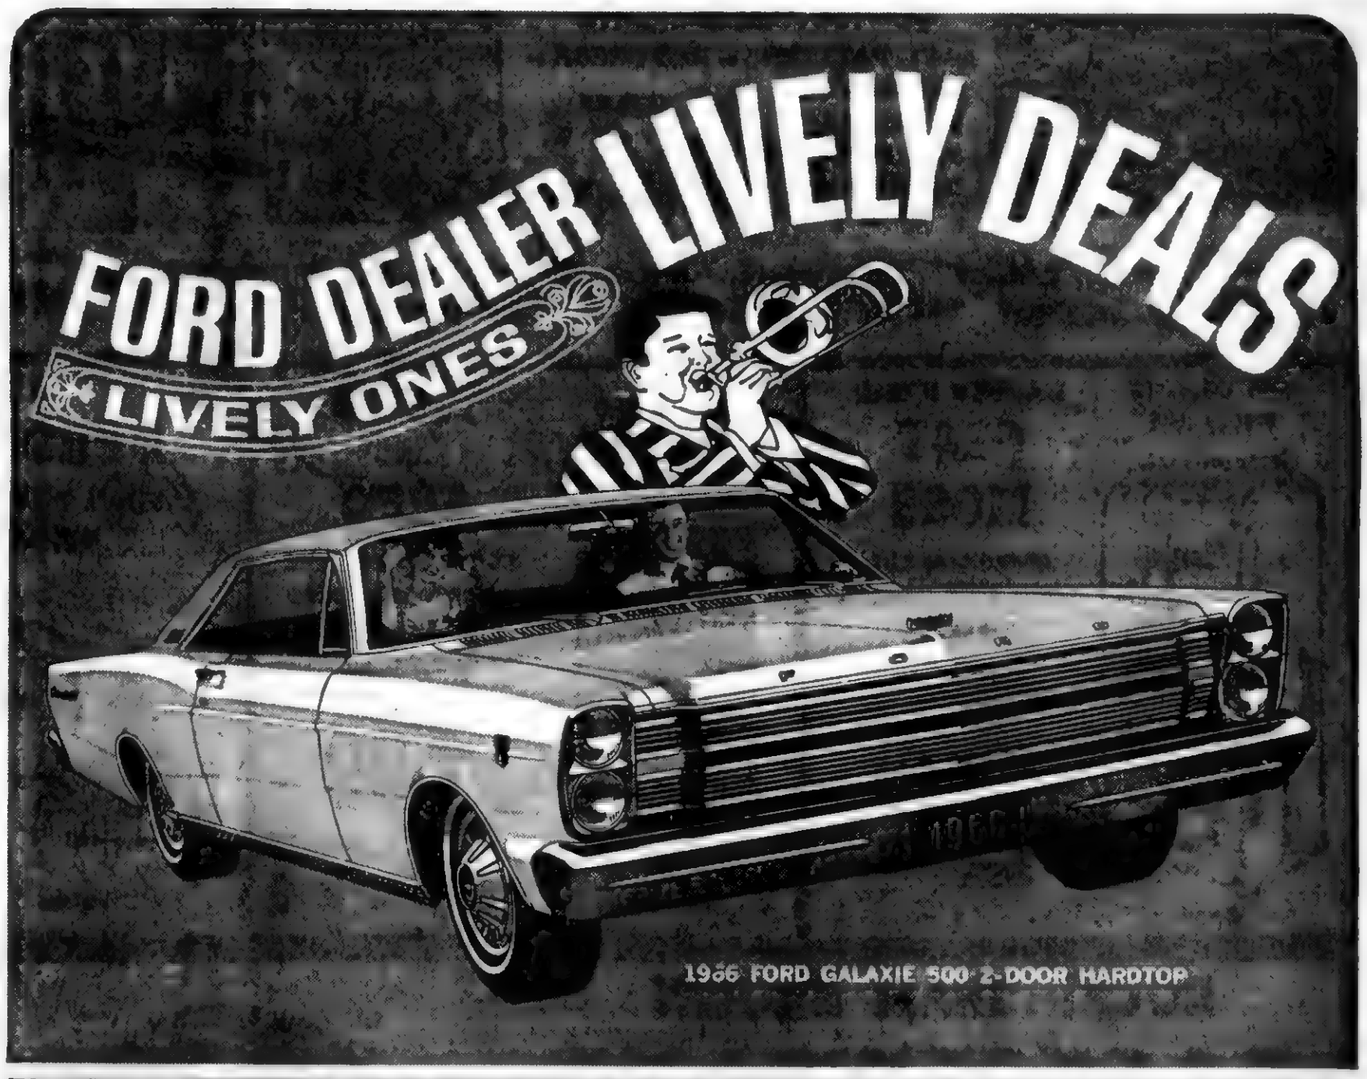
BBB Investigates Complaints: Finds No Sales Pressure

The Better Business Bureau of Central Ohio, Inc. has investigated the complaints reported by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rivera against the Sisson-Stern and Company, Realtors, and Estate Equity Corporation pertaining to their purchase of a house located at 435 Mithoff-st, last December.

The bureau has found there was no high pressure salesmanship involved in the transaction.

The Sisson-Stern and Company secured the house for Estate Equity Corporation and some remodeling work was performed prior to the sale to Mr. and Mrs. Rivera.

However, this is an old house and some of the defects were not apparent at the time the firm acquired possession of the house, nor at the time it was sold to the Riveras.



Although the Better Business Bureau generally does not enter into the investigation of profit, this subject has been publicized and the cost of the house to Estate Equity Corporation has been reported at $5,000.

The firm has provided a detailed list of their expenses including "acquisition, rehabilitation, cost to carry and expenses of sale" totaling $8,086.13. The selling price to the Riveras was $8,950, reflecting a "net profit" of $863.87.

Unfortunately, several problems developed after the Riveras moved into this house. The bureau believes that their difficulties were most unusual and upon complaint the sellers did make further repairs. However, at this point a problem of communication developed and the Riveras sought legal advice.

This did not solve their problem but tended to further restrict communication between the seller and buyers. Thereafter, Mrs. Rivera wrote several letters of complaint which resulted in this investigation.

The Better Business Bureau sincerely believes that Mr. and Mrs. Rivera are honest, reasonable people and should be respected for their efforts in protecting their interest. However, they also believe that Sisson-Stern and Company recognized their responsibility and acted properly in attempting to adjust the early controversies.

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Jeanne Is Our Girl

Popular and effervescent Jeanne Cummins is currently seen as songstress and conversationalist on Spook Beckman's "Coffee Club" which colorcasts at 2 p.m. weekdays on TV-4. Jeanne has been with WLW-C since February of 1962. During that time, she has been the hostess of children's shows, gardening programs and women's news telecasts.

A show business veteran, Jeanne has been singing professionally since the age of five. In 1943, she began singing with th Bernie Cummins Orchestra, and toured the country. While under contract to Ted Weems and ready for a screen test, she decided in favor of a career in homemaking, and married her former employer's brother, Walter Cummins The couple celebrates a 20th wedding anniversary in May of this year.

The little blonde has a family of six children, ranging in age from 2½-year-old Maureen to 19-year-old Christine, who is now at Ohio State University in the school of pharmacy. The other two boys and two girls are Colleen, Michael, Cathleen and Marty.

Jeanne's favorite hobby is sewing. Community activity is also high on Jeanne's schedule. She delights in doing commentary for style shows of various charitable organizations She is a board member of the Kidney Disease Foundation and the March of Dimes, and was chairman of the 1965 Mother's March for the Polio Foundation.

Among Jeanne's many honors, as an entertainer, was performing for the first lady, when Mrs. Lyndon Johnson visited Columbus.

Granville Inn At Daffodil Time

This weekend visit the 24th annual Daffodil Show in the College Town House in Granville and see over 400 varieties on display covering a theme of "Holiday In The Spring." It will be open from 2 p.m. until 9 p.m. on Saturday and 12:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday. After the show, stop in next door at the Granville Inn. Relax and enjoy the most delicious meal you have ever tasted. This is what I did last Sunday. Dining in the warm, comfortable old English atmosphere was certainly a pleasure.

Known for years as one of the best eating establishments in Central Ohio, the Granville still maintains this reputation. Owned and operated by Sally Jones Sexton, the inn is one of the few places to age their own steaks. Succulent, juicy and served sizzling hot, their T bones are a delight. Included with the dinner I had were whipped potatoes floating in melted butter, garden crisp green beans, tossed salad, oven fresh rolls and ice cream with cherry topping. The Granville Inn with its guest rooms, and golf course close by make for a wonderful weekend of rest and relaxation.

Skateland Is Modern

Skateland, Columbus' newest and most modern skating facility, is the only air-conditioned roller rink in the Mid-West. Opened since Sept. 1965, Skateland has the largest single-poured terrazzo floor in Franklin County. Boasting a complete skate repair shop, as well as a sales room with the latest skating equipment, the rink is available for private skate and dance parties with special rates to churches, schools, clubs and scout organizations.

A variety of skating programs is offered, including private or group instructions. The teachers are Marca and Maurine Murthum. Both are national champions and are members of the Rollerskating Rink Operators' Association.

Last Saturday, with a large crowd of skaters on the floor, the entire program was completely organized. Several supervisors were on the floor for the welfare and safety of the skaters. The ages of the roller fans ranged from wee-tots to teenagers. Skating is fun, good old-fashioned fun, and you could tell by watching that everyone was enjoying it.

HARRY GRAHAM, JEAN SMITH

VLT Play Cast Chosen

Harry Graham, 3252 Stephen-dr, S., has been cast as Samuel Savage and Mrs. Jean Smith, 696 Island-ct, has been chosen as Lily Belle in Village Little Theatre's production of "The Curious Savage," to be presented Apr. 28, 29 and 30 in Brownlee Hall of First Community Church at 8:30 p.m.

"The Curious Savage," was written by John Patrick and is being directed by Bud Lane.

Graham has appeared in many community theatre productions in the city for VLT, Player's Club and Stadium Theatre. Jean Smith is also well-known on the community stage having acted in plays for Playhouse-on-the Green, VLT and Players' Club.

Tickets may be obtained at the door on show nights or by calling 486-5330.

Local TV Color Range Near High In Nation

Broadcasting Magazine reports that Columbus, with 15 percent, has one of the highest color television penetrations in the nation.

This means that 15 percent of all the television homes in the Columbus market have color TV. Only Munice, Ind., with 16 percent boasts a higher total.

DANCERS FROM BIG D

Youth Orchestra Marks 10th Year

The Columbus Symphony Youth Orchestra will celebrate its 10th anniversary in concert Sunday, Apr. 24, at 4 p.m. in Mees Hall, Capital University, under the direction of George H. Wilson, conductor, and N. Laurence Burkhalter, associate conductor.

The program will feature such works as Symphony No. 3, Opus 90 by Johannes Brahms and Concerto in D Major by Joseph Haydn.

Symphonic Choir Presents

The OSU Symphonic Choir, under the direction of Louis H. Diercks, presents its annual home concert at 8 p.m. Sunday, Apr. 24, in Mershon Auditorium. George R. Haddad and Richard Tetley-Kardos, concert pianists and School of Music faculty members will join the choir in a featured performance of Brahms "Love Song Waltzes." Admission is free and the public is invited.

A Master At Del Matto's

Bill Vlasak has been pleasing patrons at Del Matto's Restaurant for over two and a half years with his musical ability on piano and organ. Playing standards and popular show tunes in a sophisticated and richly styled manner, Bill's music has magnetism for Del Matto's customers. He is no showman but his phrasing and interpretation shows the touch of a master. This is Bill Vlasak, a real musician. He blends in well with the pleasant, intimate atmosphere of the cocktail lounge, located in one of the finest Italian restaurants in Central Ohio.

IN PLAY

CARL WALKER plays "Oscar" in the Prairie Players Spring production "Mary, Mary" scheduled Apr. 29-30 at 8 p.m. in the Prairie Norton Elementary School, 117 Norton-rd. Other cast members include Linda Haydock, Norma Dillon, Jack Kessler and Joe Spivak.

IS WRITER

BUD COLLYER is occasionally called upon to fill the pulpit in his local church. He is one of television's favorite panel-program hosts. He writes his own sermons. An active Presbyterian layman, author of a new book of poetic readings, "With The Whole Heart," Bud demonstrates a radiant and confident faith.

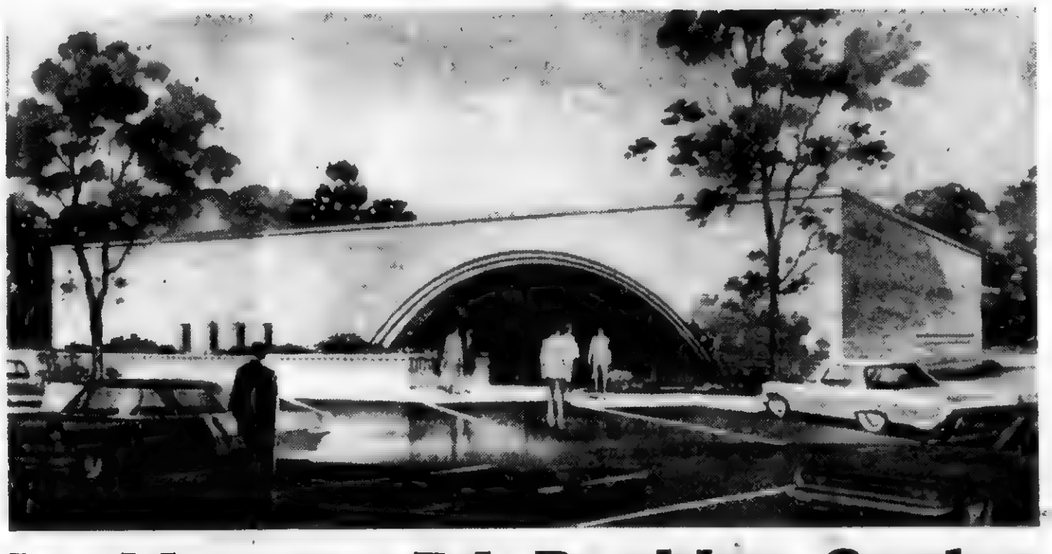
FAREWELL BANKETTE

South Columbus asked for, "Good Neighbor" Banking. And our BANKETTE office allowed us to provide the services requested. We want to say "Thanks" to all our regular City National customers for banking with us in the temporary building with its small lobby space. We tried not to inconvenience you in any way.

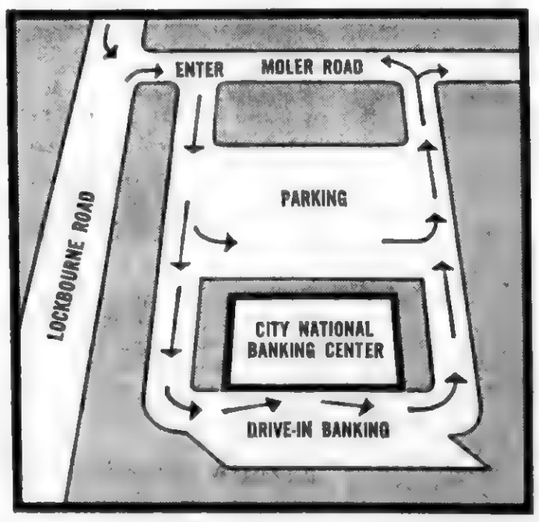


Last week was "farewell" week for the temporary office. Now we've taken the wrappings off of your new banking center. We feel certain the new office will meet your requirements and will provide excellent banking services.

A Message from the Lockbourne Road Office Manager

John S. Patton
Manager
Lockbourne Road Office

"To all of our customers and the fine people of south Columbus. Please accept this as your personal invitation to use all of the services at the new Lockbourne Road Banking Center. We want you to feel that this is your bank. And we look forward to handling your complete banking needs in the most friendly and personal manner."



Lockbourne Rd. Banking Center

City National promised you a completely modern banking center. Here it is. We think you will find everything a growing community demands in the new Lockbourne Rd. office. There's a community meeting room for area clubs and organizations. Three drive-in windows. Safe deposit and night depository service. A 50 foot teller's counter. A huge lobby to provide fast, convenient banking services for the south Columbus neighborhood. If you haven't been using the "Bankette" why not stop in at the new office? Meet your "Good Neighbor" banking friends. This would be a good time to start banking with City National.

"GOOD NEIGHBOR" BANKING SERVICES

- Checking and Savings Accounts
- Investor-Saver Bonds
- Instalment Loans for every purpose
- Home and Commercial financing

Gahanna, Springfield, Ohio Relays Pace Cinder Card

By JACK WITTENMEIER

With some league meets only two weeks distant, area cinder squads dig deeper into preparations for same by participating in several major track events this weekend.

Gahanna mentor Ed Rarey plays host Friday to a 14-team field for the Lions' ninth annual Relays.

TWO MORE seasonal gems are slated Saturday — the Ohio Relays (at OSU) and the Springfield (South) Relays (at Evans Stadium in Springfield).

GAHANNA RELAYS

Defending champion Gahanna looks like the early favorite to retain its own Relay title Friday.

Last spring the Lions dueled Hilliard to the wire to emerge victorious but the Wildcats are passing up their invitation this season.

EACH SCHOOL snapped three marks apiece in '65 when seven of the Relays' 13 records went tumbling.

Oldest standing mark belongs to Whitehall's 1961 pole vault trio who accumulated 34 feet that year.

AFTER A 5 p.m. coaches' meeting, action gets under way at 5:30 when field events (pole vault, high jump, broad jump, shot put and discus) begin.

First running event — the four mile — starts at 6 p.m.

After flag raising and introduction of Relay Queens at 6:45, the remainder of the track events get under way.

THE OTHER relay events include shuttle hurdles (7 p.m.), 440 (7:15), distance medley (7:30), mile (7:45), sprint medley (8 p.m.), two-mile (8:15) and 880 (8:30).

RELAYING RELAYERS

880 Relay — Hilliard (Burleson, Humes, McAlister, Weaver), 1:34.9, '65; pole vault — Whitehall (Neutzling, Beery, Dersham), 34', '61; two mile — Gahanna (Horn, Miller, Strickling, Haninger), 8:38.8, '65; shot put — Gahanna (Shaffer, Seely, Mathews), 142' 4", '63; 440 relay — Hilliard (Kenney, Humes, McAlister, Weaver), :43.1, '65; discus — Hilliard (Miller, Adams, McCoskey), 418' 3", '65; four mile — Gahanna (Horn, Strickling, Haninger, Miller), 19:37, '65; shuttle hurdles — Gahanna (Bokros, Strohm, Glover, Robb), :29.1, '65; broad jump — Eastmoor (Smith, Eiland, Fleming), 61' 8 1/2", '64; distance medley — Utica (Weaver, Stanley, Brewkaw, Buckberger), 8:08.1, '65; high jump — Eastmoor (Clark, Eiland, Koetz, 17' 3", '63; mile relay — Gahanna (Glover, Barth, Martin, Mulconery), 3:38.4, '63; sprint medley — Westerville (O'Brien, Williams, Thomas, McCalla), 1:37.4, '64.

BIG RUN — Glenn Thompson touches down on home plate Saturday with Groveport's biggest run in six seasons against Grove City. The run came in extra innings and gave the Cruisers a 2-0 win over the 'Hounds — Groveport's first in six years against G-C. Thompson scored a Harold Ramey's squeeze bunt. G-C salvaged the nightcap, however, 2-1.

SMITH'S SAFE SLIDE — Shortstop Steve Smith added Winchester's first run in the fourth inning as Reynoldsburg catcher Donnie Woods awaits the throw in from field. Reynoldsburg dropped the Indians, 8-6 in eight innings.

Cruiser, T-V Loop Play Heads Ten Game Slate

By BOB WHITMAN

Groveport's Bob Blagg is probably hoping that the wise counselors of baseball who rate pitching so much a part of the ancient game make a slight error Saturday afternoon when his Cruisers face Marysville in Mid - Eight League action.

If they don't, at least the first part of the double-header is going to cause the once-stopped Groveport crew some problems.

BLAGG RATES Marysville's Jack Mackan as "the league's best pitcher, and we haven't proven ourselves as hitters yet."

But all other aspects of Groveport's game have been improving steadily, especially the defense.

"It (defense) is living up to my expectation," Blagg beamed, "and the pitching is coming along better than I expected."

That double dip and Teays Valley's Friday assignment against Whitehall head the 10 game Southeastern area card this week.

Besides Whitehall, Russ Gregg's Vikings meet Reynoldsburg (Tuesday) in Metro League action.

BOB MILLER'S Canal Winchester squad face a couple "must" games in Franklin County action. The Indians go on the road twice this week to meet New Albany (Friday) and FCL 1965 runner - up West Jefferson on Tuesday.

The Indians posted a come-from-behind victory last Friday, 3-2 over tough St. Mary. Sophomore Bob Griffith got the winning pitcher tab in relief.

George Hamric's Hamilton Rangers have a three game slate ahead of them with no rest in store.

HAMILTON FACES Reynoldsburg (Thursday), Grove City (Monday) and Joe Stora's slick Pleasant View Panthers (Tuesday).

Reynoldsburg and Pleasant View are league dates.

Stora has guided the Panthers to four straight league championship crowns in two different leagues, and is currently on the top of a third league. Previous Panther titles have come from the South - Central League (3) and South Suburban League (1).

P-V is trying for its fifth straight title in the newly formed Metro League.

Carroll has two league features this week facing Millersport (Thursday) and Fairfield Union (Monday) in Fairfield County play.

T-V BB Loop Extends Signup

At its regular meeting last week, the Teays Valley Youth Baseball League:

—agreed to spend $50 for a chain link fence for use as a backstop at the high school practice diamond.

—extended the registration deadline to include Saturday, Apr. 30.

—extended the completion time for Little League games from 8:30 to 8:45 p.m.

— accepted $25 per team (minimum of $150) from the church league to help defray diamond expenses.

—voted to hold next meeting at Ashville Council House on Thursday, May 14 at 8 p.m.

The league will sponsor a dance Friday night at the elementary school with proceeds going toward purchase of equipment.

CBS To Open

The C.B.S. Go-Kart Speedway will officially open its '66 season Sunday for racing in all classes on the 1-10th mile oval.

Pits are open daily for practice and races are scheduled every Sunday at 2 p.m. The raceway is located four miles north of Lancaster on Route 33.

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

On my calendar, Apr. 15 heralds the beginning of a two month period that is Ohio's best fishing time.

Weather, of course, has a lot to do with stream conditions but the farm ponds and lakes are quick to recover after spring rains. If you haven't wet a line yet, you're missing a good bet.

UNLIKE most other states, Ohio's liberalized fishing laws are tailored to the fisherman. There are no closed seasons, no size limits and no bag limits. It's just about as easy as the state officials can make it.

You do have to have a 1966 fishing license with you while enjoying the sport. Three other basic needs for a fisherman are: a place to go, the time or opportunity to go and the knowledge necessary to outwit a fish.

PAUGH

The last need is not to be thought of lightly. You'd be surprised how many people have been so busy making a living or an ulcer, they never got around to going out with an experienced fisherman.

HARDLY A week passes that I'm not approached by several people of all ages who are very serious when they flatly state "Where can I learn to fish? My kids want to go this year and I don't even know what to buy."

In this so-called 'enlightened age,' I find it very discouraging that there is a natural desire in our young folks to learn the ways of the vast outdoors but they are so stymied by a thoughtless adult world.

In all forms of outdoor recreation, the participant must, himself, do something. It is not merely a turning of a knob or the reading of a list of game statistics or taking one's place in the bleachers.

IT HAS nothing whatsoever to do with the sidelines. With a 10-year-old boy on one end and a two-pound bass on the other, a stretching of four-pound monofilament can become the most exciting object in the entire world.

The matching of wits with the unknown brain power of a bass, the individual initiative needed to seek out and battle a wild creature is the stuff that future generations must have to survive.

I no longer find satisfaction in watching someone else play a game that was designed for participants. I attended a high school football game a while back and I was amazed to hear of the characteristics of the opposing team.

I HAVE analyzed that experience and I fail to see how hero worship for the home team and mob-hysteria against the visiting team could possibly add anything of value to the spectator's future.

For many years, I have tried in vain to have fishing, camping and hunting taught

C-W Cindermen Win Twice; Rinehart Fifth At Mansfield

Canal Winchester fared best on area ovals last week as Bob Blais's Indian cindermen garnered dual wins over St. Mary (70-57) and Hamilton Township (77-41).

Winchester dissolved preseason speculation that the Rams were the team to beat at next month's FCL Meet by coming on strong in the field events to win.

JIM BURKE scored three firsts (100, 220 and 440) but yielded individual honors to St. Mary's Mike Hodge who took four firsts.

Chris Hartman (shot, discus) and Dave Cook (pole vault) got field firsts while Dennis Badgett, Chuck Cadpenter, Jim Woodward and Cook combined to add another first in the mile relay.

Burke put on another top show (100, 220, 440) against the Rangers to help offset double-win performances by H-T's Bob Rinehart (broad jump and low hurdles) and Mark Haesecke (mile, 880).

HARTMAN, Cook, Pete Warga, Bill Miles and Bob Fisor got other C-W firsts while the two schools split mile and 880 relay honors, Winchester winning the former.

Chuck Hamilton and Mike Riffle combined to provide Groveport with its only firsts in a 88-39 setback to Circleville.

Hamilton got wins in the low hurdles and broad jump while Riffle won both shot and discus events.

MARK HAESECKE (880, mile), Ralph Morgan (220), Bob Rinehart (broad jump) and H-T's 880 relay quartet (Rinehart, Morgan, Oscar Harris and John Gorczyca) took firsts but the Rangers placed third behind winner DeSales and Whitehall in a triangular.

Rinehart brought a share of state glory back from the Mansfield Relays Saturday by placing fifth (21'5") in an impressive field of broad jumpers.

THE SPECTATOR SUPPLEMENT

LIVE WIRE

LIVE WIRE solves problems and cuts red tape. It gets answers, investigates, complains and stands up for your rights. Call LIVE WIRE at BR. 4-1155 from 1 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Or, write LIVE WIRE, The Spectator, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, O.

BR. 4-1155

I live on Thomas-av and we're concerned about the freeway and haven't heard anything about it. How soon will they come around and let us know something?—Mrs. Mary McCann, 873 Thomas-av.

Live Wire checked with Rick Madachy, area engineer in the Highway Department's urban projects office, who indicated it may be as long as a year before residents of the Thomas-av area hear about the freeway. However, since you live on the south side of Thomas there is a good chance you may be affected. Madachy says many residents have already discussed the situation with him and he will be glad to discuss your particular case. Call him at 469-2345.

My neighbor burns trash in his yard next to me. The smoke and ashes come over on my lawn and when the bottles break they splatter over my property. What can I do?—Mrs. S. L., Columbus.

If your neighbor is burning bottles, he's wrong from the start. City ordinance permits burning only dry leaves, cardboard, paper and wood during daylight hours with someone attending the fire. All containers must be of an approved type. If you think your neighbor is violating the law call the Fire Prevention Bureau at 469-6044 and an inspector will come to your neighbor's house to inspect his container and advise him of the law.

Can you please explain why the garbage men never collect the garbage the same time each week, and when they do, they only take half of it?—Lawrence Myers, Columbus.

Live Wire forwarded your complaint to Jim Yoder, assistant city chief of sanitation, who said that each street in the city should have a set garbage pickup day. These days are sometimes delayed due to holidays and breakdowns. However, if you're not bundling your garbage properly or if you are not setting it in front of your house, the pickup men are required to ignore it. Yoder suggests you call the department to determine your pickup day, then make sure your trash is in front of the house and properly bundled. On those breakdowns, the city is expecting 40 new trucks this week. That should eliminate the problem.

Dog Show Readied For Vets Apr. 24

The 29th annual all-breed dog show and obedience trial sponsored by the Central Ohio Kennel Club will be Sunday, Apr. 24, at Veterans Memorial from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

More than 900 dogs in six classes, sporting, non-sporting, working, terrier, toy and hound, will be judged with American Kennel Club rules in force.

The unbenched show, one of the largest in the midwest, will benefit the American Cancer Crusade.

A junior showmanship competition for boys and girls from 8 to 16 years will also highlight the benefit event.

Supporting groups include the Scottish Terrier Club of Northern Ohio, the Columbus Collie Club, the Westhighland White Terrier Club of Northern Ohio, and the Columbus Boxer Club.

Robert Miller is show chairman. Tickets will be available at the door.

Area residents serving as show chairmen include:

Mrs. Morgan Otto, 3611 Delaware-av; Margaret J. Busch, 3803 Grandon-rd; Evelyn Rolfe, 26 Hutchison-dr, Worthington; Herbert Miller, 209 DeSantis-dr.

Robert High, 2666 Donna-dr; Mr. and Mrs. Phil Theobold, New Albany; Louise Ackerman, 4396 Bright-rd, Dublin; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Howland, 3847 Olentangy-bl.

A PRETTIER YOU

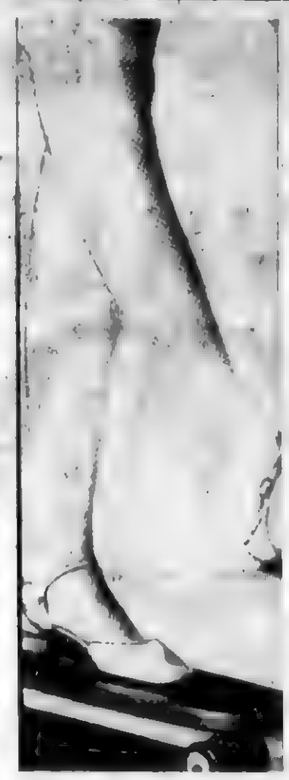
By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

What Is Fashion?

Do you ever wonder what this fashion business is all about?

"To some, fashion is a hemline, a shape, a topless swimsuit. To others it is a gimmick, a racket, a madness. But fashion is also an art . . . and a very big business." So says Phyllis Lee Levin in her current book "The Wheels of Fashion." To my knowledge this is the newest writing on the subject and if you'd like a look behind the scenes of this "rag" business pick up a copy at your local library like I did. I'm sure you'll find it interesting.

Another writer, Oliver Wendell Holmes is quoted regarding fashion. He said, "Fashion is the only attempt to realize art in living forms." Both authors, a century apart, agree on one point, that fashion is an art form. Beyond that, fashion can be whimsical, fashion can be practical and we can pick and choose to suit our moods.



Sometimes it's a combination of the two . . . like the new shoe stylings. The lowered many shaped heels and the softened rounded toes . . . the straps and buckles that blend beautifully with the new stocking looks . . . the textures, the fishnet and the pale, pale tones.

Speaking of pale tones, I learned recently of a new line of nail polish colors coming from Revlon. I tried to buy (or at least look at) some of them and found they were not available here yet. It was interesting to find, a couple of days later, they they were available in Florida. This may be due to the fact they are light, summery colors and better suited to a southern climate at this time of year. At any rate the colors are pretty and pale . . . but not too pale. They are called Chrystalline and have a pearly quality that is not as frosted as their previous shades.

It's always amazing to me to note, in spite of widespread advertising and editorial fashion writing, women still wearing dark, harsh colors of nail polish. Try one of the lighter shades if you haven't before now. They are much more flattering to your skin tones plus they don't show every chip. Of course the new lighter formulas are more resistant to flaking and chipping and they are also easier to apply because within each bottle there are little blender beads to thoroughly mix the color with just a flick of the wrist.

Something else is new in nails . . . square ones . . . honestly . . . new squared off filing has replaced the oval shape we're used to seeing. This bizarre idea was born in Paris and in addition to being gimmicky, it is supposed to have less breakage-tendency. That may be true but it would seem to this reporter to be adaptable only if you have long slender nails.

But isn't that true of many new fashion looks? It's up to each one of us to decide what is right for us . . . for our size, our shape, our way of life.

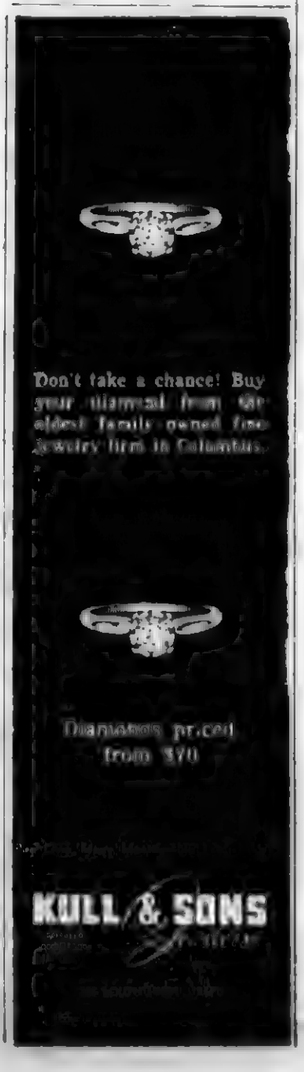
Forgive me! I couldn't resist this one — it gave me a chance to make up a brand new word! But the bromide is very true, of course!



"The opening lead —

A most difficult deed!"

This one is quite serious of course. Here are two staunch rules to abide by: (and there are many variations in leads we can't go into, now) 1. Always draw trumps before you cash your suit high cards. 2. Force out enemy's high cards by leading an honor, providing your honor is covered by two others!

'IF A GIRL CAN MAKE IT-IT WILL BE ON DISPLAY'

THE SKILLS AND CREATIVITY of the Camp Fire Girls of O La Ki, at the left, and the Blue Bell Blue Birds, right, both of Groveport, will be exhibited at the Camp Fire Girls Fourth Annual Arts and Crafts Festival to be held at the Etna Road School, 4589 Etna-rd, from noon until 8 p.m. this Saturday and from 1 until 4 Sunday afternoon. With the motto, "If a girl can make it — it will be on display," 145 groups including Blue Birds, Camp Fire groups and the young ladies of the Horizon Clubs, all from the South East, will provide the exhibits and the entertainment. In the first picture are, from the left, Lisa Jameson, Debbie Swartlander, Janet Woods, Susan Myers and Robin Leighner. The Blue Birds pictured are Jo Lynn Price, Connie Gaglione, Tina Harper, Linda Belcher and Sally Kaipe.

VE Student Ability Can't Be Pigeon-Holed

There is no pigeon hole in which to file the ability of the teenagers who will be trained through the proposed Joint Vocational School facilities proposed by the Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School District.

Educators backing the bond issue and levy which will appear on the ballot in Canal Winchester, Madison, Whitehall, Reynoldsburg and Jefferson School Districts concede that it will take a lot of brains to get through some of the highly technical courses that will be offered.

However, the curriculum has not ignored the need of the student who frankly realizes he is not "college material" or that of the boy or girl, who is already having trouble keeping pace with his classmates, is a potential drop out.

Thus, according to Phil Williams, Madison superintendent, the affirmative vote at the polls is a vote for youth — and not merely a vote for either a privileged or underprivileged group.

Backing this up, he pointed out that the 40 vocational units will provide employment opportunities in approximately 160 occupations.

The four agricultural units include those of horticulture, landscape and grounds keeping, equipment and mechanics related to horticulture and preparation for non-agricultural occupations.

A young man completing these courses might, for example, enter the labor market as a tree surgeon, a landscape gardener, a greenskeeper, a farm equipment salesman, mechanic, or a salesman of farm supplies such as feed and fertilizer.

Office skills to be offered include training in operation of all types of office machines, including use, programming and repair of data processing, the high skills demanded by an employer who wants a stenographer or secretary, not just a typewriter jockey, and accounting, the "language of business."

The unit of distributive education readies the student for jobs in selling and merchandising. The work-study program offers not only sales, experience, but the principle of advertising, display and pricing techniques which are behind a successful retailing operation.

Of particular interest to young women are the units enabling one to become a dental assistant who can do anything for a dentist except actually working on the patients' teeth; the courses in cosmetology which fulfill the requirements demanded in Ohio before the state boards may be taken and chemical lab assistant's training, a field where supply is not keeping up with demand.

Those deft at a sketchboard can further their native skills in the course in commercial art. Although ordinary salaries range from $50-$85 a week, the top-flight artist can earn $150 a week, and those who attain a reputation draw in excess of $15,000 annually.

Auto mechanics and body work are only two of the wide choice of studies in the industrial and trade area which offers experience in sheet metal, welding, electronics, drafting and machine trades. These skills which are especially marketable bring in wages considerably over the minimum wage scale and often up to $5 an hour.

Carpentry and electrical know-how qualifies the student to a variety of activities, including self-employment.

The occupational work experience program is designed to put the student to work immediately for on-the-job training in occupation requiring less book-work and more actual experience.

A point made by Williams includes the fact that attending vocational school does not cut off the road to college for the enrollee.

Although most of those now planning on college, will remain in academic courses, the vocational curriculum will include conventional courses in English, American history and American democracy that will provide a standard diploma necessary for college entrance.

Recent support of the issues came from Governor James Rhodes who hails vocational education as a major step toward improving the climate for industrial growth.

He cited as an example the location of a new Chrysler plant adjacent to the Penta-County joint vocational school near Toledo.

He also stated the members of his Department of Development would encourage representatives of business and industry to support the proposal.

SERVICES UNINTERRUPTED

IT'S TAKING $19,000, but the old sanctuary building of the Groveport Methodist Church is having its face lifted. The work which will be completed by June, includes remodeling the basement to include two large classrooms, a custodian's room and storage for choir robes, music and chairs and tables. It will be repainted throughout and fluorescent lighting added. In the sanctuary where plaster will be repaired, painting done and new lantern lights and carpeting installed, the chancel treatment will be new with a tiled reredos and a new altar, pulpit and altar rail. The Rev. Richard Jameson is shown discussing the progress of the job with Howard Mattox, 5012 Fisher-rd, an employe of Charles Bowers who holds the contract.

Exams Set For May 6 To Pick State Employes

Civil service examinations for positions with the state Department of Health and Bureau of Unemployment Compensation will be given in Columbus Friday, May 6.

The Health Department is seeking laboratory assistants, laboratory technicians, laboratory technologists, bacteriologists chemist,s public health nurses and sanitarians. The BUC has openings for youth advisors and counselors.

Application blanks for the competitive examinations are available from any office of the Ohio State Employment Service or from the county auditor. Completed applications must be forwarded to the Department of State Personnel, 65 S. Front-st, by Apr. 29.

PTA TO MEET

PTA meeting to be held at Barrett Junior High School Thursday, Apr. 21, at 7:30 p.m. has something for everyone. Theme of the meeting is "Spotlight on Special Education at Barrett."

in public schools. Until last month, it was a sorry try, no one wanted to part with a bit of the spectator sports to make room for life-long recreation.

I am now proud to say I will have a chance to teach the students of Mifflin (Franklin County) Junior and Senior High Schools the basic phases of fishing for fun.

ON APR. 19-20, Principal David Buxton has agreed to two-three hour clinics. To my knowledge, this is the first time in Central Ohio schools that a life-long sport has been given its day.

I shall report in a future column how the teaching went (I am not a teacher), how many attended and if they want to learn more. This should indeed be an interesting venture.

of all coaching positions last summer did little to better the athletic morale at the school.

"I had thought the athletic program was going along fine up to that time," Rumora said. "We had made some recommendations to the coaches after they had submitted critiques on their respective programs.

"In my recollection, the recommendations were acceptable to all concerned. In fact Glenn Hoddy was working at the high school on the upcoming football program the afternoon the board decided to declare all positions open."

According to Rumora, he went before the board that day, recommending an "across the board" salary increase for H-T teachers.

But the board wanted to move on the removal of certain coaches at that time and Rumora suggested opening up the positions to protect those coaches, hoping that the board would reconsider their stand.

The plan admittedly backfired and instead of reapplying for their positions, several of the coaches sought employment elsewhere.

"I can see where the move might have led to a mistrust of the administration on the part of the coaches," Rumora said.

"In Glenn's (Hoddy) case, that afternoon we were talking about his program and that night I was calling him to tell him all positions had been opened."

As far as the shortened practice period goes, that decision was made by the school board prior to his arrival in July, 1964, Rumora declared.

The H-T principal agreed that the school's more diversified athletic program and curriculum changes would result in lowering the number of prospective interscholastic participants.

"After all," Rumora added, "we're only talking about roughly 230 boys."

"I believe we're at the low end of a cycle now. However, we will not drop our new programs (such as intramurals) to better a win-loss record," Rumora concluded.

D'Alan Huff, departing Hamilton executive head, disagreed that things would soon be getting better.

"If my proposals for a separate junior high program are accepted by the board, (approved last week) it will still be two or three years before the benefits will be seen," Huff claims.

"We've never really had a good 'feeder' program from our junior high school before," Huff continued, "and this will involve some 809 students (7th, 8th and 9th grades).

Huff agreed that interscholastic participation has declined in the past two years, adding that 92 boys dressed for football games in junior and senior programs not more than two years ago.

Huff added that the same lack of bodies that prevailed during the football season was in evidence in the formation of a marching band when practice began late last summer.

A number of factors are responsible for the decline in participation, Huff believes.

"A more diversified program is one aspect," Huff agreed. "Students are free now at 2:10 p.m. which opens up more job opportunities and more participation in our vocational education program.

"With the phasing out of the Strategic Air Command between January and June, 1965, we had a higher percentage of turnover than usual in base students.

"And add to that this current Viet Nam situation and its accompanying cloak of instability for base personnel."

Finally, Huff agreed that the coaching situation last summer took its toll.

"It had to affect the teenagers who rely heavily on individuals and their personalties," Huff added.

Huff did defend the board's verdict to limit practice time to two hours, adding that some coaches misused time on the field.

"I've occasionally attended some practices with a watch. Many times as much as 20 minutes passed when nothing happened.

"Parents, who came to pick up their boys at school began complaining about how long they had to wait."

Next week: What do the students say?

Thank You, Sir

Doug Huff, Hamilton senior, has been offered a John W. Galbreath Award at Ohio University which he plans to enter at the beginning of the summer session. The award is one of the scholarships established in 1920 by the Columbus sportsman and financier. Each year a grant is given to 10 outstanding freshmen on the basis of "academic promise, citizenship and personal qualities." Doug is the son of the superintendent of Hamilton Schools, D'Alan Huff and Mrs. Huff.

Van Heyde Names Peppe General Campaign Head

Robert L. Van Heyde, candidate for the Democratic nomination from the new 15th Congressional District, announced today he has appointed former Ohio State swimming coach Mike Peppe as general chairman of campaign.

Peppe, 2845 Margate-rd, was coach of the Buckeye swimmers for 33 years before his retirement in 1963. He is now swimming director of Stouffer's University Inn.

Van Heyde was an All-American swimmer under Peppe from 1954-56, winning the Big Ten and NCAA titles all three years.

In his 33 years as coach, Peppe garnered 35 major team titles, 12 Big Ten championship, 11 NCAA championships and 10 AAU [illegible].

VanHeyde is currently chairman of the Columbus Metropolitan Airport Commission and served on City Council in 1957. He is the father of five children.

Pancake Endorses Riggin

James L. Riggin of 3547 Noe-Bixby-rd has gained the endorsement of State Sen. Charles Pancake of Nelsonville in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for State Senate from the new 17th District.

Riggin, former mayor of Groveport, is owner and operator of restaurants in Columbus and Sandusky.

The 38-year-old candidate is a member of the Columbus Jaycees, Knights of Pythias, Civitan Club and the Ohio Thoroughbred Association.

The new 17th District includes Hamilton, Madison and Truro townships and Columbus wards 1, 3, 28, 29 and 34 and parts of 26, 27 and 35, all in Franklin County, as well as Pickaway, Fairfield, Hocking, Ross and Vinton counties.

Gold Calls For State GI Aid

Martin H. Gold, candidate for the Democratic nomination from the new 60th House District, has urged that the state provide greatly increased benefits to GI's to supplement the new Federal Cold War GI Bill of Rights.

Gold, in remarks prepared for delivery at an appearance at the East Side home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Brown, called for state legislation "which will provide greater incentive for veterans to explore the educational opportunities intended in the Federal legislation."

He praised the new Federal law but added, "The Federal benefits for education are too limited due to the tremendous increase in the cost of higher education and the cost of living.

"Subsistence allowances bearly adequate 10 years ago certainly aren't very realistic today," Gold said.

Reaction Good, Junk Reports

Bennett W. Junk, a Republican candidate from the new 17th Senatorial District, says he has experienced "very favorable reaction" to his candidacy.

Junk, a Ross County farmer, has served as a school board member, a county commissioner and elections director in Ross County. A native of Pickaway County, he attended Ohio State University.

The district includes parts of eight Columbus wards; Hamilton, Madison and Truro townships in Franklin County and all of Fairfield, Hocking, Ross and Vinton counties.

Halloween Ban?

Mayor Mike Miller of Canal Winchester is sick and tired of Halloween and is trying to do something about it. With the memory of the village in shambles on the "morning after" for the past two years, he is asking legislation to prevent another encore. Although plans are tentative at this point, is is possible that a "suspicious person" ordinance similar to catch-all type of statute in effect in Reynoldsburg and Whitehall will be passed. It is believed such an ordinance will be useful all year around, and put an end to property destruction that has gotten out of hand. It has been suggested such a law might even be effective against motorcyclists who are burning the post-midnight gasoline.

Blasts Carpetbagging

Democratic House candidate Philip Q. Zauderer, seeking the nomination in the new 60th District, lashed out this week at Republican candidate Roger W. Tracy, Jr., repeating the charge that Tracy is a "carpetbagger."

"Tracy's claim to fame is a name that even Gov. James A. Rhodes would not support," Zauderer said, referring to the fact that Rhodes did not support Tracy's father, the late State Auditor Roger W. Tracy, when he ran for auditor in 1963.

"Carpetbagging for personal gain should be condemned and Tracy returned from whence he came by giving him the sound trouncing at the polls he so richly deserves," Zauderer said.

Zauderer also criticized the Rhodes administration for its handling of problems at the Fairfield School for Boys at Lancaster and urged the state to set up a series of junior colleges so that "the majority of our youth may receive at least two years of college training, which is the bare minimum necessary in this day and age."

Licensing Act Asked

Jerry Weiner, candidate for the Republican nomination from the new 60th House District, called this week for legislation requiring state licensing of all firms involved in the field of home remodeling.

"By licensing, we would be able to eliminate the undesirables who are not qualified because they would have to pass stringent tests in all phases of building," Weiner said.

He also urged that, once licensed, the firms be bonded to cover all bills "including labor and material used on their jobs."

"This would protect the individual home owner from being confronted with mechanics' liens, and, in a great many cases, eliminate the necessity of the home owner paying twice for the same job."

A RINGING PHONE MEANS TROUBLE IN JUVENILE

Mary Jane Graham On Speaking Terms With Tragedy

MARY JANE GRAHAM

By The Spectator's
MARY BILDERBACK

In a wood-paneled room on the fourth floor of the Columbus Police Station, the phone rings.

A dark-haired woman in her late twenties picks up the receiver and says "juvenile."

She never knows what awaits her on the other end. A knifing, an argument, some young punk stealing from the corner grocery store, or perhaps a runaway. It's only 4:30 p.m., a lot can happen before midnight.

The woman is Mary Jane Graham, one of 39 employed by the Columbus Police Department. She has worked the majority of her five years at the Police Station on the four to midnight shift in the Juvenile Bureau.

She spends most of these hours answering phone calls and talking to children in trouble.

"Sometimes it's the parents who need counseling," said Miss Graham. "Often what seems like a tragic situation turns out to be in the best interests of the children."

Miss Graham recalled an incident which happened a few years ago concerning a woman who had four illegitimate children and was expecting another.

"The woman had a low mentality," said Miss Graham, "and as a result she had a difficult time taking care of her children and home.

"The police had worked with her for three years, actually showing her how to clean. We had become fairly disgusted with the situation when we received another complaint from the neighbors. This time I was called out to the house.

"As I walked through the filthy rooms my patience was diminishing," said Miss Graham. "So I took her to the kitchen and showed her how to fill a bucket with soap and water and scrub her baby's play pen.

"I also warned her that the house would have to be cleaned within 48 hours or she would be sent to jail. Perhaps the most disheartening scene was the dirty clothes piled in the corner. Her children had not been attending school, supposedly because they had nothing to wear. This wasn't the case at all. Welfare had given them ample clothing, it was just that the woman hadn't washed for a month!"

Miss Graham returned to the house to find it in the same condition she had left it.

"I was angry," said Miss Graham, "so I sent her to jail and the children to the Franklin County Home. A short time after she was locked up we discovered she was pregnant. Of course we released her immediately and told her to contact a doctor. Three days later she was found dead of uremic poisoning.

"At first I blamed myself, but then realized that it was ridiculous to do so. She could have had free medical advice, but she just neglected it.

"The children were sent to nice homes and they are growing up in wholesome atmospheres. Yet, it's ironic that they had to lose their mother to get this chance," she said.

"It's not always the parent's fault. But nine times out of ten they are usually in the wrong. I think parents realize that it's necessary to give children more than physical needs.

"I would say that parents owe their children seven basic needs: love, understanding, education, food, clothing, shelter and most important, discipline. If you give the child all these, in return they will give to her mother and father love and respect. And these are two things parents seek the most."

Miss Graham said that many times children will come to the police hoping to get even with their parents for a spanking that was probably well deserved. "We just talk to them and send them home," said Miss Graham.

"Often parents are no longer able to control their children and they'll call up and ask one of the men to talk to them. In this case we see the parents and the child together."

"When a juvenile is brought in here, he tries to size us up," she said. "And we do the same. Chances are if you get to him, he won't be back but this is rarely the case."

Miss Graham works in plain clothes and drives an unmarked car while on duty. Her purse, like most women's, has a variety of things in it, but there is also a small black revolver.

She's never shot it at anyone and has only had the occasion to pull it once.

"I seldom go out in the street unless I'm called," said Miss Graham.

"One day things were going slow in the office and I decided to go out and find a 12-year-old who had been reported missing. Her name was Linda and we had had quite a few dealings with her before. This time her mother, who had just been released from Marysville, said she had gone with a 24-year-old man from Kentucky. The pair said they were married. The man had made the statement when he left that if the police were called, he would "take two with him."

"I had the license number, so I began driving all over the South Side searching for the car. I finally spotted the pink and white vehicle with six boys in it. After a frantic chase I cornered them. Another patrolman had also joined in the pursuit.

"After hours of interrogation they finally told me where the girl was. The fellow was sent to Mansfield, but after a three day stay he escaped and hasn't been located since.

"As for Linda, after a brief stay in the detention home she was released. She really hasn't much of a chance with her backgound and home environment. I expect we'll be seeing her in a short time," said Miss Graham.

The Juvenile Department is well equipped to handle almost any situation, even sleepy, lost children.

In one of the interrogation rooms is a baby bed and a bottle for the younger ones. "Sometimes when children are lost they may end up staying here for several hours," said Miss Graham.

"For some reason parents never think that the police might have picked up their child. Anyway we take good care of them. If they are old enough to eat, the men in juvenile buy them candy and ice cream in the old tradition. I do just the opposite. They get a hot dog, milk, and perhaps some potato chips."

Miss Graham went through 13 weeks of training with policemen before she went to work in the juvenile department.

This included a thorough study of the rules and regulations which govern the state, the writing of traffic tickets, and how to direct traffic.

"I've never had the occasion to give out a ticket or direct traffic and I hope I never have to," said Miss Graham.

Her training also included three days a week on the pistol range and extensive training in judo. "I'd never had a gun in my hand before coming to work at the police department," she said.

Miss Graham had always wanted to be a "G Man" as she put it. "But then I discovered they didn't take women, and I was even more upset when I found that one had to be 23 to qualify for the policewomen jobs. At the time I was a freshman in high school. Anyway it didn't seem like I'd ever be that old."

Miss Graham and her brother, Patrolman Jim Graham are the only brother-sister team on the force. "He decided to take the job after serving in the Marines when he found I liked my work so well," she said.

HOW CAN SHE HAVE SPRING FEVER?

A PRETTY girl like her? Nonsense! And yet spring fever knows no age . . . not when the lilacs bloom and the world sings. Even Evon Bock knows that the best place to suffer a case of spring fever is in a placid woods, where she stopped here, and even took time to pose for a Spectator camera.

OBETZ

And Hamilton Township
Ruth Borden
491-8141

The Obetz Business Men's Association held its annual oyster and fish supper for families and friends at the Obetz Business Men's Club House Saturday evening, Mar. 26.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton Township School Boosters was held at the high school last Thursday evening. The nominating committee chairman, Jack Rumora, presented names nominated by the committee for officers for the coming year.

Election will be held at the regular monthly meeting in May. At that time, the president will ask for nominations from the floor. Each member will have the opportunity to nominate some one of his choice for office.

Also, to correct a misunderstanding, the boosters did not sponsor the recent potluck supper at the high school for the baseball team.

This was furnished and served by the parents of the Junior High Sports. The boosters did purchase the new uniforms for the boys with proceeds from a recent pancake breakfast.

The Alumni Association of Hamilton Township High School is announcing its 51st banquet to be held Saturday, May 14, at 6:30 p.m. at the Hamilton Township High School. A representative from each graduating class is responsible for sending invitations to classmates. Anyone not receiving an invitation who would like to attend the banquet please contact the secretary, Mrs. Irene S. Bower, 726 N. Hague-av, as soon as possible.

Reservations must be in by Friday, May 6. Anyone from the class of 1934, please contact Mrs. Ruth Borden 491-8141. A variety program of entertainment is being planned.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton High PTA will be Thursday evening, Apr. 21.

IT'S LIVING ELECTRICALLY

THE GRAND OPENING of the Mar-Bud Apartments in Ashville Sunday presented the opportunity for living with a capital "E." Each of the ultra-modern units owned by Mrs. Mary Glitt is air-conditioned and heated with electricity, and features all Hot Point appliances. A few days before opening, Keith Day, brother-in-law of paving contractor Wendall Stepp, was hard at work to insure the Ashville's newest apartment building would be ready for inspection by the weekend.

CRD Conducts Gymnastic Event

The Ohio AAU Senior Men and Women Gymnastic Championships will be conducted by the Columbus Recreation Department at Westgate Recreation Center on Saturday, Apr. 23, at 2 p.m.

The competition is open for men, 16 years of age and older, and women, 15 years of age and older, who are residents of the Ohio AAU territory.

Men's events will consist of parallel bars, side horse, horizontal bar, free exercise, long horse, still rings, tumbling, and trampoline. Women's events will include balance beam, free exercise, uneven parallel bars and vaulting.

PROPOSAL FOR SCHOOL EQUIPMENT

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Education of the Madison Local School District, Groveport, Franklin County, State of Ohio, at the Office of the Clerk of said School Board, Groveport, Ohio, until 12:00 noon, May 9, 1966, for the purchase of equipmen and furniture to be delivered and installed at the Groveport-Madison Junior High School, Hamilton Road, Groveport, Ohio and the Asbury Elementary School, 5127 Harbor Blvd., Columbus, Ohio. The bids will be opened and read aloud on the above named date at 12:00 o'clock P.M. Purchase of equipment will be made within two weeks after bids are opened.

Specifications are on file at the office of the Clerk of the Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools. Copies of said specifications may be obtained from either office.

Equipment for which proposals are to be received includes library furniture and miscellaneous loose equipment.

Separate proposals shall be received for the two library groups and for the total equipment as noted on the bid form, which will be provided.

All proposals shall be made in conformity with the General Code of Ohio, and on blanks furnished by the Board of Education and shall be enclosed in a sealed envelope and addressed to the Board of Education, Madison Local School District, Groveport, Franklin County, State of Ohio, and endorsed Proposal for Equipment Contract showing date and hour of opening on the outside of the envelope.

Each bid must contain the name of each and every person interested therein, and shall be accompanied by a bid bond with corporate surety thereon, authorized to do business in the State of Ohio and satisfactory to the Board of Education, or by certified check on a solvent bank located in the State of Ohio, in an amount equal to ten per cent (10%) of the total amount of the bid, conditioned that if the bid be accepted, a contract will be entered into, and the performance thereof properly secured by a performance bond in accordance with the law.

Said bonds or certified check shall be made in favor of the Board of Education of Madison Local School District, Franklin County, State of Ohio, and shall be made payable to Charles I. Dean, Clerk-Treasurer of said Board.

The bond or certified check shall be forfeited if said bidder fails to enter into a contract and secure the performance thereof, within ten (10) days after notice of acceptance of the bid. A performance bond, with corporate surety thereon satisfactory to said Board in an amount equal to one hundred per cent (100%) of the aggregate bid price, conditioned in accordance with law will be required.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any, part of any, or all bids.

By order of the Board of Education of Madison Local School District, Franklin County, State of Ohio.

Or if you're one of the big spenders, you can lease an Impala convertible.
Or a neat little Super Sport.
You can lease a Chevrolet with lots of extras.

Or you can get one plain.
You can pay a bit more and choose a plan that includes insurance and maintenance
Or really, you can choose any kind of plan that you'd like.
When it comes to leasing a Chevrolet, we're as flexible as you are.

Clean, flameless electric ranges are preferred 2 to 1 for better baking.

Go flameless...put on a happy face!

Women do prefer electric ranges for baking. That's a fact. The reasons are very simple. Best baking results depend on accurate heat control. And electric ovens give perfect heat control because they are precise, electronic instruments. Set the dial at the temperature you want and that is the exact temperature you'll get! Another thing, electric ovens are completely insulated. This keeps the heat in the oven where it belongs. Bakes better, keeps kitchens cooler . . . two thoughtful reasons for going flameless. For more information on the merits of clean, flameless electric ranges . . . call the ELECTRIC company.

See your flameless electric appliance dealer today!

Clean, flameless electric ranges are preferred 2 to 1 for better baking.

Go flameless...put on a happy face!

Women do prefer electric ranges for baking. That's a fact. The reasons are very simple. Best baking results depend on accurate heat control. And electric ovens give perfect heat control because they are precise, electronic instruments. Set the dial at the temperature you want and that is the exact temperature you'll get! Another thing, electric ovens are completely insulated. This keeps the heat in the oven where it belongs. Bakes better, keeps kitchens cooler . . . two thoughtful reasons for going flameless. For more information on the merits of clean, flameless electric ranges . . . call the ELECTRIC company.

See your flameless electric appliance dealer today!

Kegler's Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

A lot of publicity has been given to Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson's love of bowling, that she's a novice "and likes it that way." Articles say that she bowls three or four times a week. If that rate continues she'll soon leave the novice class.

Yes, posing is still a problem! This is when the bowler takes his stance, holds it for a long time, and in the meantime bowlers on adjacent lanes have to wait. This not only slows up bowling but causes a few shattered nerves!

CLINTON LANES is inaugurating its first annual 20-game Marathon. Total guaranteed prize fund is $2,300 and is limited to the first 100 entries. Bob Davison (formerly at Fiesta) is the new manager.

We don't hear too much about high team series. The Main (Lanes) Classic League had four teams crack the 3000 barrier: Blendon Home Improvement, Sokol Bros., Van Dyne-Crotty and Village Packing.

Stop and think what it takes in individual achievement to average 1000 per team per game — an average of 200 per man-game.

CHICAGO'S Peterson classic continues to return those oily balls but pays out good money. Herschel Begley of Detroit, Mich., still holds the $32,000 value lead. No central Ohioans are "on the board" yet, although many have bowled in this season's 56-year-old competition.

The new Madison Square Gardens will have 48 AMF lanes so there will always be "knockdowns" going on although "knockouts" may not be as common since fewer boxing matches will be featured.

Women's records in Columbus are made to be broken. Marcia Crego slammed a 280 game (one pin up over Jackie Kendall and Nita Ditrick) in the Ladies' All Star at 3C's.

AMOS starts its sixth annual mixed team tournament on May 21, continuing on weekends through June 12.

In the ABC tournament there have been 17 perfect games rolled, but not one of them in the team event. In the 62 years of this event only four men have averaged 200 for 20 years and one man for 25 years. Two men have bowled in 49 consecutive tournaments.

A "miss" is exactly what it says — failure to make a spare, except when a split is left up. This situation may also be called an "error" or "blow."

WHEN THIS occurs in the tenth frame by the anchor it is called "curtain." When it loses the game it is referred to as "lights out."

Bowling lingo is a distinct language and varies by locality in usage. For instance, ever hear of a "sandwich game" in Columbus? On the West Coast it means the same as a Dutch 200.

Mat Coaches Miffed At OHSAA Verdict

By JACK WITTENMEIER

"Disappointment" was the word to describe the consensus of feeling of area wrestling coaches last week when they learned that the Ohio High School Athletic Association had turned down a request to move back the date of the 1967 state mat tourney.

The announcement came at the annual post-season meeting of the Central Ohio Wrestling Coaches Association at Yarnell's Party House.

THE STATE tourney has been set for Feb. 17-18 at St. John Arena — three full weeks prior to its normal mid-March scheduling.

The '66-'67 season thus will open with practice on Nov. 1, regular season on Nov. 28 with Sectionals planned for Feb. 3-4 and District meets set for Feb. 10-11.

League Meets (City, Metropolitan, Mid-Eight and Catholic) will be on Jan. 27-28.

"COACHES are really howling in the northern part of the state," one local mentor remarked. "They draw very well and like a dual meet season. The shorter season will cut down on weekend meets when they can pack their gymnasiums full."

The coaches were told by the OHSAA that basketball, perennial "breadwinner" of high school athletic programs, had to be given the first consideration in statewide scheduling.

OSU mat coach Casey Fredericks presented his annual coaches' trophy to East's Chuck Deyo, mentor of the '66 District championship squad.

Other newly-elected officers included: Brookhaven's Gary Allen, first vice-president; P-V's Mowery, second vice-president; Westerville's Chuck Burner, secretary-treasurer and West's John Butler, historian.

Fredericks announced that the state wrestling clinic would be held Nov. 12 and that he would conduct another program for 10 evenings in July (7 to 8 p.m.) at Whetstone.

MAT NOTES — Dick Fryman's Arlington Bears will play host to the annual Top Eight tourney next season.

Only new mat tourney planned for the '66-'67 season will come off at Groveport when Pete Nix hosts an eight-team tourney.

Busiest mentors at the scheduling session last week were Groveport's Nix, Hartley's Jim Kennedy and Watterson's Dick Bliss. All three completed their upcoming skeds.

GAHANNA will join the ever-increasing number of Central Ohio schools adopting wrestling next next season.

Casey Fredericks' guest at the banquet-meeting was Dave Reinbolt, OSU's NCAA champ at 167 last season.

Reinbolt, seated immediately to our right, paced the speakers' table in all eating departments, commenting, "I never have any weight problems."

THE COWCA was formed in 1958 and consisted of 12 schools which sent two boys to the state tourney. The association now contains 38 schools which sent 22 boys to the state tourney last month.

Only remaining charter members of the association still coaching wrestling are P-V's Mowery, West's Butler and Hilliard's Tom Lamb.

Area Athletes Bucking For Starting Nods At Capital

Area athletes are generously sprinkled on sports rosters at Capital University this spring.

The Crusaders' '66 cinder season gets under way this afternoon at Kenyon while baseball, golf and tennis campaigns began last week.

SOME OF track coach Jack Landrum's top cindermen include: Bob Lewis (Eastmoor), Cap record holder in the mile, two mile and four mile, Bill Johnson (Central, weights), Bob Peck (Arlington, middle distances), Rick Mettle (Walnut Ridge, middle distances), Wendell Bond (Canal Winchester, middle distances), pole vaulter Dick Lewis and high and broad jumpers Dave Shultz, and Jim Doughty, the latter a Cap record holder in the high jump (6' 5¼").

Other Spectator-area athletes bucking for a starting spot are soph Bob Neely (catcher from Pleasant View), frosh Bob Klise (outfielder from Hilliard) and frosh Bryan Campbell (infielder from Carroll).

JUNIOR Dean Ishida (Eastmoor) is captaining the golf team this spring.

TAX CHANGE

Under the Tax Adjustment Act of 1966, a new method of withholding Federal Income tax from wages becomes effective May 1. The present flat 14 percent withholding rate is superseded by graduated rates ranging from 14 percent to 30 percent in order to more closely approximate the actual year-end tax liability.

New "Power-Vac" From Bogens Gives Gale-Force Furnace Cleaning

Arthur D. Bogen, general manager of Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, announced today the arrival of their brand new furnace cleaner — Power-Vac.

"In 45 years we have seen and tested many furnace cleaners," Mr. Bogen said. "But this is the first one we believe in; the one we have approved! This cleaner is definitely superior, and never before have we seen anything so efficient, economical and powerful as Power-Vac!"

Mr. Bogen continued, "Power-Vac, for the first time, cleans the entire heating system . . . cleans places never before reached, including all piping as well as the vent pipe and chimney. This machine produces a 70 mile per hour gale force cleaning power, and sucks in 12,000 cubic feet of air per minute through a line attached to the home heating system."

Mr. Bogen explained that the main spreader of dirt in the home is the furnace. He pointed out the fact that the average furnace works 8 months out of the year. For greater heating efficiency, as well as a cleaner home, every furnace, unless it has an electronic air filter, should be cleaned thoroughly once a year. He said Power-Vac challenges embedded dirt, dust, pollen and air pollution in the home. This is the very first really complete furnace cleaner that actually makes Spring cleaning worth while, he added.

"The best time to have your furnace cleaned is now, after the long, hard heating season," said Mr. Bogen, "and right before Spring house cleaning. We're giving a special introductory offer — the complete cleaning of your entire heating system, only $22.50. A complete furnace tune-up is only $11.50!. Now, customers may obtain both these services . . . a $34.00 value . . . for only $29.50. A saving of $4.50. We believe in this furnace cleaner and we want as many people to take advantage of this offer as possible! And, it's good to remember that the cleaning and tune-up are available separately if only one is needed."

Call CA. 8-6543 now and arrange for an appointment to the famous Bogen Power-Vac. have your furnace cleaned by Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, Central Ohio's most reliable total comfort specialists, are located at 490 North High Street.

SPECIAL ELECTION ISSUE:

VOTE FOR THE EASTERN COUNTY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

Vote in favor of the Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School levy May 3.

Condemning a school system's operation and then defeating it at the polls doesn't make sense. Franklin County educators KNOW that vocational training is important. If you don't then review the record:

• 80 per cent of our teen-agers are now taking college prep courses and only seven per cent of the workers in this state are in a career requiring a BA degree.

• 14 out of every 100 students entering the first grade will ever complete four years of college.

• Surveys in this county show that 50 per cent of all high school juniors and seniors are desirous of vocational training.

AN EDITORIAL

• A joint vocational effort costs a mere 10-cents on the dollar compared with much higher costs if the districts try to provide vocational training separately.

The Spectator is earnestly endorsing the Eastern Franklin County Vocational School. This newspaper knows the success of such a project in the Penta-County School System near Toledo, O.

This newspaper knows the work of competent educational leaders in this county who are striving to provide adequate vocational training for thousands of high school students.

It's work that must not go down the drain because of selfish tax interests. It's work that is as valuable as the future of this country.

More important, it's work that will mean the difference between a worthwhile life for your child — or a neighbor's child — who could spend that life in a welfare line.

Support the Eastern Franklin County Vocational School levy. Make an investment.

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Vol. XII, No. 6—Total No. 578 — Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, April 27, 1966 — Second Class Postage Paid at Columbus, Ohio — 10 Cents

IN THE NEWS THIS WEEK...

From Spectator Area News Sources

C Of C Says 'Yes'

The Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce has come through with its endorsement for the proposed Eastland Vocational School. This endorsement was withheld when sought before election last fall, possibly because of pressures exerted by the City of Columbus and Columbus City Schools who were accused by a jealous attitude toward improved facilities in the county system. In the resolution unanimously adopted by the Chamber's executive committee, widespread recognition was noted of the need "to provide salable skills for the thousands of young people who do not continue into colleges and universities." Gov. James Rhodes gave his stamp of approval earlier this month to the school which will serve the Whitehall, Reynoldsburg, Jefferson, Madison and Canal Winchester School districts.

Go Home, Rover

Spring may well mean "dimpled rain drops and wild flowers" to some, but to Ronald Perry, Obetz mayor, its connotation is far less poetic. Instead of "daffodils" he is plagued by the thought of dozens of dogs suddenly gone "daffy" with spring fever. Everyone is complaining of the pooches running loose (each with a devil-may-care attitude about gardens) and Perry is determined these canine trespassers are going to learn the meaning of "Home, Sweet Home." Owners who fail to hit their pets with a 24-hour curfew are going to learn the hard way that the local ordinance prohibiting pets from being footloose and fancy free has a clause that sharpens its teeth — that of a stiff fine.

Help Solve The Need

In an open letter to area residents, members of the Canal Winchester Board of Education urge support for the Joint-Vocational School bond issue and operating levy Tuesday. Signed by Boardmen Dr. J. G. Busby, Virgil Harrison, Robert High, Robert Rager and Robert Wood, the letter recognizes the need to provide students with the "vitally needed opportunities to obtain the skills necessary to compete successfully in the world of work," and states the proposed school will solve this need. The Board also asks that support be pledged to the bond issue for elementary classrooms that will appear on the November ballot.

Carnival Coming Up

A street carnival which will open next Wednesday and continue through Sunday, May 8, is the latest money raising project of the Obetz Recreation committee. Details of the fair which will be set up in a downtown parking lot off Groveport-pk will be leased next week. Virgil Peters reports that the $79.50 spent at the Groveport Businessmen's auction recently for playground equipment for the two parks in Obetz has depleted the committee's funds and a benefit dance is also in the offing. The committee is currently setting up the three merry-go-rounds, two swing sets, the sliding board, sand box, picnic tables, concession table and chairs and pop cooler that were purchased.

Congratulations, Jim

Entering Princeton is rapidly becoming a family tradition for the sons of the William Woodward family of Canal Winchester. Jim, now a C-W senior, has been granted a scholarship and admission to the class of 1970. His brothers Bill and Dick are respectively a senior and junior at the Ivy League university. A varsity football player, Jim is president of the Varsity W Club, on the track team, a member of National Honor Society, and serves on Student Council. College plans of the fourth boy of the family, Tom, are a little vague at this point. You see, he's still a high school sophomore.

Contest Deadline Near

Time waits for no man — or Spectator carrier. That's our subtle way to remind Spectator carriers that the May 15 deadline is drawing near in the "Take Your Dad to the Ball Game" subscription contest. Remember, five new, paid-in-advance subscriptions earn one ticket (plus meal and transportation) to the Cincinnati-New York doubleheader on Father's Day. Ten new subscriptions allow carriers to bring along Dad.

THEY LEFT THE TOWNSHIP

LAST WEEKEND four girls from the Hamilton Township High School chapter of FHA were off to join delegates from all over Ohio for the State Convention at Vets' Memorial held Friday and Saturday. From the left are Karen Shaw who will receive the State Homemaker degree, Diana Robey and Darlene Rager who are attending as voting delegates and Carol Ross who will receive the award of merit for FHA planning of the year.

Groveport Eyes Water Extension

If Jim Young still wants municipal water at his Big City Garden Center on Hamilton-rd, it appears he will get it.

But it's going to cost him plenty to have his way (and his water).

Apparently Young was on firm legal grounds when he appeared before village council several weeks ago, asking extension to his property of the city water lines which now stop south of the water plant.

At that time his contention the cost of running the lines past the waterworks was a village responsibility proved hard for council to swallow.

However, at this week's meeting proceedings indicated Groveport cannot and will not try to deny him water service — but council intends to call the shots (size of pipe, etc.) and estimates of the proportionate share of the improvement may dampen his enthusiasm for the project.

If the lines are laid, it will be good news to land owners to the north, as the 1170-foot extension will represent a giant step in bringing water closer to their own properties.

With a vigor seldom shown in recent years by the street committee, Roger Higgins, its new chairman, presented 13 items to council and got immediate action on most of the recommendations.

Especially significant was the agreement to hire a consulting engineer to chart the expenditure of the $40,000 available this summer for street repairs.

The tab for survey, preparation of specifications and supervision of the work is expected to be about five percent of the contract, but

Madison Classroom Shortage Critical

Few people in Madison Local School District have ever counted a million dollars.

But the residents of Madison Local School District know it's a lot of money — and know what it will buy.

And if the $1,180,000 building bond issue on the ballot Tuesday gets the green light, the community will soon be able to count what their money can buy in terms of school facilities.

There will be 28 new elementary classrooms, 16 at the Dunloe-rd site in Blacklick Estates and at the Herderick site another 12 that will serve the children living in Edgewater Park, Asbury Heights and Asbury Manor.

The gym and locker rooms which went out the window when bids came in high last year will be built, making it possible to offer a complete junior high program at the building now going up on Hamilton-rd.

The balance is earmarked for site acquisition.

The Herderick property already belongs to the Board of Education, but the Dunloe site, (a school reserve set aside by the developer at the request of Regional Planning) must be purchased.

Options on the 15 acres off Noe-Bixby, known as the Bowman site, and the 24.6 Ohde site on Hendron-rd expire next spring and have top priority for funding. Any dollars left over will go to buy ground for future schools.

The new classrooms can mean the end to the double sessions by the fall of 1968. (As a minimum increase of 35 percent in enrollment is predicted at Asbury by September of this year, the five classroom addition, provided by Federal money, due for May completion, can't halt the double sessions of the past two years).

With the need for new classrooms an indisputable fact, it is realized that a vote against the proposed bonds is not a vote against schools — but a vote against more taxes.

To finance the additional facilities, about 2.4 mills will be added to the tax duplicate, bringing rates back to the 1965 level. (Increased evaluation in the district brought a drop this year).

Transportation to the polls can be arranged for those in the Asbury attendance area by calling the school at TE. 7-5616. For this service which will be provided

H-T Athletes Blame Coaching Changes, Diversified Program

By The Spectator's
JACK WITTENMEIER

Last Of A Series — THE EMPTY BENCH:

"Coaching changes" and the "coaching methods" of some of the new mentors were most responsible for a dropoff in interscholastic participation this past school year at Hamilton Township according to Ranger athletes.

The Spectator chaired a round table discussion of seven H-T athletes, half of whom had continued to participate in school athletics, half of whom had neglected to report back to duty after winning varsity letters.

"Some of the coaches show little enthusiasm for the athletic program and just don't demand the respect of the athletes here," one letterman charged.

Another added that "a lot of kids didn't go out for a particular sport because they didn't like the way the coach was running the program."

The school board's decision to "open" all coaching positions last summer apparently took its biggest toll in morale of the athletes themselves.

One athlete listed H-T's vocational education program (three work programs) as a factor in lower athletic participation, adding, "you can't have successful programs in both. One will be down."

Another disagreed, commenting, "The work isn't that much of a factor. A lot of guys say that's why they aren't coming out for the team but they're just using that as an excuse."

Another athlete suggested that former letter winners not returning to the school team have been able to have their cake (getting a job) and eat it too (find athletic participation in a school intramural program or one of varied activities at Lockbourne AFB).

No athlete believed there was any deemphasis of ath-

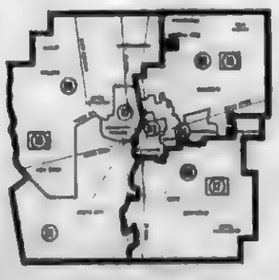
PRIMARY ELECTION '66: A PRE-POLL PREVIEW

In order to minimize confusion at the polls May 3, The Spectator's political department has localized the races in each of the newspapers' different areas. Here, then, are the issues and candidates you should concern yourself with in your immediate area.



THE ISSUES

• Proposed $1,650,000 bond issue for acquisition of real estate and construction of Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School (for voters in Canal Winchester and Madison School District only).

• Proposed 1.4-mill tax levy for operations of Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School (for voters in Canal Winchester and Madison School District only).

• Madison Local School District $1,180,000 bond issue for improvements and new construction. Majority vote necessary for passage.

• Village of Canal Winchester renewal of two mill operating levy for operations of village. Majority vote necessary for passage.

THE GADABOUT

By Priscilla Lenox
HL 4-1051

How does the idea of a nice steak dinner appeal to you? If the answer is "fine," then trek on over to the South Methodist Church, Morrill-av at Sixth-st. either from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., or 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Apr. 28.

The menu includes mashed potatoes and gravy, [illegible] beans, tossed salad, hot rolls, home-made pie and coffee or tea. Prices are $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for children. Mrs. John A. Stewart is president of the sponsoring group, the WSCS.

Congratulations to the Senior Citizens Center this week on the 10th anniversary of its founding. Many area residents have more meaningful lives because of its existence, as we learned when our "Pop" took advantage of its activities. The program includes a reception, Saturday, Apr. 30, from 2 to 5 p.m., honoring charter members. On Sunday, May 1, from 2 to 5 p.m., an open house will feature demonstrations, displays and a program.

The Voters Information Bulletin, published by the League of Women Voters of Metropolitan Columbus, is now available to the public. Single copies are available in the public libraries and the LWV will gladly mail the non-partisan bulletins. Address requests to League of Women Voters, 65 S. Fourth-st, Columbus 15, O., and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. For larger quantities, contact Mrs. D. S. Cowles, 2644 Berwyn-rd, or call 488-9494. Above all, don't forget to vote on Tuesday, May 3!

These small-fry birthdayites claim spring as their natal season: Nola Brown, Donny Cocheron, James Spencer, Vicky Baesman, Brenda Harrison, Timothy Tribbett, Steven Watts, Becky Dewees and Cynthia Myers.

The week's teenage birthday list includes Marilyn Dorn, Terri Donovan, Larry Thomas, Christy Plank, Dolores Thum and Victoria Skeen.

Voting-age birthdayites are Lucille Youngman, Irene Brandum, Betty Rothwell, Lulu Mae O'Ryan, George Maurer, Anna May White, Judy Walters, Joyce Vincent, Richard Minshall, Bob Eagon, Rick Coverdale, Clara Wilkins and Anna Windholz.

Wedding anniversaries to remember include those of Joyce and George Oakley, Sharron and James O'Harra, "Dicky" and Woody Moore, Stella and Frank Claffey, Sharron and Russell Miller and Glenna and Dale Edwards.

The Lorantfy Ladies' Aid of the Hungarian United Church of Christ, 365 Woodrow-av, is inviting the public to a Mother's Day coffee social Sunday, May 8. Homebaked pastries will be served.

Congratulations are in order for Patrick A. Fix, 1808 Lockbourne-rd, graduate student of OSU, who will be one of 21 Columbus students to be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa Monday, May 2, at the Faculty Club on the OSU campus.

Meeting here and there: Parents of Beery Junior High School students will have an opportunity to view the work being done in the elective portion of the school's schedule, when the PTA holds its final meeting of the year, Tuesday, May 3. The exhibits and demonstrations may be viewed at 7 p.m., prior to the 7:30 p.m. business meeting, when officers will be installed.

Luther Leaguers of Emmanuel Lutheran Church will visit the Wernle Children's Home in Richmond, Ind., Sunday, May 1. Chartered buses will depart at the completion of the Sunday School hour.

Olela Serdell will show slides taken aboard to South Side YMCA Mothers' Club at the Tuesday, May 3, meeting, 7:45 p.m.

The Schiller Park Golden Age Club will hold its monthly business meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday, May 3, at the Center.

Laurel Court No. 40, Order of the Amaranth, will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 2, at the K of P Hall, 697 S. High-st.

Members of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church will enjoy a Mother-Daughter tea, 3 to 5 p.m., Sunday, May 1.

Men of the Southwood Church of Christ will travel to Lancaster Friday, Apr. 29, for a 6:30 p.m. bean supper in the Fifth Avenue Church of Christ. Harvey Bream, Jr., will speak.

Members of Trudeau Guild 10 are soliciting rummage for their sale Thursday, May 5, at 627 E. Livingston-av. Chairmen to contact are Mary Eichel, HI. 3-3423, or Frances Paulus, HI. 4-6949.

Our "wedding bells" items include notice of exchange of marriage vows for Donna Zaleusky, 4350 Mound-st, and James Frey, 728 Jaeger-st, Saturday, Apr. 30, 11:30 a.m., in St. Philip the Apostle Church. Donna Harless, 521 E. Deshler-av, and S/Sgt. Thomas Powers, 1293 Lamson-av, have also chosen that date for their wedding in the Gates Street Church of Christ.

The week's ailing list includes Edward Zipf, Elsa Fischer, Briggette Wunderlich, Mrs. Fred Schueler, Elmer Stehle and Mrs. Mary Deibert.

Former Columbusites who were in town for April visits included Don Dicke and Priscilla Roth. Mrs. Roth was proudly showing her new daughter to friends and relatives, while her two-year-old son, Eric Allen, was showing what a "big boy" he is nowadays. And "Grandma" Lenox rediscovered that her "git up and go has got up and went!" For the record, Don lives in Cleveland, while the Roth clan resides in Indiana, where Rev. Roth is ministering to a church.

Committee Says Reed Can Win For Demos

The Reed for Representative Committee urged this week that Robert E. Reed be chosen Democratic candidate from the new 60th House District "to assure the district of being represented by a Democrat."

Reed, a member of the Columbus Sales Commission, lives at 1320 Brookwood-pl with his wife and daughter. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Berwick Civic Association.

Reed has been active in Democratic politics for many years and was chosen Outstanding Young Democrat of Franklin County in 1961.

STUDENTS WILL STRUT THEIR STUFF

A PANORAMIC VIEW of life at a junior high will be seen when students present "Beery On Parade" at the meeting of the newly-organized Beery PTA Tuesday, May 3, at 7:30 p.m. Shown diving over the pyramid is Robert Abbott with Doug Washington, John Karr and Robb Rover Anderson on bottom deck, Pearly Bradley and Terry Burdette in the middle and Paul Ball on top. All are members of the gymnastic class which will perform. In the second picture, Karen Haas, Terrie Logan and Linda Garvin are wearing the brown gingham dress, wine and pink polished cotton and Indian head sheath and turquoise corduroy slacks which they will model in the fashion show presented by the home economics department. Other features include conversation skits in French and Spanish, girls' dance routine, vocal and instrumental music performance and industrial arts and art exhibits and demonstrations. And, perhaps most important of all to the children who may come if accompanied by a parent, refreshments will be served by the food classes.

Murphy Claims Acton Advocates 'Sectionalism'

Joseph J. Murphy, Democratic candidate for state senate from the 17th District, charged this week that one of his opponents, J. Michael Acton of Lancaster, is advocating "sectionalism" in the upcoming primary.

Murphy cited an advertisement in a Chillicothe newspaper urging Ross County residents to vote for Acton because he is the only candidate who does not live in Columbus.

"Sectionalism has no place in American politics," Murphy said. "There is no north, south, east or west. They went out with the Civil War. We are one country — America — and one state—Ohio—and we are all Ohioans and Americans in the 17th District working for all the people.

"This attempt to turn one section of the district against the other seems completely un-American," he said.

Hale Reminds Voters Party Endorsed Him

Phale D. Hale, candidate for the Democratic nomination from the new 63rd House District, reminded district voters this week that he is endorsed by the Franklin County Democratic organization.

Candidate Acton Says Education Campaign Issue

J. Michael Acton, seeking the Democratic nomination for state senator from the new 17th District, said this week that "education of Ohio's children" will be the chief campaign issue of 1966.

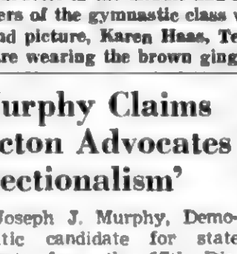
Acton, a Columbus attorney, said he would urge "that the state pay its fair share of the cost of education as required by the Ohio Constitution."

Acton said the state is now paying only 27 percent of the cost of public education and should be paying 50 percent.

"The burden of quality education is therefore necessarily shifted to the overburdened local taxpayer," Acton said.

Weiner Seeks Upgrading Of Mental Hospitals

Jerry Weiner, candidate for the Republican nomination from the new 60th House District, called this week for "a complete upgrading of state mental installations.



"It is about time we employ people in our institutions who are highly qualified, and, if necessary, pay them commensura with their ability."

Weiner said mental illness was on the rise and said, "It must be curbed and it can only be done by qualified people.

"We spend millions on absolute waste and if we are to continue to progress we must recognize the fact that there are those who cannot keep up the pace, but crack. They need help to take their place again in society," Weiner said.

Weiner also urged the establishment of a complete vocational school in every major school district in Ohio.

"All children are not capable of higher education, and we must realize this," he said.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Lest We Forget What's-His-Name

WHITE

WASHINGTON — The question commonly asked when extreme human pettiness is being met is put in five words: "How little can you get?"

Just conceivably, you can get as little as President Charles de Gaulle of France. In formal history, de Gaulle will no doubt be remembered for international policies designed to assert a French "grandeur" that is a pompous myth, a vast French power that is in fact a non-power, and a French dominance of Europe that exists only in the dreams of this embittered old man.

His official role is that of the rule-or-ruiner. But whatever else it may be called, this role cannot be termed a small one. If it is irresponsibility, it is irresponsibility upon a vast scale. De Gaulle's tireless attempts are to destroy the Western alliance because he cannot lead it; to discredit the resistance of his American ally to shooting communism in Viet Nam because Viet Nam was long since lost by France itself; to exercise an imperious dictatorship over the Common Market. All these are not only realities, but large realities, at that.

Though time may not forgive the large trespasses of large men, it will recall them with wry acknowledgement that their faults were appropriately large. But time will not give respect to a current French regime capable of such microscopically small acts as is that of Charles de Gaulle.

The smallest of them all has now come. For the first time in 20 years the de Gaulle government has refused to permit a memorial ceremony for American soldiers killed in the liberation of Paris from the Nazis.

Somehow, this is even worse than de Gaulle's cold boycott in 1964 of an American mission which went to France with hands outstretched to help commemorate the 20th anniversary of the D-Day landings — landings from which American and British troops fought forward to the rescue of all France.

It is men who make history and not history that makes men. So it may be that this miniscule example of envious ingratitude may yet condemn Charles de Gaulle in harsher human terms than will all his infinitely more important schemes to make the West pay and pay for the crime of saving a France which had supinely submitted to Nazi invasion.

From across the years, thousands here and in England will remember this spring — on June 6, to be precise — all those other thousands who also landed from bobbing little boats and still lie upon the beaches or inland in the harsh hedgerow country. It would be right and good, all international politics aside, if these memories of destiny and death could also be memories of comradeship in the long, lost yesterdays.

But who now, knowing the full smallness of de Gaulle France, can have memories which are altogether clean, and free of this little, little thing he has thrust among them? — Copyright, 1966—by United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Charge! With Bold Caution

GOLDWATER

"The weight of the attack of the B-52s is almost beyond comprehension."

This statement might seem excessive to American laymen, but not to military men who watched the action on Mar. 27 when 100,000 pounds of explosives were dropped by B-52s on the thick mangrove swamps of Viet Nam in support of a Marine offensive.

Observers who watched this and subsequent raids which originated in Guam describe them variously as "awesome" and "devastating."

The first quoted statement in this column is especially important in light of current Defense Department policies.

It is not mine, although I strongly advocate the manned bomber and greatly admire the B-52. Nor does it belong to Gen. Curtis LeMay, former Air Force Chief of Staff, who more than any other man is responsible for the use of our B-52 fleet in Viet Nam.

The glowing tribute came from Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, the same McNamara who has decided to do away with the B-52 and refuses to give the go-ahead for the construction of a more advanced manned bomber to replace it.

McNamara apparently was carried away in his discussion of the B-52 during hearings before the Senate Armed Services Committee. When he described the plane's performance in Asia as "almost beyond comprehension," committee chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) interrupted:

"After that very eloquent defense of the B-52, Mr. Secretary, are you ready to change your mind about phasing them out?"

"No, Sir," he shot back. "I think that we should proceed just as we have proposed."

Viet Nam is providing dramatic evidence that we cannot rest our entire defense structure on ICBMs and guided missiles. But apparently it is not yet sufficient to prompt the self-confident McNamara to admit to a tactical error of great and fundamental importance.

I wish I could believe that personal considerations play no part in a decision of such vital importance to our future defense. But this becomes difficult in the light of exchanges like the one between McNamara and Sen. Russell.

McNamara is not one to question his own judgment. Nor is he inclined to admit that he might have made a mistake or two in the many thousands of decisions he has handed down as Secretary of Defense.

Only once in my memory has he made such an admission, and when he did it caused headlines. "McNamara Admits Error" bannered the Washington Evening Star.

The error, however, was so obvious on its face that not even McNamara could dream up a chart to refute it. It involved his decision to cut back the military helicopter program in 1965, thereby creating a serious shortage in Viet Nam.

"It was an error," McNamara told the Russell committee. "I made a mistake." — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

Parkway Is MUST

The Nature lovers of the Columbus Area must surely have appreciated the artistic picture which was so prominently displayed on the front page of the Columbus morning newspaper last week. They should indeed be grateful because only a very privileged few (such as news cameramen, developers, landowners, etc.) have ever had an opportunity to see this bit of unmolested natural beauty . . . even though it is near a designated scenic highway and will remain undisturbed by the proposed parkway construction.

The proposed parkway extends from Goodale-bl to I-270—The Outerbelt. The beautiful river and the scenic highway north of I-270 will not be disturbed by the proposed parkway. However, "No Trespassing" signs currently barricade most such areas from public enjoyment, awaiting the most profitable future development.

Local motorists are fully aware of the PRESENT need for an additional traffic artery connecting the downtown area of Columbus with the heavily populated area to the North. The costly congestion that motorists must tolerate every morning and evening on the presently overloaded Olentangy River-rd as well as the North Freeway is convincing evidence that the present critical need for an additional traffic facility is north and would not be satisfied by the construction of a northwest artery.

It has been correctly stated that ". . . we already have Routes 23 and I-71." But it is incorrect to say "Running a freeway up the Olentangy Valley would add a third northern route without giving access to the northwest." Remember — the project under discussion connects the downtown area with the outer belt to the north. There is one existing freeway serving this important traffic band. However, north of the Outerbelt Route 23 is a four lane divided highway that has ample capacity for present and future traffic requirements.

Route 23 for several years has been under development as a major thoroughfare. The overall route improvement is nearing completion and will adequately provide for Toledo-Detroit traffic through Delaware, Marion and Upper Sandusky to connect with I-75 at Findlay. Northwest is the wrong direction.

The rapidly developing northwestern area has not been overlooked in the community planning. Development of Arterial routes such as Bethel and Fishingerds connecting with the west leg of the Outerbelt and the proposed Olentangy Parkway will adequately provide for the future development of this important area.

Moving the long planned Olentangy Parkway to the northwest will ignore an urgent present need and will surely stiffle the progress of our growing community. The existing congestion will be greatly increased with the completion of the Anheuser-Busch Development. Not many more vehicles can be crammed into I-71 during the morning and evening peak traffic flows. The capacity of any route will in fact be the maximum number of vehicles that will travel that route. The malignant traffic congestion that must surely follow such ill-advised delays in needed expressway construction will choke the extraordinary progress that this community tends to take gor granted.

Fortunately, it is now not necessary to forfeit natural beauty to provide the essential expressways. Just last year Mrs. Lyndon Johnson effectively sponsored (and Congress approved) a provision in the Highway Act of 1965 to preserve and enhance the potential beauty of areas affected by Highway Construction.

Notwithstanding the several misleading statements that have been made — the Proposed Olentangy project is eligible for the special beautification treatment under this new law.

Depriving the community of the urgently needed expressway will NOT insure the preservation of natural beauty along the river.

To support the project will make possible a well planned, serviceable and beautiful traffic artery which will not destroy but will enhance the natural beauty and place it on display for the daily enjoyment of thousands of motorists.

Don't be misled by those who would use "esthetics" as an emotional front for narrow, selfish interests.

Vote FOR the ordinance which will speed relief for the already critical traffic needs of Columbus and its suburbs.

Olentangy River Valley: Save It For Whom?

Letters To The Editor

Transportation Is Necessity

To The Spectator:

In May Columbus voters will have an opportunity to decide the fate of the proposed Olentangy Parkway.

Two independent consulting engineering firms, the City Department of Engineering, the Ohio Department of Highways, and the Bureau of Public Roads have studied and approved the proposed Parkway location. Studies made by engineers of these organizations included the following: (1) the need for a new highway to serve present and future traffic, (2) the type of highway best suited to serve traffic, (3) the relative traffic service, cost, property damage, and feasibility of all practical solutions to the highway problems involved, and (4) the integration of the proposed project with both present and proposed streets and freeways.

In making a decision for or against the proposed Olentangy Parkway, it is suggested that the voter should completely ignore all aspects of the problem involving highway and traffic engineering. These problems have been thoroughly studied by competent engineers. The solution which has been recommended is qualified only by the present state of the science of highway and traffic engineering.

If we eliminate engineering decisions, the voter is left with three types of problems to consider: (1) esthetic problems, (2) financial problems, and (3) self-interest problems.

Most of the esthetic virtues a parkway may have result from its suitability to the purpose and topography for which it is intended.

A parkway must serve the function of safely moving large volumes of high speed traffic. It cannot be a tree-lined boulevard. Trees within a right of way, except in protected locations, are disastrous to highway safety.

Many voters are worried that a parkway will destroy the scenic Olentangy River valley. Whether a parkway is, or is not built, it is a certainty that future development along the valley will change it.

Those with a sincere desire to preserve the beauty of the Olentangy River valley should unite in a demand that the City acquire suitable lands along the river to preserve and enhance its scenic value.

The wisdom of supporting public works depends on the value of the projects to the community. It is not an exaggeration to say that our present economic system would collapse without modern means of transportation. Rapid transportation has become a necessity, not a luxury.

The growth of a city is inseparable from the growth of its transportation system.

Planning and acquisition of our highway systems must keep pace with traffic growth. Delays can only result in stagnation of growth and greatly increased transportation costs.

Voters are urged to make a rational review of the problems involved before voting on the Olentangy Parkway issue.

MARQUIS CHILDS: Ol' Squeeze Play

WASHINGTON — Footsore and weary members of Congress have straggled back after the Easter recess. With the exception of Senators lucky enough to have two or four years more to go, most of their time has been spent canvassing prospects for re-election.

CHILDS

They return to a crisis in Viet Nam far more grave than when they left for home. The political upheaval jeopardizing the prosecution of the war presents the Johnson administration with some grim choices. For the first time, administration sources are saying in private that one of those choices may be a neutralist government that will negotiate an end of the war and a pull-out of American forces.

A strong conviction is that the facts have not been forthcoming from Washington. A poll ordered by NBC for a Viet Nam program reported that 59.6 per cent of those who responded said they did not believe they were getting the truth about Viet Nam. The poll was dropped for reasons of time, according to NBC executives. They pointed out that the question, "Are we getting the entire truth from the White House?" was in a sense loaded. Obviously the entire truth would include secret information that cannot be disclosed.

The striking contrast between the President of a year ago and the President today underscores the somber mood in which the legislators are returning to the capital. A year ago, buoyed by the record landslide of 1964, Johnson was at the floodtide of his capacity as a persuader and organizer. With the ebullient energy that is one phase of his temperament, he was helping to push through a great harvest of legislation. This included a broad new civil rights law and measures such as Medicare which had long been unfinished business.

Today the President concentrates almost entirely on Viet Nam. His closest advisers say he rarely thinks or talks about anything else. And as the growing pressure of the present dilemma bears down, he is increasingly irritable and impatient.

At mid-session this year the Congress has before it a comparatively small agenda. After the 1965 record smasher, Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield said he thought 1966 should be devoted to consolidation and assessment of new laws put on the statute books. While the President took issue with this statement, insisting there would be another big harvest, the current outlook does not support his optimism.

Mansfield is saying the 89th Congress will adjourn as early as August to give members time to build campaign fences. New civil rights proposals, delayed at the White House to take into account recent Supreme Court decisions, calling for Negro representation on Southern juries and protecting civil rights workers from attack, will stir debate. Truth in packaging and truth in lending are measures on which leading Senate Democrats put great stress.

But in predicting the August get-away date, Mansfield adds a great big if—if the war in Viet Nam and the political crisis it has provoked do not mean new legislation. High in the "if" category is the need for new taxes applied to personal and corporate income. The consumer price index for March to be released shortly may tell the tale.

If it reflects the relative stability of last month's wholesale prices, the administration is expected to decide that the immediate danger of inflation has abated and no tax increase will be necessary.

That would take the President off a very hot spot. The oldest political tradition is that nothing is so calculated to set the voter against the party in power as a tax increase in an election year. New taxes to support a war that has dubious support in the country would fly in the face of simple political prudence.

On the other hand, congressmen touring their home districts discovered that the resentment of organized labor toward administration guidelines which are holding down wages — and presumably also prices — has spread to the farmers. Farm spokesmen complain about a recent statement of Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman expressing satisfaction that farm prices had fallen from "cyclical high." Nothing could illustrate better the way the Administration is caught between the devil of taxes and the deep blue sea of rising prices. — Copyright 1966 by United Features.

Dr. Gumperson

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

The law of Dr. Gumperson states that vacant parking places are always on the other side of the street; that grass seed planted in rich soil, fertilized and kept moist, will refuse to grow while a few seeds will blow onto the sidewalk, find a crack and flourish.

BEARDSHEAR

More wordily stated, Gumperson's law has been codified by the magazine, "Changing Times." It states: "the contradictory of a welcome probability will assert itself whenever such an eventuality is likely to be most frustrating."

In other words, the outcome of a given desired probability will be inverse to the degree of desirability.

Note here the key word is "desirability." Without that, Dr. Gumperson's contribution might be just another fanciful dream.

But the law, like so many other scientific discoveries, has a wealth of corollaries.

For example, if desirability is the key, then the converse should also be true. The outcome of a given undesired probability will be directly proportional to the degree of indifference . . . of something.

Anyway, it works like this. Say you are an amateur gardener and your little patch of land needs water. Naturally, it is too big a chore to take a hose and water it. That would be work. So you hope for rain. That is when Gumperson's law comes into effect. Because you desire it, it will never rain.

The true thinker would remember the corollary. He would not wish it to rain. Instead, he would wash his car.

That way fate would immediately see that he was EXPECTING, yes, even desiring, clear weather, and the findings of Dr. Gumperson would dictate a cloudburst.

Very simple.

SOUTH HIGH DECA HONORS JACK ROBINSON

The students in the distributive education department of South High School presented Pat Canini, their director, 19 aspirin Sunday —one for each of those enrolled in the program initiated at South High School this year.

But the praise heaped upon the 19 as students by Canini and as employes by their bosses, made it obvious the new program has been an unqualified success.

Robert Koon, state supervisor of Distributive Education spoke at the employer-employe banquet at the NCO Club at Lockbourne AFB choosing the topic, "To Be DECA Is To Be Uncommon."

He explained that the program which is designed to develop future leaders for marketing and distribution delivers to the wholesale and retail world bodies that are not merely warm, but highly skilled, and with positive attitudes toward the field.

The highest award of the evening went to Jack Robinson whose on-the-job training is with Herbie Wolff Florists. Jack, who is president of the chapter, was named "Student of the Year."

A second significant award went to Dannie Weber as the "Most Improved Student of the Year." According to Dan Canini, at the beginning of the year Dannie was a potential dropout and completely unable to express himself well. Now, he is a young man of remarkable self - possession who brought the house down with his portrayal of a manager attempting to teach a new stock trade boy the tricks of the trade. After graduation he plans further vocational training to start him toward his goal of becoming a manager for Albers, the company with which he is currently employed.

David Carey of the South High faculty was presented with the Outstanding Service Award for his help in setting up the new program.

The efforts of Robert Taylor in selling tickets for the winter head pin tourney were recognized when he was named Salesman of the Year, and Student of the Month awards went to Diana Arnold, Cynthia Robinson, Paula Malone, Jack Robinson and Howard Henry.

The program included accordion music by Sue Dotson and several numbers by the Satellites, a rock'n roll and folk song com. .

Guests included parents and representatives of the employing companies which are, in addition to those mentioned, Planter's Peanut Shop, Schottensteins, Richman Brothers, the Chittenden Hotel, Sandy's Drive-In, Parsons-av Super Duper, Columbus Wholesale Produce, Inc., Bruning Office Equipment, J&M Cleaners, John M. Downey and F&R Lazarus Co.

THE SUMMERS WILL BE COOLER

GROUND WAS BROKEN last week for the second South Side municipal swimming pool. Located across Lockbourne from the George C. Berry Junior High, the $208,000 pool is slated to open July 3. Among the community leaders who joined city officials at the ceremony were Leo Gaffin, left, president of the Council of South Side Organizations, and Oliver Winfield, president of the Marion-Franklin Civic Association. The new Recreation Department facility around which Parks and Forestry will eventually develop a 24-acre park area, represents the fruit of the tireless efforts of both the CSSO and the M-F group to make the South Side "a better place to live."

Zauderer Says Mental Program Lacks Support

Philip Q. Zauderer, candidate for the Democratic nomination from the new 60th House District, urged this week that the state initiate a community mental health program and seek a larger share of Federal mental health funds.

"Ohio is barely keeping abreast of inflation in terms of increased appropriations for mental hygiene, and thus there are little additional funds being provided for improving the level of patient treatment," Zauderer charged.

"Although there has been a recent attempt on the part of the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction to correct present lacks, there is an insufficient amount of funds being provided."

Zauderer also urged increased governmental efficiency in spending to obtain additional funds for mental health services.

Beatty Urges Charter Change For City Council

Democratic House candidate Otto Beatty Jr., called this week for expansion of Columbus City Council to meet the rapid growth of the city.

"The philosophy behind the Supreme Court decision compelling state legislatures to re-apportion also applies to cities," the 63rd District candidate said.

"All Ohio cities should therefore elect councilmen from all areas of the city."

Beatty also called on Councilman Donald Woodland to continue his fight to bring about changes in the City Charter to provide for election of councilmen by districts.

The Community Stage

BY CLAUDIA ELKINS

Community theater provides theater-goers with good entertainment this weekend. Village Little Theatre is doing "Curious Savage." Margaret Barricklow, as Mrs. Savage, turns in a star performance as a wealthy widow who is committed to the "cloisters" by her three greedy stepchildren. Comedy lines are delivered beautifully. The play moves quickly and the final curtain comes too soon. Director Bud Lane develops a comedy with class and no gaudiness.

Several roles are outstanding: Ada Scott, Gloria Corrigan, Ralph McClure and Sharon Swintep. Performances are Thursday, Friday and Saturday at First Community Church at 8:30 p.m.

On Friday and Saturday Prairie Players will present "Mary, Mary," a comedy concerning a divorced couple in love. Through various circumstances they finally realize their mistake which involves several good scenes. Joe Spivak, as the husband, carries the play with his delivery of lines and stage presence.

Director Elizabeth Noblitt has a cast of inexperienced actors, but performs her duties as director ably. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. at Prairie Norton School.

IN & AROUND TOWN

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Physicians, Heel Thyselves . . .

Paul Harvey, the self-proclaimed "news analyst" of ABC radio, paid one of the most expensive house calls in recent memory (a reported $2500) to the Ohio convention of osteopathic physicians last week at the Neil house.

Harvey, who greets some 60-million of his "Americans" several times a day locally over WTVN radio, calls himself a news analyst. I think, rather, that he's one of the greatest showmen to ever sing over the radio waves. Period.

The doctors (of all people) should've made Harvey take a kind of "hypocritic" oath before his talk. At the Neil House, the silver tongue and golden throat spoke out against urban re-development.

Yet, on his noon broadcast from Columbus, this "news analyst" raved about our great city and of our fine re-development program.

He told how Columbus, not like most American cities, is tearing down many of its old, unsightly buildings and even invited community leaders to visit here for a lesson or two.

With a sledge-hammer in one hand and a crow-bar in the other, Paul (Page 2) Harvey marches down Main-st, USA, tearing at the guts of this great country and its people. He believes, he says, that the biggest threat to America is not the "lousy communists," but the "lazy American."

He calls earth a "dis-orderly planet" with "too much dirt and problems."

Problems? Sure, we've got 'em. But no problem has ever been solved with a negative approach or by constantly criticizing a situation.

Paul Harvey seems to have lost faith in America and her people. How can he ever hope for a "good day?"

You Gotta Have Heart . . .

One of the most unusual and finest lounge acts in the city is currently entertainment at Stouffer's Top-of-the-Center, 100 E. Broad-st. Singer Kristen Kienzle and classic guitarist John McCormick present a wide variety of music including opera melodies, show tunes, folk music, old standards and popular songs. The duo is artistic, but not high brow. It's commercial enough to please all. Most pleasing is the fact that these two people, through their music, express strong feelings and vitality in their songs. You don't find these qualities in most of the lounge acts that come down the pike.

IPC Directors Set

Paul Morris and Bob Stegmiller have been chosen as directors for Independent Players Club's spring production of "The Most Happy Fella."

The club, which is in its 44th year, will present the Frank Loesser's award winning musical at Veterans Memorial, Apr. 29 and 30.

IPC is a non-profit organization composed of Columbus area people interested in the theatre. The club is without sponsorship, and depends entirely on box office support.

GENE GETS A HUG FROM SABRINA
In "Loving Couch" at Hartman

Gene Shane In Comedy

Gene Shane, well known to to television audiences for his numerous appearances on "The Munsters," "Naked City," "Combat" and "General Hospital," is seen in the stage comedy, "The Loving Couch," at the Hartman Theatre this week, with Virginia Mayo and Sabrina in the star roles.

Shane has also played numerous off-Broadway roles and has starred in one film to date, "The Gold Life," for Embassy Films. He is now signed with MGM and this film studio plans some important parts for him in their fall production schedule.

During the limited engagement of "The Loving Couch," performances will be presented evenings only with two shows on Friday and Saturday — 7 and 9:45 p.m. Curtain for the other evenings is 8:30.

Concert May 1

The Women's Music Club is presenting a concert of French music by its artist members.

It will be given at Battelle Memorial Auditorium Sunday afternoon, May 1, at 3:30 p.m.

This is being given as part of the National Music Week activities.

'Hayride' Market Widening

"Hayride," the country-western variety color program produced by Avco Broadcasting Corporation in Cincinnati and syndicated by ABC Films, has been purchased in 13 markets since its availability was announced just prior to the NAB Convention in Chicago.

ABC Films president, Hal Golden and Avco Broadcasting president, John T. Murphy, made the announcement in a meeting following the NAB convention.

"The country and western trend is here to stay," Mr. Golden said, "and 'Hayride' has been broadcasting from stations coast to coast."

"Hayride" is being offered in hour and half-hour formats. To date 11 of the 13 markets will be telecasting the full hour version.

THREE'S A CHARM

THE NEW Jaylene Gray trio with, from left, perky Jaylene, dapper Jeff Morgen and sultry Sheri Stevens, opened an extended engagement at the popular Everglades Restaurant, 4250 W. Broad-st. The trio plays for your dancing and listening pleasure nightly, Monday through Saturday.

Ohio State Medics To Have 'Nite Out'

More than 150 students, faculty and staff of the Ohio State University Medical Center will be in the cast of the annual "Nite Out" variety show to be given at 8 p.m. Apr. 29 and 30 at Mershon Auditorium.

Theme for the production is "Nite Out Joins the Great Society." John Camp, a third-year dental student from Columbus, is director of the show.

Lamar Keiser, a third-year dental student from Sidney, O., is musical director for the production which is expected to attract 4000 guests.

Show time will be 8 p.m. both nights. All seats are reserved, with tickets available at Mershon Auditorium ticket office. Telephone reservations will be accepted at 293-2354.

VISTA To Canvass Area For Volunteers

Two representatives of Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) will conduct a two day, community wide recruiting drive in Columbus for volunteers to serve in the War on Poverty May 3-4.

Headquarters for the drive will be Room 2, YWCA, 65 S. Fourth-st.

"We are interested in people of all ages. Eighteen is the minimum age, but we are particularly interested in older people and retirees," said Dorothy Van Ess, who is heading up the VISTA recruitment drive.

VISTA Volunteers serve for one year living and working with the poor. They receive living expenses, medical coverage, plus $50 a month which is banked for them until they complete their year of service.

The VISTA representatives will staff the Columbus recruiting center from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day. The center's telephone number is 221-5383.

The VISTA movie "Small Miracles" will be shown at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Public is welcome.

CINDA SUE SMITH, Reynoldsburg High senior and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gareth Smith, Rt. 3, Pataskala, was author of the name for the proposed Eastern Franklin County Vocational School. Her entry "Eastland Vocational," selected by the board, won her a $50 bond, presented Friday by James E. Dougan, assistant superintendent of Vocational Education at OSU. Cinda is a distributive education student and plans to enter the field of cosmetology.

Carroll Youth Winner

Robert Ray Jester of Carroll will be among the Ohio teenagers honored during a luncheon at the Neil House Saturday, Apr. 30. A part of the Ohio Elks Association annual convention, the noon event kicks off Elks National Youth Week. Jester, sponsored by the Lancaster Lodge, received a $300 cash grant as second place winner in the boys' division of the Elks' Youth Leadership Contest. Seven scholarships of $600 each will also be awarded to winners of the Most Valuable Student Contest, at the luncheon.

Merit Rewarded

The meritorious achievement of A1/c David Litchard, 334 Long-st, Ashville, as a combat crew member in aerial flight over Southeast Asia during a period of ten months ending last year has been rewarded with four Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal. Litchard, 25, who is attached to the 301st Air Refueling wing at Lockbourne AFB, is married and he and his wife, Agnes, have a four-year-old daughter, Maureen.

Kallies' Funeral Held

Service was held Sunday afternoon for Steve Kallies, 18-year-old graduate of Groveport-Madison who died in a truck-auto crash last week at the intersection of Rt. 665 and Saltzgaber-rd. Interment was at Glenrest Cemetery. Steve, who is survived by his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Kallies of Hendron-rd and four younger brothers and sisters was driving a Johnson Disposal Service truck in the employment of his father when the accident occurred. The young man was well-known in the community as radio dispatcher for the Madison Township Fire Department, a Civil Defense worker, an organizer of a folk singing group and a former reporter for the Canal Winchester Times.

Deaf Convention Set

The Parents' Club of the Columbus day classes for the deaf and hard-of-hearing will hold its seventh annual convention on the education of deaf children Saturday, May 7, at 9 a.m. in Brookhaven High School. Dr. Richard E. Thompson clinical phychologist at the Beverly, Mass., School for the Deaf, is principal speaker. Registration and advanced luncheon reservations can be made by contacting Mrs. John Baleski, 224 Brookhaven-dr, Gahanna.

Vote Deadlines Near

Secretary of State Ted W. Brown reminds voters that Thursday at 4 p.m. is the deadline for persons, who will be out of the county on election day, to vote in person at the Board of Elections. Friday at noon is the deadline for returning civilian absentee, disabled and sick voter ballots back to the county Board of Elections. Members of the armed services have until noon on election day, next Tuesday, to have their ballots in the hands of the board.

Goldman Seeks Demo Nod For Supreme Court

Ben J. Goldman of Springfield, a common pleas court judge in Clark County, is seeking the Democratic nomination for judge of the Ohio Supreme Court in Tuesday's primary.

Goldman, 61, has the endorsement of several Ohio newspapers and the Citizens League of Greater Cleveland in his campaign for the nomination.

A veteran jurist, Goldman says, "I like to think that my service on the bench has been marked by compassion and understanding.

"I have a high regard and respect for the dignity of others, and I hope my service on the bench has always reflected this," he says.

BOTH SIDES: Development Committee Reaffirms Pledge; Save The Scenic Group To Unveil Plan

In This Corner:

The Steering Committee of the Development Committee for Greater Columbus has reaffirmed its support for Plan 2B, the approved route of the Olentangy Parkway.

The Steering Committee is the policy-making body of the Development Committee. Its action followed action last week by the Transportation Committee of the Development Committee when it also reaffirmed its support of the approved route.

The question of the alignment of the Olentangy Parkway will be on the ballot of the May 3 primary election. It will appear as Ordinance 144-66. The Steering Committee, in its action Wednesday, urged voters all over the city to go to the polls and vote FOR the ordinance.

After a thorough discussion of the controversial Parkway plan, the Steering Committee voted to endorse the approved route for several reasons.

They are:

• The approved route is the result of seven years of work and study. It has the approval of city, state and federal planners and engineers. They agree unanimously that the approved route for the Parkway offers the best possible service to the public for the least amount of tax money.

• Construction of the Parkway without delay will relieve pressure on the already overcrowded North Freeway. It will afford a safe, limited access, high speed route from the downtown area to the north and northwest.

• If the voters of the city of Columbus reject the approved route in the election it will mean another long delay in a vitally-needed facility that has already been delay unnecessarily for several years.

• Construction of the Olentangy Parkway will open up an entirely new area for development as public parks and recreation areas. Most of the property between the west bank of the Olentangy River and the approved route of the Parkway now is privately owned. The public now cannot enjoy or, in most cases, even see the river without trespassing on private property.

• Both city and state officials have pledged that the land between the river and the approved route of the Parkway will be developed as public parks and recreation areas.

The Steering Committee noted that the city has not kept pace with national standards in the development of parks and recreation areas. The committee also noted that there is a distinct possibility that some of the land between the river and the road will be developed commercially if the Parkway is not built along the approved route. This would mean the loss of much land ideally suited for use as public parks.

The committee also noted that the issue as it appears on the ballot will not mention the Olentangy Parkway by name. It will include the ordinance number — 144-66 and it will mention State Rt. 315.

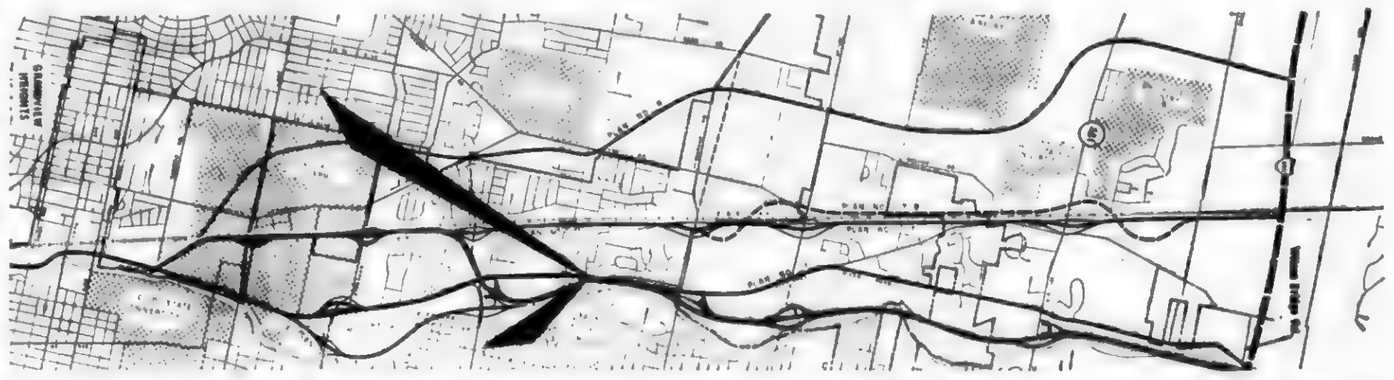
The commitee considers approval of the ordinance by the voters as a vital step in the process of obtaining better, safer, more economical transportation and more adequate recreational facilities for the benefit of every member of the community.

In That Corner:

City Service Director Warren Cremean is organizing a "super lobby" of major road-building interests in his endeavor to sell the Olentangy Parkway to Columbus voters, Charles A. Jones, chairman of the Save the Scenic Valley Committee, charged today.

Jones' group is sponsoring a citywide referendum on May 3 to determine if the Olentangy River should be moved to make way for the expressway.

"With the help of executives of the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday, Mr. Cremean assembled a super-lobby of highwaymen and people they hope will help them," Mr. Jones said. "The principal topic at this meeting was how to add frills to Mr. Cremean's widely-publicized Parkway Plan to make it more palatable to the public. Colorful drawings and descriptions of this so-called plan are now being prepared and will soon be unveiled with much fanfare.



"However, it was admitted before and during the meeting that no funds are on hand for this parkway project and none have been promised. It developed that any plans considered were merely in embryo form and that desperate efforts would have to be made to make them appear more complete before a press conference is called.

"When the plan discussed Tuesday is released, the public will agree that highway egnineers should leave park planning to someone else.

"The Tuesday gathering was announced as a meeting of the Chamber's Highway Committee but only a handful of committee members were invited. Also present were two former state highway directors, a number of representatives of road-building interests including the Portland Cement Association, Werner Nethero of the Home Owners for the Freeway Committee and leaders of the Allied Conservation Clubs of Franklin County.

"In addition to polishing up the parkway plan, the group discussed activities of the Homeowners' organization and a huge direct-mail campaign to the voters. A spokesman for the Allied Conservation Club was urged to turn over his group's mailing list. Naturally, he refused. On this point, the Save the Scenic Valley Committee has never sought or been offered the Allied Conservation list. In fact, we do not have the funds to finance such a mailing even if it were proper.

"After learning details of the meeting from those present, we regret we were not invited. We could have contributed considerable data on the differences between the natural, unspoiled recreation land now found along the Olentangy River and the man-built parkway discussed at the meeting."

Hookey Players Menaced By 'The Visiting Teacher'

By The Spectator's MARY BILDERBACK

It's almost impossible for a student to skip school these days and get away with it.

Even with spring fever in the air, listless students who find it difficult to concentrate in the warm classroom better think twice about playing hooky.

Truancy officers have been replaced by an even more capable group . . . visiting teachers.

They are a special breed of instructors who are skilled in psychology and sociology. Their aim is not only to see that a truant child attends school regularly, but to discover why he cut classes in the first place. Their next step is helping the child.

Visiting teachers have been a fairly new concept in education. The program was established by the Columbus School Board and has been in operation for ten years. Presently there are 35 visiting teachers working throughout the Columbus area.

Each has several schools. They divide their time. A morning is spent at one school, the afternoon at another.

"Actually we serve as a liaison between the home and school," said Al Crawford, former Ohio State football player. Crawford has been a visiting teacher for four years.

"If a child has a problem with school attendance we discuss the situation with the student and his parents. Then we go through various channels accessible to us and try to help the child," said Crawford. "This usually involves setting up some sort of program. Whether it is just some extra help in school work from the parents during the evening or getting the child to attend a Central Community House where special study tables are set up."

If a child hasn't the shoes or clothing to wear to school the visiting teacher will make provisions for him through a Welfare Agency or the Salvation Army.

Usually it is the 13 to 17 year-old age group which is most guilty of truancy. These are the students who are mainly behind their classmates or who have failed.

"Most of the parents have never gotten through high school," said Crawford. "And motivation in the home is practically non-existent."

Crawford also said that one can talk until one is blue in the face to a student who doesn't wish to finish school and he still won't change his mind.

What sort of jobs do they have to look forward to? "Low salary positions such as car-hops and gas station attendants," said Crawford.

"My own personal view is that we should try to help the child get one or two grades further than his parents. Often this is a struggle."

Many of the homes are unclean, there are no books and the child is underfed. "Obviously this makes for poor study conditions," he said. "One girl was frail and undernourished. She had been absent from school a great deal. We placed her in a hospital where it was discovered she was severely anemic. After proper medication, she began to recover and we set up a study program for her. Last time I saw her she was preparing to graduate."

Where do students go when they cut classes? "Some walk the streets or go to a classmate's home. Others will hunt or fish," said Crawford.

"A boy once told me he was going to have a surprise for me. He hadn't attended classes for a day or so. Shortly he came strolling in with a pheasant for me."

If a child is absent from school, the home is contacted immediately, either by telephone or a visit.

A child must have a written excuse from his parents to be admitted to school again. Visiting teachers make it difficult for those who are experts at forging their parent's signature on excuses. Files are kept with the parent's signature contained in them. Comparison is relatively simple.

According to the Board of Education, absences are much higher during the mid-winter than the warm spring months.

Beulah Park Memorial Handicap Purse Raised

Off to a good start on its 25-day spring meeting, Beulah Park is looking forward to its top attractions. Chief of these is the seventh running of the Robert J. Dienst Memorial Handicap which is scheduled for May 7.

Nominations for the $7,000 added race at a mile and a sixteenth close this week and weights will be announced five days prior to the event. Last year's Dienst Memorial was won by Claude Bachelor's Deacon David.

Because business has been good, the minimum purse for the meeting has been raised from $1,200 to $1,300.

One of the side features of the meeting is a campaign by Jockey Paul A. Ward to reach 500 victories at Beulah before the spring meeting ends. As the session started, Ward had 477 winners and he added to this total right from the start. Indications have it that he is very likely to reach his goal before closing day, May 14.

Closing day will bring a renewal of the Beulah Park Special at six furlongs. This race was put on a few years back to give the $1,500 platers on the grounds a chance to run for important money. It is run at the six furlong distance in the spring and at a mile and a sixteenth in the fall.

LET'S KNIT
A RAINDROP JACKET

By The Spectator's URSULA duBOIS

Some time ago I was intrigued by the graceful flowing pattern formed by raindrops on a window pane. This inspired the design of this one - needle jacket No. 117 with raindrop panels.

URSULA

The entire sweater is knitted from the neck down on one needle which eliminates practically all finishing. The purl side is the outside of the garment to show off the raindrop pattern to its best advantage.

As the raindrop pattern (which is, by the way, extremely easy to do) gives such a feminine appearance to a garment, I also designed the cap sleeves shell No. 115 to accompany the sweater in case you wish to make a sweater and shell outfit.

And for the knitters who wish to make a complete suit ensemble, we have also straight skirt pattern No. 90 available.

Patterns No. 117, 116 and 90 are written for teens and adults in sizes 8 through 22.

If you wish to obtain patterns No. 117, 116 or 90 send 50 cents for EACH pattern in coin, check or money order to: Ursula duBois Pattern Dept., 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, O. Send 15 cents extra for first-class mail and special handling.

Camp St. Joseph Begins To Stir As Spring Heralds Summer Fun

Written for The Spectator
By JOHN E. JONES, JR.

A colorful brochure, hawking the wares of Camp St. Joseph, run by the Catholic Diocese of Columbus, came our way one rainy day last week. Our quizzical mind questioned just what is a camp like when it isn't being used.

To assist us we called James T. Hardy, who serves as the assistant director of Camp St. Joseph.

Camp St. Joseph, which this year will emphasize adolescent camping for boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 16, is located on the banks of the Big Walnut between Shadeville and Lockbourne.

As we drove up the graveled lane, the 55 acres of the sprawling camp site met our eyes.

There were seven twin-unit cabins with 15 shutters on each cabin.

After an inspection of the cabins, we noticed the flag pole which stands some 30 feet tall. It is at the foot of this flag pole that the children gather each morning for a flag raising, the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," followed by the physical fitness routines. The jets from LAFB are common sights and sounds to the campers.

Chicagami is the name given to the 75-foot square lodge which is the center of the handicrafts program, the campers' entertainment programs, and the nature museum.

Camp St. Joseph has two regulation size softball diamonds and the swimming pool is 75 by 40 feet.

In the redwood and concrete dining hall hung a certificate from the Franklin County Board of Health.

No trip to Camp St. Joseph would be complete without a visit to the chapel.

A tour of a camp when there are no children there is haunting and rewarding.

The resident camping season for boys will open Sunday, June 19, at Camp St. Joseph. Six weeks later the girls will take over for a four weeks' period. Camp St. Joseph applications are available at the Catholic Center, 80 S. Sixth-st.

Nurses' Group To Hear Dorothy Cornelius, RN

Dorothy Cornelius, R.N., executive director of Ohio Nurses' Association, will speak at the Central Ohio League for Nursing annual meeting, May 5, at 6 p.m. at the Suburban Steak House, 1130 Dublin-rd.

Miss Cornelius is the only woman appointed by President Johnson to the Federal Health Insurance Benefits Advisory Council.

Miss Cornelius was recently appointed by Gov. James A. Rhodes to serve on the Governor's Committee on the Status of Women.

Her subject will be "Hiback and I."

Election of officers will be held.

Send reservations to Barbara Weaver, treasurer, Central Ohio League for Nursing, 38 S. James-rd.

Academy Play This Weekend

The senior class of St. Joseph Academy will present the musical "Brigadoon," Friday, Apr. 29 and Sunday, May 1.

Then Saturday, Apr. 30, the junior, sophomore and freshman classes will entertain with "An Evening of Folk Music."

All performances will begin at 8 p.m. with $1 admission for any one night and $1.50 for two nights.

The male lead in "Brigadoon" will be sung by Jim Brandt a student at OSU.

IT WAS WITH DELIBERATION

TWELVE OF THE THIRTEEN Groveport Madison students appearing in the courtroom drama, "Twelve Angry Jurors," can forever boast they had the "title role" in their senior class play. Only Tom Reichelderfer, playing the guard, missed the honor. The curtain goes up at 8 p.m. Friday, Apr. 29, in the Groveport Elementary Auditorium. Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. The cast includes, from the left: front row — Debbie Casnpl, Elizabeth Stinson, Barb Stanley, Marsha Lackey and Kathy Schlaegel; back row — Jerry Moore, Jim Dill, Tom Reichelderfer, T. A. Michael, Kurt Varga, Henry Ottman, Barry Breakey and Clayton Coffey.

The German Village Renaissance they call it. To grasp our local renaissance, or rebirth, inspect Beck-st between Mohawk and Fifth-sts. Start on the northwest corner of Beck and Mohawk. A short while ago this house was a bitter sight. Its decline must have started when I was a child. For in the early 1920's this sturdy old German store supported a radio shop in front and a bootleg shop in the rear.

Some time ago its store windows were bricked in. As late as a half year ago this building was a two-family one, dilapidated, neglected, with only its beautiful doorway a hint at the possibilities within. Luckily German Village brick mason George Sheaf and his wife, Blanche, realized its potentials. They bought it and have been working like beavers on it. When finished it will be their residence. Handsome indeed. Beside it was number 184, which had been converted from a single home to a three-family slum. It is no more.

Wilburn C. Kerr and his sons are responsible for the razing of this slum and the restoration to the east. The two Deutsch doubles on Beck-st they have about finished. Although these two doll houses sit side by side, each is different in its own charming way. Like many homes down here, they are much bigger inside than the outside hints at.

Back of them on Berger-al is a huge double house. The Kerrs deserve a citation for scrapping its four-family layout and restoring it to its original two-family state. To enter is to embark upon a discovery lark. Small quaint rooms give onto spacious ones. Storage is tucked away in unexpected places. And under the eves are sizeable bedrooms. Anyone used to living in an egg crate apartment will be lost in such a charming meandering of rooms as those at 197-99 Berger-al.

Across Macon-al is Harry Royse's restored double. A pretty one indeed, its courtyard edges on Mary Jane Schilling's home. This local realtor plans to cover her insul brick with board and batten, paint her home smartly and tie it in with the improvement around her. Across Beck-st at 181 is a house with one of the finest facades in our Village. Mr. Hansford, the owner, is working steadily. He has made so many changes it is impossible to believe that the facade of this home was once vandalized by a past owner with barn red and nasty yellow paint.

So if you want to understand the German Village Renaissance, look at the properties I have described. Fifteen families were displaced to create this marvel. Untold dollars were spent. And much imagination and yearning went into this rebirth in Beck-st between Mohawk and Fifth, which is only a small example of the total German Village Renaissance.

OYC Employes To Hear Ex-Editor, Group Pioneer

Anna W. M. Wolf, research associate and pioneer of the National School Volunteer Program and the former associate editor on Child Care for the Women's Home Journal, will lead training sessions for the Ohio Youth Commission's Bureau of Juvenile Placement at Bowling Green State University and Ohio University, Athens, Apr. 26-29, it was announced by C. L. Harrison, OYC'c director of Community Services.

Anna Wolf

The full complement of 100 OYC probation officers (field counselors) will go into shirt - sleeve sessions with Mrs. Wolf, whose work with culturally deprived children has taken her to many cities with the National School Volunteer Program.

Mrs. Wolf is coming to Bowling Green, Columbus and Athens under the recent program of OYC Chairman Daniel W. Johnson to help OYC staff members in gaining a keener understanding of the youth the commission serves.

"The delinquent's classroom," stated Mrs. Wolf, "is the street and tenement, where the languages, customs, manners and interests scarcely prepare him for the society we accept and understand."

Big Brothers Need Men For South, West

Men are urgently needed from the south and western sections of Columbus and Franklin County as Big Brothers to work with fatherless boys. There are 324 boys on the waiting list at this time in these sections.

The Big Brother Association is holding a Men's Round-up Fellowship meeting May 3, at 7:30 p.m., at the center, 2104 Tuller-st.

Men interested in attending the meeting and learning more about Big Brother work are urged to come. Call reservations to the office at 294-4423.

I just called the time and temperature number in the phone book. How do they make that recording and keep it up-to-date as the times and temperatures change? — Jake Greenlee, 49 N. Virginia Lee-rd.

According to Bernie Floyd of Ohio Bell, Jake, two machines, like players, have three drums. The first drum delivers the commercial. This is constant. The second drum delivers the time. It is cycled to run accurately for 12 hours, giving the change each minute. The third drum is connected to a thermometer which is at the top of the Ohio Bell Building. Each time this thermometer records a change of one degree, the third drum is electronically changed to rotate to deliver that temperature. Incidentally, Jake, that number is called some 90,000 times a day and the machine can handle 100 calls every ten seconds.

Could you please tell me what happened to the excise tax refund on automobiles? We purchased our 1965 Chevrolet in June 1965 (in Michigan where we were residing at that time) and paid the full amount of the tax. Shortly after, the President signed the bill repealing excise taxes on automobiles. At that time General Motors announced they would refund the tax directly to the purchasers. Could you tell me what happened? — Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Sykes, 315 Sturbridge-rd.

Ed Solomon of the Internal Revenue Service told LIVE WIRE that June 22 was the crucial date. If you bought your car after this date, you are entitled to the refund. If you bought it before, you aren't. Incidentally, the effective date of purchase is determined by the time your title passes.

My son is 18. He joined the Navy and is having trouble getting car insurance for his wife here in Columbus. The government says they won't insure him until he's 25. What should he do? — Mrs. Robert Martin, Columbus.

LIVE WIRE talked with one of the city's largest insurance companies and a spokesman said he couldn't understand why your son was having trouble. Servicemen can get insurance although their rates may be considerably higher. If his wife is the principal driver of the car, there should be no problem. His suggestion is that you contact several insurance companies until you find one that offers insurance to servicemen — and that shouldn't be too hard.

Some time ago, when S. Hamilton-rd was undergoing extensive repairs, a woman in our neighborhood put up a rope and a "No Trespassing" sign. This forced the children on their way to school to walk through the muddy road, in the path of oncoming traffic. We complained to her, but to no avail. Who was right? — Interested, Whitehall.

You were, Interested, but you apparently weren't interested enough to go to the city, which would have aided your plight. Law Director James Toomey tells LIVE WIRE that no property owner owns the land all the way to the street. Even if there is no sidewalk, the city has the right to use the land where the sidewalk would go for a thoroughfare. If it happens again, notify the service department or your councilman. They will take it from there.

Spectator Fashion Editor

Sometimes the ol' mail-bag divulges some better goodies than usual. Such was the case this week when I heard from my special spy friend at Ship'n Shore . . . you know, the blouse people.

Well, it seems that some pretty sneaky things are going on there and MSSF (My Special Spy Friend) couldn't wait to tell us all the fashion secrets she has stolen. Of course you must realize this is strictly confidential . . . Don't tell a soul.

This season you're going to have plenty of smashing weapons from Ship'n Shore. Take Mother's Day for instance. There's lots of high calibre fashion ammunition for gifts . . . to mothers . . . friends . . . or yourself, if you think you deserve a treat too.

After that, summer fashions, travel fashions, fun fashions for the long summer season until at least Labor Day. To give you a clue, all of the new looks are young . . . young . . . young. But that doesn't mean they are only for sweet sixteen spies.

There are luscious looks for housewife-spies . . . schoolgirl-spies . . . career girl-spies. Everything is marvelously proportioned to give you a crisp slim kind of chic regardless of size. There are scads of whirly shift ideas that are as good on a sophisticated gal as on a teenager.

Then there are very high fashion inspirations . . . cropped to snappy new lengths and tailored in novel new ways to flatter you. Sleeves go from "no" sleeves to brief length . . . to straight-cut and flowing to long sleeves. Necklines square off or frame your face or make a point of shoulder interest with tucking and embroidery.

All of which leads to the point that you don't need a spyglass to see that some of the greatest looks for Summer '66 will be found in blouses, shirts and shifts by Ship'n Shore. That's my special spy report for today.

To start off . . . the silhouettes are definitely dashing. Fresh and cool, beautifully in tune with the busy life you're going to lead in the summer weeks ahead.

Let me tell you about a few styles you might like. Let's begin with the "Shells." The newest ones are squared off . . . high at the waistline . . . cut to make the most of the new shorter skirt lengths. They're smashing with any of the summer skirt looks from the shortened sport skirt to the long patio kind.

Then there's a great new "Man-Shirt" look. This is a shirt tailored very much like a man's work shirt but slimmed down to girly proportions and styled in feminine fabrics and colors. Take, for instance, the denim-y shades or bright calico. One style in sheer voile would add a dainty touch to your costume for luncheon in town . . . for at-home entertaining with maybe cocktail pants or if you're so inclined you might pop it on over your swim suit (after your dip).

Next . . . the "Fun Tops." These include the shirt stylings that do double duty as little sporty jackets . . . some of them with front zippers . . . some with hipline pockets for sunglasses and lipstick and what-have-you.

Then be sure to check into the knits . . . softer than ever. Hottest item in this group is the "Poor Girl" rib-knit. It looks like a boy's tee-shirt only more fashion wise. It fits the new fashion looks best when it is worn skimpy and fitted.

Finally, the shifts. They're cool, straight cut, often with a skinny string belt to loop around your waist if you like and gayest of all with bold embroidery.

And that, Fellow Fashion Spies, is only a hint of what's available. Why don't you go snooping yourself?

Drive Under Way To Cut Down VD Cases

For every American that died from plague last year, one thousand died from syphilis.

This statistic was revealed recently by William F. Schwartz, educational consultant of the Public Health Service, Venereal Disease Branch. The Public Health Service estimates that 12,000 Americans die annually as a direct result of this infection.

The trend of venereal infections in Columbus follows the pattern of infections reported nationally. Locally, more than 2,000 victims were stricken with a venereal disease during 1965 and the number of infections has risen steadily each year since 1960.

In 1963 alone, syphilis increased 918 per cent over the previous year. Nationally, venereal disease has been on the increase since 1957, and alarmingly, 50 percent of the reported infections are found in young people under 24 years old.

Mindful of these facts, Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner has designated May as VD Awareness Month.

Venerea. Disease Awareness Month will culminate with a "For Mothers Only" conference May 5 at the Youth Building, State Fairgrounds. The program, from 8-10 p.m. will be free of charge. Schwartz will be the keynote speaker, discussing "VD — Its Friends and Its Foes."

Regular Loop Action Cut As Tourney Play Opens

By BOB WHITMAN

The Southeastern area baseballers will take a cut back in games this week due to the upcoming Class A and AA Central District Baseball tournament.

And of the four scheduled contests, the tourney dates will take preference.

RUSSELL GREGG'S Teays Valley outfit has two of the four on docket with a Wednesday night meeting against Groveport and a Friday night league battle with Hamilton Township.

Groveport is responsible for the other play with a double dip at Westerville in Mid-Eight League action Saturday.

Gregg lists pitcher Bill Dore as "a pleasant surprise" thus far this season. Dore is currently 2-0 in Metro Loop competition including a 5-3 win over top league contender Franklin Heights last week. The crafty Vikings are holding down third place in the new league.

TEAYS VALLEY owns a 4-2 over-all record.

"We are hitting the ball better than I expected," Russ said, "and more important we are cutting down the number of strike-outs per game."

Last season the Vikings were averaging 12 whiffs per game and have knocked that more than in half so far this year.

Russ offers three pretty steady moundsmen with John Beavers 1-0) and Rick Pickering (1-2) to go alon with Dore.

"Our defense has been giving them ample help also." he pointed out.

Catcher Mike Lombardo is peppering the ball for a .350 count while Dave Cook has four doubles included in his seven hits. Cook owns a .540 batting log.

BOB MILLER'S Canal Winchester crew continued to roll last week with a 5-4 win over New Albany. That victory upped the Indians' mark to 4-2, and gave hurler Richard Bellar his third triumph.

The Central District Board of Control has divided the 43 team Class A Afield into four sections with two of team Class AA field into Section Three and Teays Valley in Section Two.

Section Two consists of Central, West, Pleasant View, South, Teays Valley, Washington C.H., Circleville, Grove City, London, Franklin Heights and Bishop Ready.

Section Three is made up of Whitehall, Walnut Ridge, Reynoldsburg, Bishop Hartley, Fairfield Union, Newark, Lakewood, Groveport, Hamilton Township and Marion Franklin.

IN CLASS A, Canal Winchester and Carroll are in Section Three along with Watkins Memorial, Licking Valley, Pickerington, Millersport, Liberty Union, Bishop Fenwick, Berne Union, Amanda and Logan Elm.

VETS SPEARHEAD CRUISER HOPES

ALTHOUGH coach Bob Blagg describes "defense" as Groveport's most important asset this spring, the Cruisers are also banking on the batting punch of this quartet of returning lettermen. Facing Groveport's attack when the Cruisers face Mid-Eight foe Westerville Saturday will be (fromt left): third sacker Dave Paini, shortstop Rich Longstreth, pitcher Dan Stone and catcher Jerry Falter.

Groveport, Carroll Win; H-T's Rinehart Stars

Groveport and Carroll gained area dual meet wins last week while the Bulldogs set a new pole vault mark at the Gahanna Relays while placing third.

The Cruisers won every event while hitting the century mark in a win over London.

PACESETTERS for Groveport were Larry Stimpfle (highs and lows), Chuck Hamilton (220 and broad jump) and Mike Riffle (shot and discus).

Hamilton's Bob Rinehart won three events (broad jump 100, low hurdles) and Mark Haesecke (880, mile) addedold '61 mark by six inches.

two more but Carroll exhibited more firsts in a 72-46 verdict over the Rangers.

Steve Fridley (220), Ron Fisher (highs), Tom Rayburn (shot), Kenny Crago (high jump) and Thane Hecox (440) took Bulldog firsts wh'n Ralph Morgan (discus) added R-T's other win.

GAHANNA set four mrks while repeating as its own Relays champion last weekend but Carroll took home a mark of its own as Tom Rayburn, Ken Crago and Dick McCoy combined to set a new pole vault record of 34' 6"—bettering Whitehall's letics at the school except perhaps "indirectly" (administration doesn't seem to really care about athletics").

The seven largely disapproved of the addition of more spring sports (tennis, golf), arguing that "we don't have enough students to go around for four spring sports."

But another athlete disagreed, pointing to a good turnout for the tennis team.

"A lot of boys are looking for a sport they can continue to enjoy after high school (tennis and golf). Unless they're good enough to play baseball or run track in college, participation ends with graduation," the athlete explained.

The consensus of the athletes were not favorable to H-T's entry into a league where all the schools are bigger than Hamilton.

"You can't get kids interested if you aren't winning and we haven't been," one added.

One athlete pointed to the junior high athletic program, suggesting that it was ineffective as far as building for a better high school program.

Another sore point with the athletes was the removal of funds from the Varsity H Club to "pay off an athletic deficit."

According to the athletes, team workers operated concession stands at home games to raise money to defray costs of letter sweaters or jackets.

"It wasn't the money," one athlete commented, "just the idea of moving in and taking away the purpose of the project."

Another boy pointed to a cutback of dances after games as contributing to a lack of athletic spirit and morale.

The athletes offered three suggestions to better H-T's athletic program:

(1) renew the Varsity H Club

(2) rebuild and retain a "reliable" coaching staff (eventually advancing assistant coaches up the ladder to head coach so that the athletes can progress with the coach).

(3) build up school and community spirit for the athletic program.

Of the latter problem, one athlete commented, "The spirit is there. It just has to be brought out. What we probably need most is a winning team in some sport to get it going."

South-Side Y Is Organizing Softball

The South Side Branch of the YMCA is organizing softball leagues for churches in the South and Southeastern sections of the city.

The teams entered to date are:

JUNIOR BOYS (14 and under) — Southwood C of C, Emmanuel Lutheran, Ohio Avenue EUB, St. John United, Christ Methodist and Hope Lutheran.

INTERMEDIATE BOYS (15-16-17) — Southwood C of C, St. John, South Methodist, St. Paul United and Hope Lutheran.

GIRLS SLO PITCH (18 and under) — Southwood C of C, Brookwood Presbyterian, Emmanuel Lutheran, Hungarian United, St. John United, St. Paul United and South Methodist.

YMCA MEN'S SLO PITCH — Southwood C of C, St. John United, South Methodist, Hope Lutheran and St. Paul United.

There are still openings in all leagues and churches wanting to field teams should contact the Y at HI. 4-2151.

Horseshoe Loop

The City Recreation Horseshoe League will start May 9, at Sunshine Park.

Garland Equipment, defending City Champs and runner-ups for the Ohio League Title, will again field a strong team made up of captain Clarence Handon, Edward Jones, Clinton Hodges, Edward Lomax, John Keller, Judge Draper, Sam Conley, Ted Harris, Don Peterson along with newcomers Mirt Wood and Bus Payne.

Little "Midge" Johnson as finally hung his shoes up for good. He will be missed by the veteran pitchers.

Caskey Cleaners, a charter member of the league will again field a team composed of mostly Hilltop pitchers lead by the Rev. Alonzo Shavers, Josh Roberts Jr., Byrd Prillerman, Mathey Hill, Julian Harris, Phil Kinzer, Calvin Patterson, James Thomas and Robert Johnson are also on the roster.

New Rome I considered one of the best teams in the state will also be a strong contender for the title.

Corbett, Hoopes Join No-Hit Club

St. Mary's Phil Corbett and Brookhaven's Jack Hoopes joined the ranks of the Spectator's expanding "No-Hit Club" last week.

Hoopes (3-0 whitewashing of Linden) and Corbett (hitless job on Rosary) are the second and third members of the club this spring and eighth and ninth over two years.

Both pitchers will receive certificates from the Spectator, recording their no-hit efforts.

McDermott Wins Wrestling Title

Russell D. McDermott of Englewood, Ohio, now stationed at Lockbourne AFB, won the 171½-pound, Greco-Roman title last week at George AFB in California.

He also managed runner-up honors in both freestyle and Greco competition at the TAC tourney.

Nine 'Blue Ribbons' Await Area Runners

By JACK WITTENMEIER

One Invitational, five Relays and the '66 season's first two league meets combine to keep area cindermen really coming and going this week.

The Invitational is Hilliard's eighth annual running and that event — plus Relays at Whitehall, Brookhaven and Dayton — attract a big chunk of area thin squads Friday.

BELLAIRE'S Relays are slated Saturday with Tuesday bending to a Relay gem at West (20th annual Hilltop Relays) plus the annual Central Catholic League Meet to be run on Hartley's oval.

The Franklin County League Meet which offered last season's most thrilling dogfight, and Mifflin's Relays wrap up the week's crowded schedule a week from today.

FCL MEET

Cinder fans who thought last spring's Franklin County League Meet verged on the edge of a coronary better stay home this time.

FOR THE record Canal Winchester won the title on the basis of a mile relay victory (meet's last event) edging runnerup Reynoldsburg and third-place St. Mary, 51 to 49½ to 49.

That's about the closest photo finish since the invention of the camera.

Things don't appear to be much less frantic this running with the same trio looking like prime candidates again for the '66 laurels.

EVENT-WISE, the Meet shapes up like this:

100 — edge to Winchester's Jim Burke (already has equalled existing record this spring). Teammate Randy Beaty not far behind as are St. Mary's Vic Perdue and Reynoldsburg's John Manifold.

440 — looks like Burke all the way.

880—St. Mary forte with Mark Sheaf (2:06) and Dick Gischel (2:09) likely frontrunners. Pair finished one-two in event vs. both C-W and Reynoldsburg.

Mile — try Sheaf (4:48) and Gischel (4:54) again here.

Mile relay — should be either Reynoldsburg or Canal Winchester.

High hurdles — edge to St. Mary's Mike Hodge (:15.3) over Reynoldsburg's Gary Schmitt.

Low hurdles — try Hodge again (:20.4). Winchester and Reynoldsburg also contenders.

Two mile — should be interesting dual between Reynoldsburg's Irvin Christenson and Academy's George Lipovich.

Pole vault — both Raiders' Larry Rainwater and C-W's Dave Cook have gone over 10 feet.

Broad jump — Hodge once more (21' 10½"). University's Brown is averaging over 21'.

Shot put — could go 1-2 to Winchester with Chris Hartman and Bill Carpenter tossing.

Discus — edge to C-W over Reynoldsburg and St. Mary.

TIME—Wednesday (May 4), field events and running prelims begin at 4 p.m.
EVENTS — All regular track and field events with the addition of the two-mile run this year.
ENTRIES — Canal Winchester, St. Mary, Reynoldsburg, Dublin, University, Academy, West Jefferson and New Albany (Rosary will not compete this year).
DEFENDING CHAMP — Canal Winchester.
FAVORITE — Winchester, St. Mary, Reynoldsburg.
EXISTING RECORDS — HIGH JUMP — Rice (W-J), 6' 3/4", '64; POLE VAULT — Saylor (C-W), 11' 7 1/2", '39; DISCUS — Peters (Hamilton Twp.), 141' 10", '64; SHOT PUT — Peters (H-T), 50'7", '64; LOW HURDLES — Rice (W-J) :19.9, '64; HIGH HURDLES — Bionz (Gahanna), :14.7, '66; 100 — Drauer (Academy, '61) and Skeen (H-T, '63) — :10.1; 220 Donaldson (C-W, '63) and Miller (Groveport, '62)— :22.3; 440 — Kleinmeyer (Reynoldsburg), :51.9, '66; 880 — Alspach (C-W), 2:03.2, '62; MILE — Doran (New Albany), 4:41, '61; 880 RELAY — Academy (Schoeno, Kirk, Shepard, J. Larrimer), 1:36.2, '64; MILE RELAY—Academy (Schoeno, Kirk, Shepard, J. Larrimer), 3:37.2, '64; BROAD JUMP — Moore (Marion-Franklin), 22' 4 1/2", '66; TWO MILE — new event.

HILLTOP RELAYS

RECORDS have proven to be pretty stable over the years at the Hilltop Relays.

Only three marks fell last year — in the 880 (Walnut Ridge's Rick Mettle, 1:58.3), the two-mile relay (Walnut Ridge, 8:13.8) and mile relay (Whetstone, 3:28.1).

Besides all five regular field events, the Hilltop event will include: 100, 220, 440, 880 and high hurdles plus relays in the 440, 880, mile, two-mile and shuttle hurdles.

FIELD TEAMS will be comprised of two men while only one boy per school is eligible to run in each track event. (Every running event will be a final.)

The 1947 West High team will be the honored guests of the Cowboy athletic department. Admission is 50 cents and tickets will be available from the field.

TIME — Tuesday, field events begin at 4 p.m., running events begin one hour later (latter run at five minute intervals with final event beginning at 6:40).
ENTRIES — West, Marion-Franklin, Eastmoor, Brookhaven, Walnut Ridge and Whetstone.
AWARDS — trophies to winner and runnerup school and to top individual point scorer, ribbons to top five individuals in each event.
HISTORY — 20th annual running.
DEFENDING CHAMP — Whetstone.
FAVORITE — West and Eastmoor.

CCL MEET
(at Hartley)

ALL BUT three marks went down at last spring's CCL Meet and standards which could tumble again this time look most likely in the 220, 440 and low hurdles.

Top individuals to keep an eye on are DeSales' Steve Greene (100, 220, 440), Hartley's Mike Owens (880), Ready's Bill Mastriani and Hartley's Craig Wingo (hurdles) and DeSales' Dave Bowmas (two-mile).

TIME — Tuesday, field and running events (all finals) begin at 4:30 p.m.
ENTRIES — Hartley, DeSales and Ready.
AWARDS — Trophy to winning team.
DEFENDING CHAMP — Hartley.
FAVORITE — DeSales.
EVENTS (AND EXISTING RECORDS) — BROAD JUMP — Dave Thomas (H), 19' 11 1/2", '65; 100 — Mike Santy (H), 10.4, '65; MILE — Rick Lannon (DeS), 4:47.3, '65; 880 RELAY — St. Charles, 1:38, '64; 440 — Steve Greene (DeS), :53.6, '65; LOW HURDLES — Dick Hoffman (St. C.), :22.4, '64; 880 — Rick Lannon (DeS), 2:10.1, '65; 220 — Jack Lothamer (St.C.), :23.1, '64; MILE RELAY — Hartley, 3:44.2, '65; SHOT PUT — Bill Kearns (DeS), 49' 4", '65; DISCUS — Bill Kearns (DeS), 129' 4", '65; POLE VAULT — Vic Martinsen (R), 12', '65; HIGH JUMP — Dave Thomas (H), 6'2", '65; HIGH HURDLES — John O'Neil (R), :16.0, '65; TWO MILE — New event.

HILLIARD INVITATIONAL

TIME — Friday, running prelims, field events begin at 6 p.m. Finals set for 8 p.m.
EVENTS — All regular track and field events with the addition of the two-mile.
ENTRIES — Hilliard, Grove City, Pleasant View, Franklin Heights, Delaware and Walnut Ridge.
AWARDS — trophies to winning team and high individual point scorer, ribbons to top five individuals.
HISTORY — eighth annual running.
DEFENDING CHAMP — Hilliard.
EVENTS (AND EXISTING RECORDS) — SHOT PUT — Johnson (Marysville), 53'1¾", '63; DISCUS — Johnson (Marysville), 153'7", '64; POLE VAULT — King (Hilliard), 13'2", '63; HIGH JUMP — Newman (Hilliard), 6'2", '65; BROAD JUMP —Gard (Hilliard), 20'11 3/4", '66; HIGH HURDLES — Kirk (Hilliard), :15.1, '62; 100 — Gard (Hilliard); :10.2, '66; MILE — Bills (Urbana), 4:36.6, '45; 880 RELAY — Hilliard, 1:34.5, '65; 440 — McAlister (Hilliard), :51.6, '65; LOW HURDLES— Kirk (Hilliard), :20.2, '62; 880 — Rehder (Grove City), 2:01.2, '65; 220 — Humes (Hilliard), :23.5, '65; MILE RELAY — Grove City, 3:36, '64.

is considered money well spent.

"I, nor other local officials, have the professional knowledge to plan a street improvements of this scope," Higgins stressed, "and I'm not going to be responsible for spending this much money haphazardly."

Other street committee activity will include purchase of a new dump truck, contracting (on a three-month trial basis) for mechanical sweeping of streets, construction of a pole building at the water works for equipment and material storage, introduction of a time clock into employes' lives, mapping of sewer drops, survey of need to replace curbing, erection of traffic signs and possible relocation of utility poles to relieve traffic congestion on College-st and in the business area.

Local civic groups will be approached with the village's need for trash cans for placement in the business section.

The clerk was directed to inform the Ohio Liquor Control Board that objections were lacking to the request that the C-1 license held by the Garroway fruit stand on Main-st be replaced by a C-2 license which permits carry-out of high test beer, wine and other beverages not exceeding 40 proof.

With half on the agenda untouched by the midnight adjournment, a special meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 4.

More important business will include ordinances concerning Hanstein-st, itinerant peddlers, one-way and stop streets, dogs, and trash on premises.

Sewer rate studies, employe hospitalization and fire insurance rates will also be matters of concern.

Classroom—

at the voter's convenience, persons in the rest of the district are asked to call the high school at TE. 6-5345.

Free baby sitting is also offered to parents going to vote.

This means the owner of the average home in the community will be asked to come up with an extra 10 dollar bill, a couple of dimes a week.

For less than the cost of a gallon of gas, a pack of cigarettes or a loaf of bread, the taxpayer can buy a normal school day for the youngsters of the community.

Approval is also being sought to permit the establishment of a vocational school, supported jointly by Madison, Canal Winchester, Reynoldsburg, Jefferson and Whitehall Districts.

The price tag for providing the vocational training that enables a high school student to successfully enter the labor market without additional schooling is about two mills.

It is estimated the same program, if provided by the individual districts, would hit the property owner 10 to 14 mills harder.

Lockbourne Teenagers' Plight Reviewed

Once again teenagers of the Village of Lockbourne are pleading for recreation facilities.

In a letter to The Spectator signed "The Bored Teenagers of Lockbourne" they attribute recent disturbances in the village to having little else to do, and accuse the parents of having no interest in the problem.

Although adults contacted think the recent outburst is linked to the annual attack of spring fever, they admit teenage recreation opportunities are almost non-existent, not only in Lockbourne but in Hamilton Township as a whole.

Rev. Charles Titko is serving as chairman pro-tem of a committee which is attemping to place a half-mill recreation levy on the ballot in November.

However, buck passing between the local school board and the township trustees has left doubt in many minds that voters will be given the opportunity to vote on the issue.

Such a levy must be balloted by a taxing entity and Titko feels this is more the responsibility of the trustees than the school board whose primary concern is education.

Ernie Grabiel, trustee, states that the request for such a levy has never been formally brought before the board, although the trustees may have been contacted individually.

However, he pointed out that the development of a 45-acre recreation area just south of Hamilton Meadows is already under way, but is currently slowed down by the laying of a trunk sewer through the area by Columbus.

Asked to pinpoint the disturbances of recent weeks, a Lockbourne resident claimed that neighbors object when the youngsters run through their yards and complain of the noise accompanying the game, "Whistle and Holler," which is a variety of Hide and Seek.

However, Bill Tillman, marshal in the community for the past eight years, indicated that, in isolated cases, the problem is more serious than this. A stolen car ended with a couple of boys in juvenile court recently, and there has been some property destruction.

He stressed that education of teenagers is a never-ending job, as each year a new crop becomes closer to adulthood, and tries to grab the freedom of maturity before assuming its responsibilities.

Glenn Cooper, township police officer, agrees with Tillman that although recreation is a problem, Lockbourne is by no means a hotbed of juvenile delinquency.

In fact, both law enforcement officers maintain that more complaints come about dogs running loose than of kids at loose ends.

Although adults with the leadership necessary to successfully promote recreation in Lockbourne have been slow to step forward, some of the programs begun in the past have died, due to a slack-off in interest on the part of the teenagers themselves.

Actually the only youth groups that have shown a sustained interest in organizational activity are those of the local Masonic Lodge, Job's Daughters and De-Molay.

Tillman feels strongly that youth must work a little for what it wants, and not expect it on a hand-out basis.

He recalled the Hot Rod Booster Club of a few years ago which not only provided a hobby for a number of boys, but acted as a policing agent that exerted considerable influence on the driving habits of the teenagers of the community.

It also noted, with the village so small, that it has been impossible to round up sufficient boys to form Little Leagues. Similarly with several churches in the village, no single church has enough teenagers to carry out much of a program.

Suggestions that the Municipal Building which sits idle most of the time be used as a recreation center are impractical without either professional or volunteer supervision.

The specific demands cited in the recent letter included roller skating, dances and a soda fountain.

One resident added that many residents of Lockbourne are elderly and with their own children grown, lack any burning desire to either finance a recreation program or develop a tolerance for the noise and confusion that accompanies the high spirits of youth.

STUDENTS TAPPED FOR INDUCTION INTO NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

As speaker at the induction of new members of National Honor Society at Canal Winchester High School, Chet Long suggested that what is important is the development of five "senses," those of responsibility, respectability, reliability, honesty and pride.

The 11 students who were tapped recently were selected upon basis of scholarship, leadership, character and service, with an academic average of at least 3 point, a must for eligibility. The initiates were sworn into office by President Bob Hoover.

Iniated were Susanna Busby, Susan Lamb, Margaret Sievert, Van Miles, Kristine Weiser, Victor Argobright, Becky Harrison, Mike Dawson, Marsha Leupold, Connie Sue Underwood and Janet Miller. The last three girls are seniors, and the other students, juniors.

Twenty students at Teays Valley High School were also recently taken into the Honor Society.

The seniors are Gary Bartholomew, Carol Blanton, Sally Forson, Becky Hicks, Harriett Marburger, Judith Mouser and Cindy Pribble.

Juniors include Mike Binion, Kathy Brown, Jill Butt, Nancy Collins, Bill Fridley, Pat Kunke, Ron Leatherwood, Jeanne Miller, Vicky Neff, Mike Stone, Clay Taylor, Ron White and Randy Wilson.

THE DELIGHT WITH which the boys greeted the sextet when they sang "I Enjoy Being A Girl" indicated that even costumed in FFA garb, the lads realized the difference and heartily subscribed to the perpetuation of that difference. DeKalb Award Goes To Clayton Coffee As Groveport FHA Outstanding Senior

A successful high school career was honored last week when Clayton Coffey was chosen as outstanding senior in the Groveport Chapter of the Future Farmers of America and received the DeKalb award at the annual banquet.

Among the feathers in his cap recited were his selection as State Farmer in his junior year, vice - presidency of FFA and National Honor Society, consistently high scholarship, a gold medal rating in oratory and a string of blue ribbons at the county and state fairs.

Chapter advisor Franklin Miller indicated the choice was a difficult one with President Jim Dill putting forth the effort that helped lead the chapter to rack up a superior rating again.

Other student awards presented at the banquet attended by parents, faculty, members of the administrative staff and the school board included those won at the recent District contest.

Those honored besides Dill and Coffey were Glen Thompson, Mike Miller, Jim Stevenson, Don Werner, Doug Watkins, Mike Roberts, Jim Beaty, Jim Boring, and Fred Babbit.

Don Westcamp received the degree making him an honorary member in recognition of his service to the chapter. Miller was presented with a desk pen in appreciation of his dedication as chapter advisor.

A listing of the year's activities showed the drive with which the boys lived up to the club motto, "Learning To Do, Doing To Learn, Learning To Live and Living To Serve."

Their projects involved a seed potato sale, testing of the Funk Seed Corn Tests and sale of seed corn, a scrap drive, share cropping of the school-owned land where the junior high is being built, sale of cider and a coat check booth at athletic events of the school.

Fair exhibits brought them 113 blue ribbons, 12 champions, five trophies and two trips to national conventions.

In addition to the songs sang by the girls sextet, Marilyn and Don Werner presented a short program of folk music, dedicated to friend whose name appeared the late Steve Kallies, their on the program as one of a quintet who were to have entertained.

EMCEE FOR THE Children's Rally Sunday will be Rev. Rieder Kallan, associated national director for West Coast Region of CEF. One of his most pleasant tasks will be the introduction of ventriloquist "Uncle Alan" and his dummy, Johnny.

IT'S ANYTHING FOR JOHNNY

WHEN FATHERS of students at Scioto Trail recently put on their best wigs and long-johns for the Scioto Trails PTA variety show, "Swinging Into Spring," they proved beyond doubt there is absolutely nothing they won't do for the benefit of their children. To protect the dignity of their reputations (what shreds may be left) promise was given to couple their last names with their stage names rather than their given names and perhaps at least half veil their true identity. From the left are "Candy" Absten, "Gipsy Rose" Koehl, "Rose La" Ryan, "Tempest" Flavin, "Dimples" DeWitt and "Baby Doll" DeLong.

Committee Will Study Ohio's Pollution Woes

A Legislative Service Commission study committee plans to look into statewide problems of air and water pollution with an eye toward recommendating legislation to fight the problem.

Senate Majority Leader Theodore Gray of Piqua named State Rep. David Albritton of Dayton, a Republican, to chair the committee.

The committee plans to study laws of other states and determine the desirability of creating a state air pollution control board. Ohio already has a water pollution control board.

UN Association Picks Top Papers

Mrs. Richard W. Edwards, 1892 Edgemont-rd, president of the Columbus Chapter of the United Nations Association, has announced that Herbert Evans, president of the Peoples Broadcasting Company, and a member of the local chapter will be the featured speaker for the Annual Membership Meeting of the Columbus Chapter.

Winding Hollow Country Club, 3900 Westerville-rd, will be the place of the dinner-meeting to be held Wednesday, May 4, at 7 p.m. Evans' topic will be "UNESCO at Work Around the World."

Another event on the program will be the presentation of awards to the winners of the United Nations Association High School Contest in the area.

A committee of five judges, headed by R. H. Burgoon, 3167 Morningside-dr, has selected the top four papers to receive first and second prizes and two honorable mentions.

First prize, a $50 savings bond, goes to Adela Chvzeszevk, 691 S. Ashburton of St. Mary of the Springs High School.

Honorable mentions go to Michael Wallace, 5300 Brand-rd, Dublin High School, and Miss Toni Morris of 2634 Bridgeview-ct, St. Mary of the Springs High School.

These papers will compete in the national contest where the top prize will be a trip to Europe or an $800 scholarship.

Serves Wilson Ave. Church

Jack Hansher, 776 Harwood-dr, has accepted the invitation of the Wilson Avenue Church of the Nazarene to serve as minister of music.

Mr. Hansher is a 1957 graduate of Olivet Nazarene College, Kankakee, Ill., where he majored in elementary education, with minors in music and science. He was active in Olivet's music program, and during his junior and senior years was president of the Orpheus Choir. He received his master's degree from OSU in 1961, and is presently principal of the Weinland Park Elementary School.

Mrs. Hansher is also an Olivet graduate, class of 1958. Her major was also elementary education, and she has taught in the Columbus school system. The Hanshers have two children, Kevin, 5, and Kimberly, 2.

'Unchurched' Child Invited To Rally At Baptist Temple

Johnny may be a dummy, but he knows what he's talking about.

He has a message for youngsters of Central Ohio that he will deliver at the Columbus Baptist Temple, 2956 Cleveland-av, next Sunday afternoon.

It is "Jesus loves you."

The puppet through which Alan George, associated national director of the Southeast Region for Child Evangelism Fellowship speaks, will be the star performer at the Children's Rally with which the Fellowship is opening its 16th international conference.

The group, which attempts to reach the "unchurched child" hopes to fill each of the 3,000 seats at the Temple during the rally which begins at 2:30 p.m.

Every child present will receive a gift, and Mrs. David A. Smith, known as Aunt June in the Fellowship in which she has been active for 21 years, will call upon her story-telling talents to present a visualized Bible story from a simulated television cabinet.

According to Miss Georgia Dodd, local director of Child Evangelism, 906 E. Broad-st, 75 local workers, headed by chairman Andy Schut, 190 N. Gould, expect over 1,000 delegates from all over the world to attend the conference which officially begins with a 7 p.m. session Monday evening and will end with a banquet at the Youth Center at the fairgrounds at 12:30 p.m. Friday, May 6.

The public is invited to the meetings which will feature Rev. Paul Boger of Grand Rapids, Mich., as Bible speaker and Dr. Al Smith, songwriter and founder of Singspiration.

Further information may be obtained by calling the local office at 258-4757.

Like Antiques? Then This Art Gallery Sale Is For You

Do you enjoy poking around in attics or haunting antique shops looking for the unusual? Are you dreaming of something a little old-fashioned to add charm to your contemporary living room? — then the Art Gallery Sale is for you.

On Friday, Apr. 29, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts 480 E. Broad-st, will welcome 1500 housewives, art lovers and antique enthusiasts who come to examine (and buy) the "treasure" which has been collecting in the Gallery basement since the last sale.

A few of the things are old friends to the annual sale, like the 18th century French sedan chair (know anyone who wants a $1250 telephone booth?). The rest of the items, however, are new, having been donated by individuals and business concerns during the past two years. The price range varies from 50 cents to $700. Proceeds are used for Gallery maintenance.

This year's sale features a large selection of original oil paintings, watercolors, prints, lithographs, etchings, and drawings, and picture frames of all sizes, and also to be found are rare leather bound books, linens, glass, silver, pewter, china, porcelain, pottery and even a diamond ring. This year's collection of antique furniture and lamps is one of the largest and most varied containing everything from a painted bed and dressing table to a massive Lincolnesque bed.

It can be seen that the sale offers just about everything under the sun, including walking sticks inlayed with mother of pearl and delicate china figurines. A word of advise is to get there early to get the best buy. No preview showings or advanced sales are permitted. So it's first come, first serve.

A $2 donation is asked at the door from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. and $1 thereafter.

Golden Age Village Finally Underway—Four Years Later

By The Spectator's
BOB TENENBAUM

Ohio's first Golden Age Village, promised by Gov. James A. Rhodes months before the 1962 election, is finally under construction — just months before the 1966 election.

Rhodes, wielding a shovel shaped like the state of Ohio, broke ground for the village on a site on Central-av just south of W. Broad-st and predicted the idea would mushroom "into one of the finest projects in the nation."

It was back in 1962, when Rhodes was campaigning for the governorship, that he proposed centers to house elderly persons who did not need confinement in mental institutions but had nowhere else to live.

The project moved slowly as negotiations dragged on between the state, the Federal government and the various Metropolitan Housing authorities throughout the state.

Columbus' center is the first. Toledo is next in line and plans are under way for Golden Age Villages in Cleveland and Cincinnati.

It will house, for the most part, elderly patients now in state mental hospitals who are classed as "non-psychotic" and are able to take care of themselves. But it will be open to any elderly person with limited income.

Living in the village will cost an estimated $110 per month. That will include meals, rent, utilities, health services, beauty and barber shops and recreation. Each unit will have a kitchen but residents will be urged to eat in the central dining facility.

The Columbus Metropolitan Housing Authority (CMHA) will be responsible for construction and maintenance. The state will provide meals and health and recreational services.

Rhodes, in breaking ground, called the ceremony "not a groundbreaking, but a breakthrough." He said the village would erase the stigma attached to aging" and predicted it would "help older persons find a way to restore their dignity and decency."

Aiding the governor at the ceremony were Russell Taylor, director of the CMHA; Maurice Hoffman, CMHA assistant director; Donald Tishman, chairman of the CMHA board of trustees; Martin A. Janis, director of the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction, and Mrs. Rose Papier, coordinator of the state Administration on Aging.

FBI Agent Dates Talk For Ladies

The Insurance Women of Columbus will meet May 5 at the Ohio Stater Inn to hear Robert Payne, special agent for the FBI. Dinner begins at 6:15 p.m. with the program at 7:15 p.m.

Selection of officers will follow. Arrangements are being made by Chairman Marsha Cline who will take reservations until May 3 at the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Co.

Jewish Women Slate Installation Lunch

The Columbus section of the National Council of Jewish Women will hold an installation luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 3, at Stoney Creek Country Club.

Officers to be installed include:

President, Mrs. George N. Ornstein; vice-presidents, Mrs. Jules H. Vogel, Mrs. Martin Adler, Mrs. I. David Cohen and Mrs. Maurice Zox; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert A. Levenson; recording secretary, Mrs. Donald Katz.

Treasurer, Mrs. L. L. Praver; assistant treasurer, Helen Nutis; financial secretary, Mrs. Leon Dillion, and historian, Mrs. Meyer Meliman.

A program, the original script of "The Making of a President 1966," will be presented. Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Vogel a 235-7459.

Local Women To Attend Confab

Five Columbus women will attend the Ohio Department Reserve Officers' Association Ladies' Club convention Apr. 29-30 and May 1 in Mansfield, O.

They include Mrs. Maurice D. Levine, Mrs. Charles Fisher, Mrs. Frank McDowell, Mrs. John Woerner and Mrs. James Larva. Mrs. Levine, 176 N. Merkle-rd, is the Ohio Department president and Mrs. Fisher serves as president of the Columbus club.

OMEGAS TO MEET

The Alpha Tau Omega Mothers and Wives Club will hold a Spring meeting Tuesday, May 3, at 12:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Robert B. Amos, 3182 Kenyon-rd. New officers will be elected.

Plus ONE YEAR SUBSCRIPTION TO

THE SPECTATOR

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

BOTH FOR ONLY

$4.50 PER YEAR

The Spectator Newspapers are introducing a new service for their readers — an accident insurance program with outstanding benefits for only $4.50 a year. Coverages and benefits have been carefully selected to best fit our readers' needs. We invite you to examine these coverages and compare with other low premium policies. We think this plan just makes good sense.

Here's How You're Covered:

- ON RAIL AND SEA $13,000.00
  By the wrecking of a railroad, streetcar, interurban, subway or steamship while a passenger—for fatal accidents $13,000.00
- ON EXPRESSWAY ..... $ 5,000.00
  By the wrecking of a pleasure auto or of a bus (including school bus) or taxi cab while riding or driving on an expressway—for fatal accidents $5,000.00.
- ON ROADWAY AND AIRWAY ..... $ 1,250.00
  By the wrecking of an auto or truck while riding or driving or of a taxi cab, bus or commercial airplane while a passenger—for fatal accidents $1,250.00.
- ON THE FARM AND AT PLAY ..... $ 750.00
  By the wrecking of a farm implement or machine or bicycle while riding; while ice skating or by being struck by a golf ball while playing golf; by being accidentally shot while hunting or by accidental drowning at a public bathing beach while swimming—for fatal accidents $750.00.

YOUR BENEFITS GROW!
For each year that your policy remains in continuous force 10% will be added to the above dollar amounts until 50% has been added. (Except $13,000 and $5,000 amounts.)

A SEAT BELT FEATURE!
In the event of fatal accidents in an automobile when the Insured is wearing a properly fastened seat belt, $100 will be added to the amounts specified above.

Plus

 HOSPITAL CONFINEMENT
For accidents covered up to $10 a day for up to 60 days or a maximum of $600.00; and for miscellaneous hospital services up to $10 each for oxygen tent, anaesthetic, ambulance, blood transfusion, and wheel chair rental.

 DOCTOR'S FEES
For accidents covered up to $3 for each treatment up to a total of $15 for any one accident if no other claim is made.

Additional Accident Insurance Policies Available At $3.00 Per Year For Each Additional Family Member.

HOW IS PROPERTY SELLING?
That's the question we are asked almost every day. Frankly the way property "MOVES" when it is offered for sale depends a great deal on how it is handled. For professional handling of your property, when you are buying or selling, we suggest you consult us.

THE ABOVE DISPLAY will be taken to the "For-Mothers-Only" conference planned as part of the "VD Awareness Month" proclaimed by Mayor M. E. "Jack" Sensenbrenner. Committee members shown are, from the left, Mrs. Billie Brown, Neighborhood House coordinator; Mrs. Edwina Erickson, president of Franklin County and Columbus Girl Scout Volunteer Organization; Mrs. T. J. Shepard, representative of the Central Ohio Deanery, and Mrs. Richard Hahn, president of the United Church Women.

Mothers Asked To Join V-D Fight

The lurking threat of venereal disease is becoming of increasing concern in Franklin County.

To alert their members to better protection of their families against this threat, the PTA's, United Church Women, Urban League, Girls and Mothers of the YMCA, YWCA and Girl Scouts have called an all-city "For-Mothers-Only" conference at the Youth Building at the Fairground from 8 to 10 p.m. Thursday, May 5.

William F. Schwartz, author of the only text book available on VD, and an associate with the U.S. Public Health Service, will speak. He has recently appeared on both the "Today" and "Mike Douglas" shows.

Panelists will include Dr. Ollie Goodloe, Columbus Public Health Commissioner, the Rev. G. W. Hartman, executive director of the Council of Churches; Mrs. Alfred Glascor of the United Church Women, and Bob Kean, president of the Jaycees who have been fighting a local battle against venereal disease for several years.

Expressing the hope that thousands of mothers will attend the conference (there is no charge), Dr. Goodloe stated that public knowledge and understanding is essential before health authorities can remedy the situation. He stressed that nearly 3,000 cases of VD were reported in 1965, a figure consistent with the fact that the rate has risen steadily during the past few years.

Kegler's Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

The Amos Imperial Doubles are runaway for high series this season. Add Jim Hern's 719 for Sokol Bros. made up of 267, 227 and 225.

Plan to participate in the seventh annual Charlie Hill Match Game open to run June 3, 4, 5 at Rainbow. Guaranteed prize fund is $2500 with first place $1,000, plus trophy and paid entry and expenses in the 1967 Masters at Miami. Curly Cunningham is tournament manager.

LOOK FOR a new game called "Carom Bowl" to be introduced next year by Brunswick. It's played on regular lanes, with the same ball and same pins and automatic pinsetters but, instead of rolling at the pins you roll your ball into the channel!

To make it all the more unusual, the channel won't be there. In its place will be a long rubber bumper down both sides of the lane and the ball will CAROM across the lane and into the pins.

A double carom will be worth extra pins on a bonus scoring system. A perfect game adds up to 600.

THEY SAY Carom Bowl combines the fun and appeal of both bowling and billiards. The lane will have convertible channels that can be raised or lowered by electric controls at the counter.

As a matter of fact, one will be able to bowl the old regular way and carom at the same time.

IT SHOULD be a stimulant to the youngster or beginner . . . something like the "trainer wheels" junior used when he was learning to ride his two-wheel bike. Never a "gutter" ball. That's for me!

In a proper delivery, at what point should the ball be released?

After your sliding foot has come to a complete stop and the pendulum swing is coming forward, your ball has passed the ankle of your sliding foot and your hand is OVER the foul line.

THEN AT this point give the ball the necessary lift and continue to follow through. Never drop the ball behind the foul line.

The WIBC Championship Tournament opened in New Orleans with the largest spectator group in WIBC opening night history. "Monk" Simon, famed coach of everything but bowling, was M.C.

Twenty WIBC Columbus home office staff are in the Mardi-Gras city for the seven-week stint which will see 20,000 women bowling.

Jets Close StandTonight

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

The District One, Section C Game Hearings came off better than the average last Thursday.

This was the first time several counties were clumped together instead of each county having its own hearings. The Section C meet was well attended by people from all five of the counties — Madison, Fayette, Franklin, Pickaway and Fairfield.

PAUGH

AN EXCELLENT job of chairing the meeting was done by Jim Biven of Columbus. This is a tough job to stop the floor fights, get as much information and as little propaganda out of the state people and keep everything rolling so we get home before morning.

Carl Wilt, 1966 President of the Fayette County Fish and Game Association, was elected sportsmen's represen ative to the State Hearings and yours truly (me) accepted for the second time the farmer representative position. (My little 30 acres sure puts a lot of miles on me).

I am of the opinion that the game hearings 'came of age' this year. The congregation finally figured out that here was a real chance to go on record with their beliefs. Items were brought up that were not on the agenda, items that have been bugging people for a long time.

FOR INSTANCE, a motion was made and seconded that the group go on record as wanting 500 deer each year trapped and transported off the Ravenna Arsenal to reseed public deer lands.

Biven, not wanting to see the group get into a controversy, questioned the propriety of a resolution.

It was brought to his attention from the floor that a Game Hearing is a legally constituted body, brought together by the State of Ohio to discuss game seasons and control. If the State didn't want to hear what the public wanted, they should stop holding game hearings.

THE RAVENNA resolution was voted on and passed by a four to one margin. Another new idea was made into a motion and passed — bowhunting for deer on Sundays.

It had been mentioned earlier that bowhunters took only ten deer in 1965 so there could be no added danger to the herd by allowing ten days to be added to the season.

There is no noise connected to bowhunting as a matter of fact, quite the opposite is true. In order to be effective, the bowhunter must not only be unheard but unseen also.

ANOTHER major improvement was made in the seasons. It was voted and passed that pheasant season on private lands run to Jan. 3, thereby allowing Ohio's schoolboy hunters a chance to hunt during the Christmas vacation.

Farm game biologist Bill Martin had already testified that an extended season would have no biological harm to the flock.

With the overwhelming lack of cover prevalent in our farmlands today, 90 percent of the ringnecks die from exposure during January and February.

I DOUBT that any of these innovations carry any further but they are not wasted. In future hearings and discussions, the fact is in the records that our sportsmen did favor such actions and anyone attempting to champion the subjects has a firm fact to point out.

It is next to impossible to get recognition of a lot of talk around the Coke cooler.

New "Power-Vac" From Bogens Gives Gale-Force Furnace Cleaning

Arthur D. Bogen, general manager of Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, announced today the arrival of their brand new furnace cleaner — Power-Vac.

"In 45 years we have seen and tested many furnace cleaners," Mr. Bogen said. "But this is the first one we believe in; the one we have approved! This cleaner is definitely superior, and never before have we seen anything so efficient, economical and powerful as Power-Vac!"

Mr. Bogen continued. "Power-Vac, for the first time, cleans the entire heating system . . . cleans places never before reached, including all piping as well as the vent pipe and chimney. This machine produces a 70 mile per hour gale force cleaning power, and sucks in 12,000 cubic feet of air per minute through a line attached to the home heating system."

Mr. Bogen explained that the main spreader of dirt in the home is the furnace. He pointed out the fact that the average furnace works 8 months out of the year. For greater heating efficiency, as well as a cleaner home, every furnace, unless it has an electronic air filter, should be cleaned thoroughly once a year. He said Power-Vac challenges embedded dirt, dust, pollen and air pollution in the home. This is the very first really complete furnace cleaner that actually makes Spring cleaning worth while, he added.

"The best time to have your furnace cleaned is now, after the long, hard heating season," said Mr. Bogen, "and right before Spring house cleaning. We're giving a special introductory offer — the complete cleaning of your entire heating system, only $22.50. A complete furnace tune-up is only $11.50! Now, customers may obtain both these services . . . a $34.00 value . . . for only $29.50. A saving of $4.50. We believe in this furnace cleaner and we want as many people to take advantage of this offer as possible! And, it's good to remember that the cleaning and tune-up are available separately if only one is needed."

Call CA. 8-6543 now and arrange for an appointment to the famous Bogen Power-Vac, have your furnace cleaned by Bogen Heating and Air Conditioning, Central Ohio's most reliable total comfort specialists, are located at 490 North High Street.

Many Finding Comfortable Living In Trailer Homes

By The Spectator's
MARY BILDERBACK

Over four million Americans now reside permanently in mobile homes. For some it has become a whole new way of life. In Columbus alone there are approximately 36 trailer parks

Many of these "park dwellers" as they call themselves, live in landscaped mobile-home communities. They are laid out with winding, paved streets like miniature sub-divisions. Dannie's Mobile Homes, located near Columbus, is a perfect example of a community living on wheels

Forsaking fixed houses and apartments, park-dwellers have chosen metal-sheathed vehicles.

Each lot comes with a concrete pad on which the mobile cottage rests, and complete with sewer, gas, electric, water and telephone connections.

Few park dwellers move often. Only once in 28 months on the average.

Intensely loyal to their chosen mobile community, many often settle in for good, finding their way of life congenial with rents ranging from $45 to $95 per month.

On the East Side of Columbus, 17th Avenue Trailer Court charges only $30 per month and this includes garbage pick-up. There are also laundry facilities located in the park.

Here is a cross section of inhabitants which range from horse trainers to policemen. Many are elderly retired citizens, others college students who attend Ohio State. One coed travels back and forth from classes on a bicycle.

Mrs. Vivian Cox has been living here for nine years. She resides with her husband in a small blue and white trailer.

"One of the best advantages of mobile home living," said Mrs. Cox, "is that the wife's work is relatively easy. Housekeeping is a breeze. I can clean our home in an hour. With this type of living you can enjoy fewer nice things more than you did in a house full of possessions.

"You have to be neat in a trailer," she said. "You just can't let things accumulate. On the outside there is a minimum of work and little maintenance. We just hose it down.

"I also like the feeling of freedom, the no permanency aspect of living in a trailer."

The Cox's have a small patio and lawn for summer use that is surrounded by a white picket fence. The patio is shaded from the sun by a roof and screen.

"Of course trailers are warmer than houses in the summer," said Mrs. Cox, "But a small air conditioning unit cools all the rooms adequately, and cost of utilities is quite low."

Mrs. Cox has a small, birch-paneled living room and bedroom, and a tiled bath and kitchen. "Sometimes I refer to the trailer as my sardine can," she said laughingly. "It certainly limits your entertaining to a chosen few.

"The one thing I do miss is space and a basement for my husband's tools. We have a much smaller trailer in comparison to the newer ones, especially to the double-deckers or two-story ones.

"I have come to the conclusion that it takes a certain type of person to live in a trailer. I will say that I have met a lot of nice people and I still write to some of the students who attended the university."

The 17th Avenue Trailer Park has 200 mobile homes. People are not permitted to have animals and there is a two-child limit for each couple. Some parks will not allow children at all due to the crowded conditions and closeness of the homes.

Once regarded as a passing fad, mobile home living is now accepted as a permanent way of life. Three hundred manufacturers are producing over 150,000 trailers a year. Four out of five are mobile homes, the rest are travel trailers. All are metal-sheathed and insulated against heat and cold. One of the largest on the market is 70 feet long and costs around $17,000.

Living on wheels is a carry-over from World War II, when housing was so scarce around military bases, construction camps, and defense plants that employers rounded up all the trailers they could to shelter the workers.

Some liked trailer living so well that after the war they bought trailers instead of houses. Then parks began springing up in which trailer-dwellers could rent space.

AYH To Mark National Week With Dawn Ride

Members of Columbus Council of AYH will join with 30,000 hostelers across the nation in the observance of American Youth Hostel Week, May 1-8.

The celebration is designed to help alert Central Ohio citizens about the recreational opportunities available through hosteling.

Columbus Council AYH is planning a Dawn Cycle Ride Sunday, May 1, for the general public. The ride will begin in front of City Hall at 6 a.m. Columbus Safety Director Frederick J. Simon will ride with the group on the two-hour ride through downtown Columbus.

The American Youth Hostel Association is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization affiliated with the International Youth Hostel Association. Columbus Council AYH is located at 40 W. Long-st.

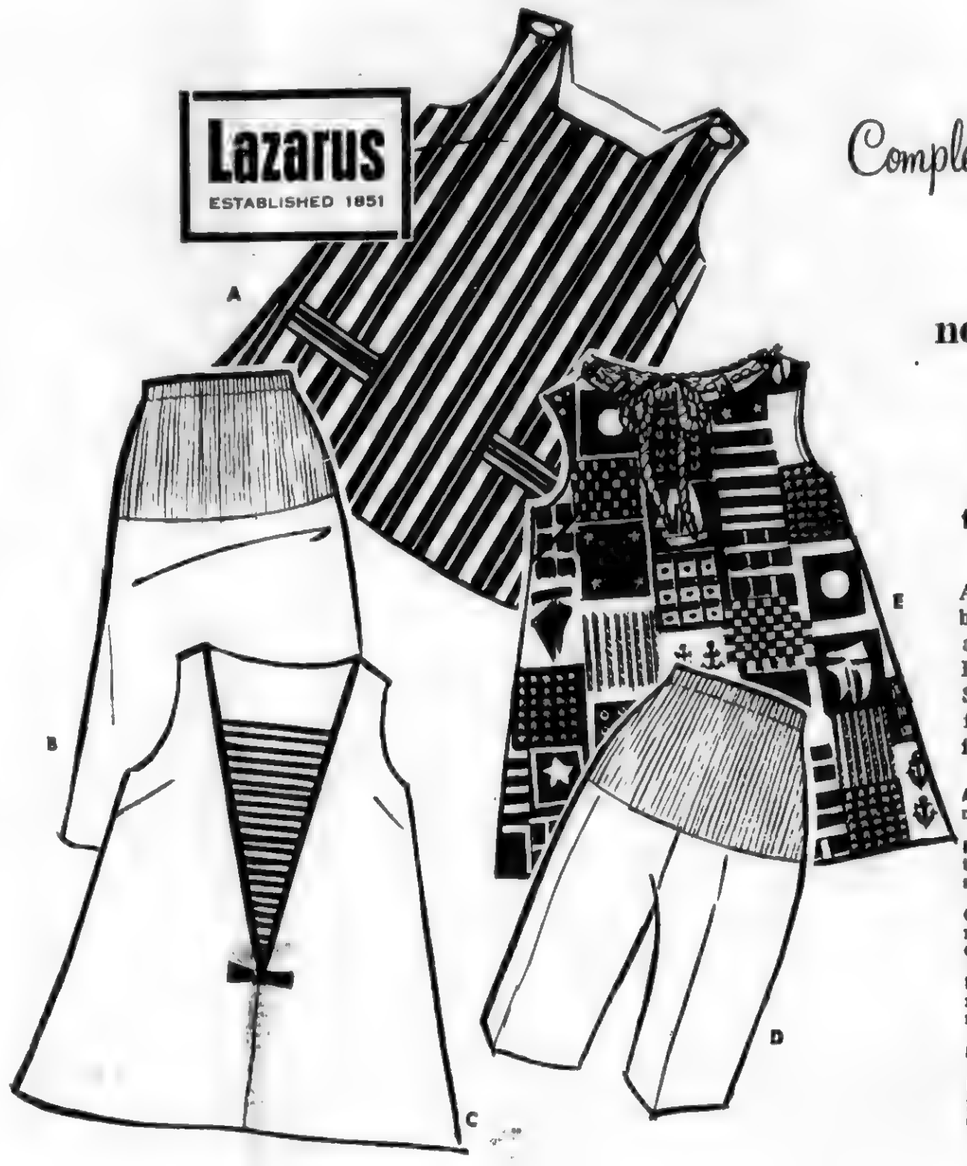
Seeks Pollution Control Funds

Mary C. Porter, the only woman running for state senator, called today for state aid for municipalities needing water pollution facilities.

Mrs. Porter, 2904 Crescent-dr. a candidate in the 16th senatorial district, termed Ohio's water pollution problem "critical" and says she'll work for a larger state budget for pollution control enforcement.

"We have an excellent pollution control board," she added, "but they are working without sufficient funds to get the job done."

Assigned New Number Plates



Col. Robert M. Chiaramonte, superintendent of the Ohio State Highway Patrol, announced that all school buses in Ohio are being assigned a new identification number as now required by law enacted by the last General Assembly.

The number will be displayed on the front and rear of all buses and will be black numerals not less than six inches in height.

WITH EX-PRINCIPAL Jerry Hartman supplying the "clean sweep" broom, Reynoldsburg added the 1966 Franklin County League baseball trophy to its collection, completing the Raiders' "grand-slam" athletic effort for the past school year. Reynoldsburg CompletesFCL 'Grand Slam'

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Although few realized it at the time, Jan. 29, 1965 was destined to become a milestone in the Franklin County League.

On that night, University defeated Reynoldsburg, 62-47, on the hardwood. It was to be the last time an FCL opponent was ever to defeat a Raider athletic team in basketball, football or baseball.

AND — WITH THE exception of a one-and-a-half point loss at the '65 FCL Track Meet — it would be the last time Reynoldsburg was to lose to any FCL opponent in any of the four major sports.

The '65 school year closed with a 7-0 loop baseball finish and a pennant for John Thompson's Raider nine.

The football season that fall was marked with doubt. Reynoldsburg had lost heavily via graduation and Thompson faced his league opener with his lightest-ever 11.

BUT THE "turning point" in Reynoldsburg's FCL dominance was scheduled for a chilly Friday (Oct. 1) when St. Mary—pre-season league pick — arrived for what was billed as "the title game."

A Ram victory appeared certain at halftime with the visitors in complete command at 18-0.

That lead stood until late in the third period when Reynoldsburg pushed across a TD. But what happened in that final quarter might remain a long time as "the highlight of my 12-year coaching career" for Thompson.

REYNOLDSBURG won, 20-18, and closed its loop season at 5-0 a few weeks later.

Nobody would walk away with the cage title and the Raiders, who had more question marks than four other sure-fire contenders, were not regarded as favorites.

But strong rebounding and a pair of reserve graduates from Bill Borland's unbeaten squad of '64-'65 named Gary Shade and Terry Miller soon showed the spark that was to make Feb. 11, 1966, another big date in Reynoldsburg athletic history.

THE OPPONENT was two time defending FCL cage champ University, the last loop squad to defeat the Raiders.

The final score was 58-50 Raiders and Dick Fishbaugh's crew had added the basketball crown with a 7-0 mark.

Bill Borland's cindermen headed for the FCL track meet on May 4 with no more than a solid third listing.

BUT WHEN results of the final event — the discus were announced. Dave Burroughs took the top step on the victory stand for the Raiders (an event which had brought Reynoldsburg no points one year before) and the "sweep" rested with John Thompson's baseballers.

Two weeks after the track victory, wins over Rosary and New Albany had been logged and another 7-0 record went into the books.

The New Albany game signals the end of Reynoldsburg's FCL dominance for the Raiders will compete only in the Metropolitan League beginning this fall.

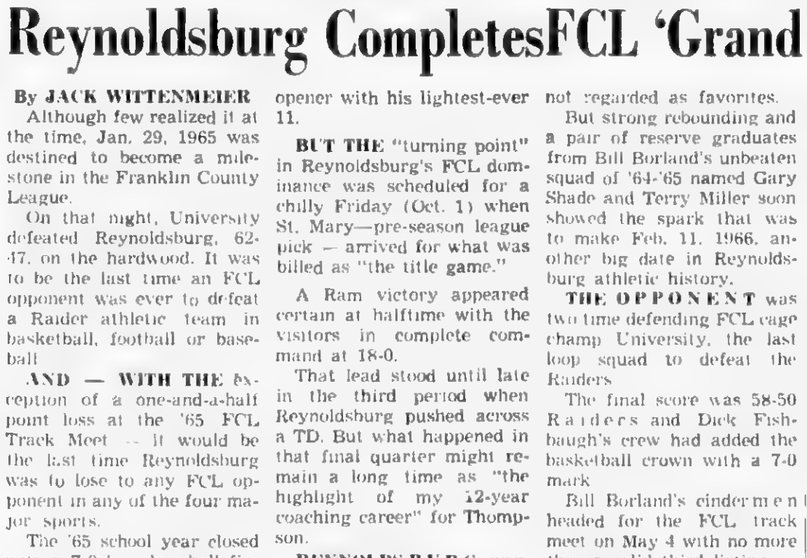
BUT RAIDER fans can long cherish their farewell a grand slam swan song!

UA Golfers, Espie Top State Effort

East High sprinter Sol Espie provided the area with its lone state champion Saturday although Upper Arlington's golfers "almost" brought home a second straight title.

Espie repeated as Ohio 100-yard dash king by turning in a :09.8 clocking, just 2/10th second off the all-time mark set by Jesse Owens in 1933.

THE GOLDEN Bear linksters Dan Montgomery, Jim Custer, John Gilbreath and Pete Hummel — totaled a 627 on University's Scarlet but that was two strokes over Ravenna's winning total.



On the individual basis, Worthington's Tim Reardon (151) tied Hummel for third place.

Team-wise, the Cardinals finished with 661 (fifth place) while Bexley (676) picked up sixth.

ON THE tennis courts, U'A's doubles' team of Rick Bowen and Greg Stone fared best, moving to the semi-finals before bowing to the eventual state champs.

In AA track going, Dick Larkin's Golden Bears placed sixth (7½ points) behind winner Cleveland Glenville (26) although Gahanna (seven points), Hilliard (six) and East (six) finished in the top 13.

Here's the rundown of area finishers at the track meet:

HOSPITAL KEGLERS WIN LAFB TITLE

Hold On John, There's Help On The Way!

Reynoldsburg baseball coach John Thompson can look with optimism toward the 1967 baseball season—with several of reserve coach Dan Brown's "hitless wonders" sure to move up to the varsity.

The Raider reserves have currently amassed a fine 14-1 diamond mark this spring which includes 12 in a row after an early-season setback to Whitehall.

The "hitless wonders" tag has grown out of the reserves ability to win low-scoring games, including a pair of 1-0 verdicts.

Top pitcher for Brown this spring has been Steve Pinnick (5-1) while hitting leaders have been sophomore Jerry Milliron and junior Phil Nolan — both batsmen clearing the .300 mark.

F-H'S PLESS TRIMS RAMS

By BOB WHITMAN

Mighty Mickey Pless authored his third no-hitter of the season last Friday to bounce Whitehall out of the Metro League lead that they held all season. The Golden Falcons punched home a first inning score that stood for the rest of the day.

Ray Malone singled and Jeff Wiler tripled him home making the score 1-0 and the rest of the game was all Pless'. The lanky righthander whiffed 14 and walked four in the seven innings. Pless retired the last 13 in a row and got the last eight batters on strike outs.

Now Franklin Heights must win one of its next two games . . . Tuesday and Friday dates with Reynoldsburg to capture the first Metro flag.

If they should fall once they will be tied with Whitehall for the title and if they stumble twice, the Rams will wear the crown.

Franklin Heights will carry a 16-6 record against Reynoldsburg's 10-5 mark. The Raiders have been doubling up on league play this season as they won the Franklin County loop with a 6-0 record.

Heights baseball coach Ed Lewis will throw Pless both times as the senior fireballer will have his normal rest between those games.

Polo Is Free For Children

Children will be admitted free when El Rancho Polo Club begins its 11th season Sunday, June 12, at 3 p.m., as it meets the Cleveland Shamrocks at 962 E. Granville-rd.

The cost for adults will be $1 per person, or $2 per car, with all proceeds going to the American Cancer Society.

Ray Malone Gives Falcons Another No-Hit Club Spot

Franklin Heights' hurler Mickey Pless earned his third "No-Hit Club" certificate last weekend with his thrid hitless effort of the season — a 1-0 blanking of Whitehall.

Thanks to an aware fan, The Spectator wishes to correct its 12-man membership in the "No-Hit Club" as reported last week.

The club actually has 13 members, the old computer slipping up last May 6 when Franklin Heights' Ray Malone fired a hitless effort (11-0) vs. Hamilton Township.

Malone's certificate, sent via his coach Ed Lewis, will soon be in the mail with our apologies.

Malone's induction into the club thus raises Franklin Heights' total to a club-high three no-hit games — the other pair fired by Mickey Pless this spring.

Auxiliary Dates Sale

Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary, Capitol City 3, will have a rummage sale June 6, at 627 Livingston-av. Proceeds from the sale will be used for entertainment and treats at Chillicothe VA Hospital.

June 6 is also regular business meeting night at Veterans' Memorial Building. There will be an election of officers.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Nixon Looks Like GOP's Man

WHITE

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon is moving up so fast on the 1968 Republican Presidential nomination that he has become at least the man to beat if not, indeed, the clear favorite in these early days.

His two capital assets are interlocked with foreign policy. In the first place, he is the sole nationally-prominent Republican possibility who consistently takes a very hard-line position on Viet Nam.

But for Barry Goldwater, whose catastrophic defeat in 1964 has put him out of consideration for a second nomination, Nixon is the hawk of hawks within the G.O.P.

He is sharply and dramatically set off from all the rest. Whatever else may be said of his posture, it has the undeniably solid strength of showing him plainly, and without "ifs" and "buts," standing for something clear: He wants to hit the Communist invaders much harder.

It is a pre-convention strategy, moreover, in which Nixon and only Nixon can exploit fully the one basic weakness within the Democratic party. This is the persistent exhibition of Democratic division raised by a tireless and articulate Democratic Senate splinter which seeks to force American withdrawal from Viet Nam under almost any kind of excuse.

In purely factual terms, this rump rebellion is insignificant in that it has not the slightest hope of attaining its purposes.

To put the thing in shorter form, the Republicans as a party are giving a public impression of restraint and responsibility upon this grave and harsh national problem; the Democrats are not.

So far as can be seen, the Republican center, plus the Republican right wing (though a right wing shying well away from the Goldwater image of 1964) will master the 1968 G.O.P. National Convention. Gov. George Romney of Michigan just might also find it a convention hospitable to himself. But it is all but inconceivable that the Republican liberals can win a nomination there, except possibly the vice-presidency.

All this Nixon has plainly seen. And his insight into the realities largely explains why he is conducting his pre-convention campaign far more on Viet Nam than on any domestic issue.

The superb irony in it all is that those Democrats who most profoundly dislike Nixon—the party's anti-Viet Nam left wing — are doing the most to open the gates of opportunity to him. Not only are they negatively promoting him. They are also permitting him to campaign upon the very issue that has always preoccupied him and on which he is undeniably the most expert — the issue of all-out resistance to Communist conquest.—Copyright 1966 by United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: End Draft, Don't Extend It

GOLDWATER

We should be studying ways to end the draft—not ways to extend it.

Yet, as our "secretary of non-defense," Robert Strange McNamara, has just announced, this administration is studying just that—a plan to turn war to political advantage and to propagandize a new generation of Americans in the process.

McNamara has been pushing this idea for years. Only now, with a President who lets him get away with everything in the book, is he bold enough to try to foist it on the public in final form.

Roughly, this new McNamara-Johnson version of the draft would require every youngster in the land to become a sort of field hand for the federal government for two years. It would extend the draft to everyone and then say that instead of everyone serving in the armed forces, some would serve with such as the domestic Peace Corps or any other Great Planned Society political program.

This strikes me as the loudest possible public admission that what this administration seeks is direct control over the people of the United States. The price of the Great Society's great giveaways is precisely what I've long warned it would be: socialism.

There is no need for such a bad program.

It is the base upon which dictatorship could be built. It is the force that could destroy freedom and give the federal government a two-year political crack at turning every young man in the land into a federal ward.

Unless we fight it right now these most arrogant of planners, McNamara-Johnson & Co., just might get away with it.

The first point to attack is that the McNamara-Johnson universal draft would be more "fair." It may irritate a lot of us when one young man is drafted while another is skipped, but do we really believe that putting everyone in some sort of federal work camp is better? Two wrongs, even by McNamara-Johnson arithmetic, do not make one right.

The second point is that this is the best alternative. The best alternative is to abolish the draft system altogether and get on with the job of providing this nation with a first-class, professional Army in which men and women are paid enough to attract and hold their service.

Only such a persistent advocate of one-sided disarmament as Robert McNamara would, as he and his boss have, oppose all efforts to increase military pay while coming up with a system to draft our young men for political, not military programs.

Every parent and every young man in this land has new reason for a second look at all the red-tape strings attached to the political package they bought by putting the McNamara-Johnson planners into power. — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

"I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."—Thomas Jefferson

Economy: Craig Vs. Rhodes

Unharnessing an academic mind, which owes its allegiance to unfettered thought and profound inquiry, sometimes can lead to a thorough debunking of cherished public policies and attitudes.

The administration of Governor James A. Rhodes discovered this painful truism during a day-long conference on manpower utilization held last week in Columbus, sponsored by the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, Ohio AFL-CIO, Ohio Manufacturers' Association, Ohio Chamber of Commerce and the state building and trades council.

The conference glided far beyond a simple discussion of manpower utilization, soaring into the nebulous reaches of basic economic policies and philosophy. It was steered by Dr. Paul Craig, chairman of Ohio State University's Department of Economics. His unrehearsed luncheon address proved embarrassing to the Rhodes administration.

In a low-key but forceful manner, Dr. Craig demolished the governor's "no-new-taxes" policy, scoffed at claims that state political leaders can exercise decisive influence over Ohio's economy and shot down other administration claims that the federal government is discriminating against Ohio in awarding defense contracts.

On taxes, Dr. Craig believes that the need for state services cannot be postponed and notes that the nation's highest industrial growth rates are in states where taxes are rising fastest.

Dr. Craig took issue with the implied contention by the Rhodes Administration that it is mainly responsible for the state's booming economy, saying Ohio "is a 'cycle-sensitive' state" riding high on the crest of a booming national economy. "This," he says, "is not attributable to able or incompetent public officials, to good or bad industrial management, to moderate or grasping labor, or to low or high taxes . . . it's just the nature of Ohio's economy."

He went on to say that Ohio's relative share of employment is shrinking and has been doing so for the past 15 years. "No governor," he asserted, "can be blamed nor can any governor take the credit for slowing down this trend."

On defense contracts, Dr. Craig says, "the cruel facts are that military needs have changed and Ohio hasn't . . . we're still geared to making tanks in an age of missiles."

Quite simply, Dr. Craig was telling the assembly of industrial and labor interests that Ohio either must modify its basic reliance on heavy industry or wither up. "We're darn near breaking even now and that's an achievement considering our outmoded economic base . . . but in a year or two we're going into another recession. Our real test will be: Do we get into the new economy or not?"

In essence, Dr. Craig's warning poses a serious challenge to the direction of current public and industrial policies in Ohio. He is saying to industrialists that they must diversify to survive. And he is telling the governor that his no-new-taxes policy and his emphasis on expansion of existing industry are based on a faulty premise.

The question now is whether Dr. Craig's advice will be heeded.

The Addict

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

In another place, in another set of clothes, she would have been beautiful.

But her arm was swollen and in the puff were blue-black indentations, as if an inked needle had punctured the fat of a dead hog.

Her eyes were wild; her complexion was pale; her forehead was sweaty.

She was a heroin addict going through the agony of withdrawal.

BEARDSHEAR

It was the Columbus jail.

The woman was a sometimes burlesque dancer who was picked up on a Federal narcotics charge.

She was sitting on a bed, chewing a towel. The muscles in her jaws flexed, like living, writhing cords.

A nurse looked in to see if there was anything she could do.

She couldn't.

Alcoholics and drug addicts go "cold turkey" in Columbus' City Jail.

The girl outlined her story. She was 26. She'd been on heroin since she was 19. Her habit cost her $80 a day. She financed her addiction through theft and prostitution.

There wasn't much else. There wasn't need for much else. In those suffering eyes were the stories of many cities, many men and the need for many fixes.

And there was the knowledge that chances of a cure were virtually nil.

This pain-wracked, bruised and battered girl would continue to waste her time, talent and looks on a cancer that was eating out her soul.

Very probably the next sequence would land her in the morgue. And if she couldn't look forward to a horrid death chewing a towel in some jail, then perhaps she might have her throat cut by a bad companion.

Both were probabilities.

It was rather sad to see a person who had only death to look forward to for release to suffer so terribly from withdrawal.

It wasn't only sad.

It was inhumane.

The Agony And The Ecstasy

MARQUIS CHILDS: DeGaulle, The Heavy

WASHINGTON — With the summer reruns beginning on television, the news on the diplomatic side also has that tired, rerun quality. It is the familiar formula of the good guys versus the bad guys.

President Charles de Gaulle of France is cast as the heavy villain in the episodes just ahead. In the fastness of the Elysee Palace in Paris, he has been plotting to pull down the pillars of a United Europe. So Destry, in the person of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, rides again, this time to the NATO meetings in Brussels.

CHILDS

At Brussels the NATO ministers will begin studying where to locate NATO's new headquarters, now that the deadline for de Gaulle's eviction notice is near. Whether it is London or Bonn or somewhere in Belgium or Holland, the uprooting process will be painful and costly. The United States will pay most of the bill of not less than a half-billion dollars for relocating the transportation-communications complex embedded in the heart of France.

Physically this can be accomplished. A show of hands will put the NATO partners, excluding France, on the side of Washington. But if Rusk presents the old formula of NATO as a military alliance with the goal of standing off the threat of the Soviet Union, it will be a triumph with little real meaning.

In the cold calculation of unity versus nationalistic rivalry, the odds for peace or war, de Gaulle can be scored against on one point after another by the Washington scorekeepers. It is too early, however, to say where the blame will ultimately rest. In 1958, de Gaulle proposed a tripartite arrangement, with France, Britain, and the United States to cover all foreign policy determinations everywhere.

The French logic was that if the United States with its vast nuclear superiority was to get into a war in whatever part of the globe, the principal NATO Allies would be involved; and, therefore, they should be in on the take-off as well as the crash landing. The Eisenhower Administration, after backing and filling about "consultations," let the matter drop.

But it was in the following year that de Gaulle's obstructionism was so costly. Secretary of State Christian Herter, who has never had his just due, initiated a break-through with the Soviet Union. President Eisenhower received Khrushchev in September and he was to have returned that visit in November. There was every indication that his appeal for peaceful co-existence and a pause in the arms race would have had wide popular response. But de Gaulle insisted that he have his own session with Khrushchev before this encounter. The Eisenhower visit was delayed, the 1960 summit meeting collapsed over the shooting down of a U-2 plane over Soviet territory, and Ike never went to Moscow.

Now de Gaulle is off to Moscow. He arrives on June 20 and he speaks on June 21, which will be the 25th anniversary of the German invasion of Russia. No one doubts that he will discuss the postwar German boundaries and perhaps even about the neutralization of Germany.

The talk here about de Gaulle's mission to Moscow sounds like whistling past the graveyard. It will be show, flattery, nothing substantive. Yet, at the very least, he seems likely to come away with an agreement for co-operation in space, nuclear energy and perhaps other fields as well. This is the kind of opening for which Europe has been groping. The NATO powers in Europe are rapidly increasing their trade with the Communist bloc, and this will lead to other forms of co-operation.

This suggests — above all in the timing — that Rusk at Brussels has an unparalleled opportunity for an act of creative statesmanship. The Vietnamese war, it may be argued, makes it impossible. But if he were to propose a new approach to solving East-West differences, he would find a response in NATO that would alter the present outlook and might even contribute to an eventual solution of the Viet Nam conflict — Copyright 1966 by United Features.

Letters To The Editor

Slaps At 'Ryan Boys'

To The Spectator:

The story released to the press by the Ryan boys regarding the recent meeting of the Franklin County Democratic Central Committee was full of flagrant half-truths.

Contrary to impressions left by press coverage, there was no harshness in our pleadings nor anger in our reasoning. Yet we were not able to move the Ryan boys from the pre-determined position to exclude all committeemen who won in the primary without their endorsement from the Franklin County Democratic Executive Committee.

The Ryans would have the public believe that our exclusion was based upon our opposition of Ryan-back incumbents, but this is false. Two of us, Mrs. Ann Walker (in the 5th Ward,) and myself, in the 22nd, ran where there were no incumbents. Moreover, several of our committemen were, themselves, unopposed.

The Ryan boys are set on excluding any and all forces that threaten their centralized control of the party for their selfish ends.

Both Jerry Ryan (chairman) and Richard Ryan (secretary and treasurer) previously pledged themselves to oganize Franklin County through the election of precinct leaders or captains. But to observe their pledge would be a threat to the hold presently maintained by the Ryans. Thus, in spite of the strength that this step would provide the Democratic Party in Franklin County, they have welched on their pledge for precinct organization.

The Ryans are presently smarting from the evidence that they were ineffectual in several of the crucial primary contests. Instead of recognizing that the whole party would gain by joining forces the Ryans have responded by pouting and manifesting their immaturity and insecurity by excluding those within the party who proved so successful in many of the crucial contests of the primary races.

Suckered Into Viet Nam?

To The Spectator:

Barry Goldwater, who writes better than he campaigns, was correct in alleging dissension in both political camps. But there is no national figure to admit that we have been "suckered" into a duplication of the Korean disaster. The reason is that the enemy is now also off the coast of Florida thanks to the stupidity of the Eisenhower administration.

Every American sacrificed in futile jungle warfare, every American tortured and murdered as a "war criminal" enrages and disgusts even a normally complacent public.

This disenchantment is being utilized to force us into a unilateral disarmament and complete subservience to a "one world" government.

In addition, we see duplicated in Saigon the chronic anarchy that has plagued us in the misnamed civil rights controversy.

The sole difference is that in Viet Nam it bears the spurious connotation of "religion."

IN & AROUND TOWN

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Hawaii Calls

For over 30 years the words "Hawaii Calls" have greeted us main-landers via the airways from that beautiful paradise in the Pacific. The radio program, by the same name, is now turning to television. And last week, Hawaii called in person, with the visit of Eno Cole and Ramona Tong Young. Both of these beauties who appear on the "Hawaii Calls" program were in town to promote a movie in which they have a part.

Eno and Ramona are seen in many scenes throughout the motion picture adaptation of James A. Michener's celebrated best seller, "Hawaii." Both girls are natives of Honolulu and from my impression they also must work for the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce. They love the islands. More about the girls and Hawaii later, but now let's get down to the business at hand, namely the movie, "Hawaii."

"Hawaii" is a fictional account of the evolution of islands, and stars Julie Andrews. In this movie, she does a complete about face from her role in "Mary Poppins."

Many critics have described the novel as the "the 'Gone With The Wind' of the 60's." Some parts of the movie were filmed in Norway, Massachusetts and Hollywood. However, most of the filming was done in Hawaii.

Enter Ramona and Eno. When the production crews got to the islands, there were several hundred local people needed for walk-ons, crowd scenes and small parts. But the natives didn't want anything to do with the movie because they thought it would be just another glamor picture about the "romantic, palm tree island."

Casting crews went up and down the streets asking old and young if they would like to be in the movie. They got nowhere until the producers met with the local Chamber of Commerce and civic and service clubs.

They explained the movie was an authentic attempt to tell the true story of the New England missionaries' efforts to establish a Christian Church on the islands, and hence the founding of Hawaii. Eno and Ramona were among the first to be hired.

Ramona plays a Polynesian beauty in the picture. This one could say is type casting, because she is beautiful. The former Miss Universe contestant is a school teacher in the field of art and psychology. Her husband is also a teacher at the same school.

Eno is a professional dancer. In the show she does several Polynesian numbers. While not modeling or appearing on TV, she runs a dress and bathing suit designing firm. She is also married and has a son and a daugher.

These two girls believe everyone should live on the islands. "It's a great paradise for people and a wonderful place to bring up children," says Eno. One hint, Hawaii is pronounced as if spelled with a "v."

Cedar Flies High

A sprig of cedar from a tree at Cedar Point was carried to Chicago by a white homing pigeon last Saturday when the Sandusky resort opened its 97th season.

The bird also carried a message in its leg capsule, from Cedar Point's president, George A. Roose, to the International Association of Amusement Parks. The message, announcing the resort's opening, was relayed by the I.A.A.P.'s executive secretary to 300 amusement parks in the country and abroad.

The feathered messenger, named "Whitey," was released by Roose just before 77 Ohio and Michigan high school bands played the National Anthem. "Whitey" flew the 290 miles in 12 hours.

Vee Swings

With a swinging piano, a pleasing voice and a pleasant personality, Dottie Vee is packing them in again at Fred's Lounge. Having appeared at this popular lounge before, owner Fred Fox has tried for some time to bring Dottie back. She has proven to be a delightful entertainer.

Dottie is a virtuoso on the black and whites. Playing at clean, crisp piano, she sticks to the melody so we "old timers" can recognize the tune. Old standards and popular new songs are her favorites.

While not a song belter, her voice lends itself to ballads and mood music. Stop in and listen to Dottie sing and play. You'll hear some pretty music. One hint, if you don't like her selections, make a request. Dottie can play almost every tune that was ever written.

Godfrey Plans Viet Nam Tour

Arthur Godfrey is to tour Viet Nam and entertain GIs at U.S. bases in Guam and the Philippines in August.

The tour is under the auspices of the USO.

Gen. Emmett O'Donnell Jr., USO president, personally invited Godfrey.

During his travels, Arthur will conduct tape interviews with servicemen in Viet Nam for his daily radio show. The tapes will be flown to the U.S. via jet for early programming.

The retired colonel in the U.S. Air Force is a licensed jet and helicopter pilot. He plans to do much of the flying himself while overseas.

DAVIDSON TO HOST

Singing star John Davidson is host to songstress Gale Garnett and comedian Richard Pryor in an hour of fun, music and song for the young-at-heart on the premiere colorcast of NBC's "Kraft Summer Music Hall" Monday, June 6, from 9-10 p.m. on TV 4.

Other regulars on the show are comedian-writer George Carlin, Jackie Gayle, the five King Cousins, members of King Family and the Lively Set, a seven-member vocal group from the University of California.

John Davidson, 24-year-old, has set the inner circles of show business buzzing. John's emergence on the theatrical scene began in 1963 when he moved to Manhattan after graduating from Denison University with a B.A. degree in Theater Arts.

His first New York audition resulted in his playing the role of Bert Lahr's son in the Broadway production of "Foxy."

He originally planned to become a Baptist minister, like his father, and majored in theatre arts only to broaden his background for future ministerial training.

Davidson's temporary detour to the world of entertainment seems to have become almost permanent.

'ZHIVAGO' AT HUNT'S

Geraldine Chaplin, 21-year-old daughter of comedian Charlie Chaplin, is cast as the wife of Omar Scharif in the panoramic color film version of Boris Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago," which opened last week at Hunt's Cinestage. All seats are reserved and the box office is opened every day from 12 noon until 8:30 p.m.

GREG IMMEL WINS '500' CONTEST

Fifteen year old Greg Immel submitted Jim Clark's name for the correct answer in The Spectator's Mystery Race Driver Contest.

Immel's card was drawn from the several hundred correct entries received.

Immel is a 10th grade student at Watterson High School. He hopes someday to become a race car mechanic. Hobbies include building model cars and slot car racing. Immel lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Immel, at 68 Amazon-pl.

Greg and his father are going to make the trip to Indianapolis while his mother and sister stay home.

Alternate entries were drawn in case the first one chosen could not be reached or wouldn't be able to attend the race. The alternates selected in the drawing were Mrs. Pete Burnett, S. M. West and Linda LePage.

The contest was sponsored by the producers of "Thunder in Dixie" and the CCC, Airport and W. 5th Auto Drive In Theaters. Gas and oil for the winner is to furnished by Pure Oil, makers of Firebird gasoline.

HORSESHOE IS FIRST

The Golden Horseshoe is the first to have Go-Go girls performing in the day time. Starring beautiful Bev, the Go-Go action begins every day at 2 p.m. To say this has become the busiest lounge in Columbus in the afternoons would be an understatement.

With the excitement created with daytime Go-Go girls, Ron Uhl of the Golden Horseshoe has probably started a new trend in Columbus.

Besides Bev in the daytime, Judy Jinks holds down the stage at night.

Judy has proven to be very popular at the Golden Horseshoe with her 20th Century dancing.

Douglas To Visit

To accommodate all the numerous requests of people to see Mike Douglas in person, the Mike Douglas Show scheduled at Veterans Memorial Auditorium Friday, May 27, at 8:30 p.m., has been postponed to Saturday, June 11, 8:30 p.m.

This was done in order to give many graduating classes of the various schools and Memorial Day travelers equal opportunity to be with Mike Douglas and TV's beloved "Crazy Guggenheim," Frank Fontaine.

The box office is open daily at the Hartman Theatre, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

All tickets which have been purchased will be honored at the June 11 date.

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

One of the finest Ohio lakes for fishing this calico spring has been Burr Oak. It is hidden in the Southeastern Ohio hill land where Perry, Athens and Morgan counties join.

PAUGH

It has been an up-and-coming angler's bonus since the early fifties but is just lately approaching its full pontential.

BEST KNOWN for its largemouth bass population, Burr Oak has also been a superb crappie source so far in 1966. On May 6, I was invited to go out with George Billy (District Four Fish Management supervisor) and witness the hauling-in of the spring test nets.

This is always a sure-fire way to tell if a given body of water has a healthy fish population. There's no stretching or exaggerating a test net.

The nets are set offshore in a good position to capture crappies. Capture they did. The nets were loaded with beautiful two-pound specimens. If I hadn't been on the spot, I'd have figured the test report had been from an advertising agency rather than George's scratch pad.

KNOWING I had an expert in the boat for some free advice, I questioned Mr. Billy on his favorite crappie techniques. He was quick to give his formula for filling the stringer with Burr Oak crappies.

He said that the first essential is to find where a fenceline goes under water and anchor over it about 30 feet out. The only good bait for spring crappies at this 680-acre impoundment is minnows.

They should be 1½ to 2 inches long and very lively. Hook them across the back with a No. 6 Carlisle or central draught No. 28 hook.

HOLD IT just under the surface of the water until you're sure the minnow has lots of life left. If the handling it's received has been too much, get another—it must be able to stir around.

Set the bait about three to three and a half feet below, a medium-sized bobber. Early morning is the best time to tempt them. They should be biting very well until the fourth of July or later with this cold spring.

Burr Oak has been recognized as a wonderful bass hole for several years. The crappies are a bonus the past two-three years. The lake was pumped down this past winter for cleaning and repair. By the middle of March it was still down over ten feet.

WHEN YOU read this, it will be back to normal. Low water did not hurt the bass fishing. To cite a case and prove a point on the bass population: the first day of May, Bud Miller and Bob Laport from Canton caught 21 bigmouth bass measuring from 14 to 20½ inches.

Later that same week, they returned and did almost as well a second time. If you remember, the first week in May still offered roily waters from scattered showers. Burr Oak at that time was still down two feet from its normal level.

Due for completion in one year is the magnificent new Burr Oak Lodge. It sets on a hill looking up the long view of the lake and will have its own approach to the water's edge.

ANY OF YOU who have followed my earlier suggestion to try Atwood Lake Lodge in Carroll County will know what I say when I promise the lodge at Burr Oak will be every bit as beautiful.

I'm sure that Burr Oak will add even more luster to the crown of recreation that now rests easy on the hills of southeastern Ohio, once the lodge is opened to the public.

Get to know Burr Oak Lake, you can always used a friend such as that.

SHAY'S 'BACK IN THE SADDLE' AGAIN!

East Freeway Derby Site; Clinic Saturday At Central

Progress was made toward another successful Soap Box Derby Race (July 23) this week with the official selection of the race site.

The Derby, again sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, WLW-C TV and local Chevrolet dealers, will be held on a leg of the East Freeway, just past the Miller-Kelton-avs exit ramps.

This segment of the Freeway will not be open to traffic.

The race itself is scheduled for 4 to 6 p.m., the later start this year due to quicker transport of the racers between heats.

'66 Derby Director Don Collins reminds prospective race entrants that a second "in school" clinic is set for Room 119 at Central High School this Saturday from 9 till 11 a.m.

The clinic at Central will dovetail with televised clinics each Sunday on WLW-C which will also televise the actual race.

Collins stressed that it's not too late for boys, wishing to compete in the race, to start construction of their racers.

Anyone wishing to sponsor a Soap Box Derby racer should contact the Jaycees at CA. 8-2773.

Wit 'N' Wisdom

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Spectator Sports Editor

Columbus, O., is one of those choice Midwestern animals which finds no special time of the year devoid of a steady diet of football.

Cleveland Brown taskmaster Blanton Collier apparently is one who's cognizant of the fact, intruding into the baseball season last week with his prospectus for his defending Eastern Division champions — '66 version.

COLLIER still hasn't gotten over his Brownies' demise by Green Bay in the NFL title game (it's described as "our poorest game of the year").

Blanton envisions brighter days ahead, basing his hopes on a 99 percent intact '65 club (right safety Larry Benz only loss via new Atlanta entry) and healthier seasons for quarterback Frank Ryan, flanker Paul Warfield and defensive specialists Frank Parker and Jim Garcia.

Wittenmeier

According to Collier, look for: more use of Leroy Kelly in the running attack, breakthrough of Walter Johnson into a starting defensive spot and same for top draft choice Milt Morin (6-4, 250 lb. end from Massachusetts).

"SINK OR swim" test for the '66 Browns could well come early with Washington, Green Bay and St. Louis (in that order) opening Cleveland's regular season on successive Sundays.

Also in the football line comes a report from a pair of OSU researchers (Drs. Donald Mathews and Edward Fox) that a pre-practice shower — in full uniform — could be the best preventative medicine for heat strokes.

Back in our grid days (about 12-15 years ago), water was taboo on the practice field in any form. We didn't have any strokes but it was pretty miserable. This situation has been corrected for the most part these days.

THE DOCTORS claim that gridders should also get all the lemon-flavored salt water they want on the practice field, adding that coaches who suit their boys in full gear in early practice sessions to sweat off fat and deny them drinking water are "asking for trouble."

Research also showed that the heavy full uniform, covering a minimum 50 percent of the body, interfered with the sweat-evaporation cycle necessary in keeping body temperatures under control.

When loss of body moisture was not replaced with water, body temperatures rose dangerously close to the 105 F mark where collapse occurs.

MATHEWS and Fox now wish to test their water-soaked jersey theory, believing it will aid the sweat-evaporation cycle.

Football is king but the greatest participation sport to our knowledge still is called "driving to work in the morning."

With many automotive manufacturers recalling many models to correct deficiencies these days, we humbly suggest they take back all those cars whose turn signals operate only when the auto is standing still.

IT MUST BE quite a widespread problem, involving most companies. I seem to end up behind one or two cars with this problem every morning.

Kegler's Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

Kudos again to Joe Kristof for 2030 for nine games in his 25th ABC. His lead was later taken over by Les Schissler of Denver, Colo., but 659 (team), 693 (doubles) and 679 (singles) are a sensational total. Joe had a narrow miss of a 300 with 11 strikes in his opening game.

Kristof owns one ABC Classic title, teaming with Don Ellis of Houston for 1331 to win the 1961 doubles crown. He has averaged 193 in 24 previous ABC tourneys.

IN ANSWER to: "Should I use a three or four step approach?"

There are many versions of the derivation of the sport of bowling. Perhaps the Italian game of bocci could best explain the origin of three step approach, which was part of bocci and carried over to bowling.

Today, a neophyte will invariably start off with his left foot and take three steps (perhaps this could be accredited to the old army chant "left, right, left, right") until the instructor tells him otherwise.

Several WIBC officials, including yours truly, will be traveling to Milwaukee late in June to join ABC in working out details for the new amateur collegiate divisions in sanctioned bowling.

WIBC "Pioneers" recently held their yearly reunion with 107 members present. Purpose was fellowship, but an added advantage was a donation of $142.10 to BVL (Bowler's Victory Legion, the bowler's own charity to benefit disabled veterans).

GLENN WILLIAMS, tournament director of last year's popular Nationwide TV Bowl, is in the middle of a 13-week Akron version of the same format, and is interesting local BPAA in a similar venture for early fall.

Hungry? On bowling an "apple" is a synonym for a ball. Cheese cakes are lanes where strikes are easy to get. A cherry is chopping off the front pin of a spare. Honey is a good ball.

A ball is often called a pumpkin. A sandwich game is the same as a Dutch 200. A sour apple is a 5-7 or 5-10 split. And — a full meal is a 300 game.

Garden Plantings Continue At A Record Clip

Beautification, plantings, spurred by the First Lady's nationwide TV program, as well as by the various states are continuing at a record clip throughout the country with some states accomplishing far more than others.

Generally beautification activity in California surpasses that of other states. The District of Columbia, however, is far in the lead in beautifying with trees and shrubs largely due to prodding by Mrs. Johnson. In the east, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland seem to be the best organized to further the beautification efforts. In the midwest, Michigan apparently is ahead. In a few states, following governors' conferences, nothing further has been heard.

That beautification is proceeding at a strong pace is evident in the heavy demand for nursery stock of landscape sizes in all parts of the country.

Where shortages exist, every effort is being made by growers to meet them from supplies in nearby areas. There are no serious shortages, it is reported, except in large sizes of trees. Demand for fruit trees is picking up.

Heavy frost damage in certain areas in the south caused some shortages of shrubs normally grown for northern markets, but more northerly grown plants will fill the gap in relation to outdoor beautification, it is said.

The industry is planning ahead to meet the demands of the market, but it takes from three to 10 years for woody plants to grow to marketable size.

The growing of a tree cannot be speeded up as can the production of manufactured goods, it is stated, although the industry is making every effort to do so to the extent Nature will allow. Present expansion of growing schedules will in time take care of the increased demand, it is said.

Sugar Maple Fad Growing

The planting of sugar maples especially in the northern and middle states is growing sharply, with home owner expectations for making their own maple syrup and maple sugar, according to the American Association of Nurserymen. If they should not make the syrup, the home owners still have handsome ornamental shade trees with comparatively large foliage.

Sugar maples thrive in the northern and in some of the middle states. They are one of the most valuable shade trees, growing in several forms.

Considerable romance has, in the past, been connected with the trees especially in New England and New York, where their sap was tapped in late winter for boiling down and making thick maple syrup which was spread on clean snow for what were once known as "sugar eats."

"Sugar eats" were held in the country. Couples on cold spring nights, snuggling under fur robes, rode to them in large tallyho sleighs, which added to both comfort and romance.

While not expecting the practice to reach the proportions of bygone days, "sugar eats" are still being held in some areas.

In the fall months at the first frosts, sugar maple foliage turns brilliantly yellow, orange and scarlet, to brighten the landscape with a variety of colors seldom seen outside of sugar maple areas.

Sugar maple planting can be extended into some areas where they presently are quite scarce providing there are severe snowy winters followed by sunny spring days and frosty nights. The trees tolerate most soils, usually on the moist side.

A mature sugar maple tree will give gallons of sap which can be boiled down to syrup, or, by further condensation, to maple sugar, both of which are valuable crops in northern New England, bringing high prices. The tree's sap is tapped by boring a hole into the trunk and inserting a hollow tap through which the sap can drip into a pail hung on the tap. By boiling this sap, it gradually thickens into pure maple syrup prized by gourmets for eating with pancakes and waffles especially.

Few Tree Shortages

The strong nationwide drive for beautification has caused no significant shortages of trees and shrubs in regular sizes this year, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Regular sizes in trees, up to 2½ inches trunk diameter are in good supply and are readily available, it is said.

In the past five year, there has been a gradual increase in the size demanded by consumers impatient to wait for them to grow larger, but nowhere has the demand greatly outstripped the supply except in some of the rarer genera and species and this always has been the case.

In the larger diameters, from three inches and up there are shortages in some species in certain areas, where the demand for large trees has accelerated.

Trees are not like manufactured goods, production of which usually can be increased at will. There is no way any grower can speed up the normal growth of trees. It takes from three to 10 years or more to produce trees depending on the size desired. Neither the grower nor anyone else materially can change this growth rate.

Most nurserymen have increased the supply of trees growing in their fields but it will be several years before the new plantings will reach marketable sizes.

However, the average home owner generally will have no trouble finding what he wants at nurseries.

An Amateur's Private Thoughts

By The Spectator's
JOYCE LOUGHMAN

I am constantly amazed when I hear someone tell how difficult it is to have a garden. Our space program is a picnic when compared to the scientific and complicated gardening adventures of these people.

When roses are mentioned, they shudder; mention glads and they shudder. Sad but true, these people are not enjoying one of our greatest gifts. I am sure that it all arises from the fact that they are frightened of pruning, mulching, feeding and cultivating.

Granted, a little pruning at the right time or some selective mulching will help some plants along but in most cases even these are not an absolute essential. Simple cultivating will help most plants.

Feeding and spraying, pruning and mulching, will give better than fair results. So it depends on how much in love you are with a peaceful garden.

Get down on all fours, dig in the dirt, yes, and even get a streak on your face. You'll be surprised how easy it is to wash off. Then when that first rose starts to bloom or you bring in a small bouquet of pansies that you have raised, then the spraying or dusting and the pruning become easier. You will start taking the time to enjoy a deep feeling of peace.

IT'S BEAUTIFICATION

The women of the Groveport Garden Club are trowel deep in their efforts to dress up the village through their "beautification program." Mrs. Charles Rohr, kneeling and Mrs. Raymond Thomas were at the old pump in front of the water works, planting the geraniums and petunias given to them by the Monrovian Club in Pickaway County which is their founding club. Forsythia donated by the members, and evergreens and petunias were placed to complete the landscaping started last spring at the Municipal Building. Jim Young of the Big City Garden Center also provided barberry bushes for the fountain in front of the Groveport Elementary lawn and the club provided the elbow grease required to set them. School employes set out the petunias which the club provided for the borders around both the elementary and high school buildings.

Lawn and Garden SECTION

JOYCE LOUGHMAN, EDITOR

On The Lawn

By LARRY LAWRENCE

My dentist reads Punch, the British magazine, and stacks the back issues in his waiting room.

A copy I saw there recently contained a cartoon about gardening that sticks in my mind. A woman is buying plants at a nursery and she says to the salesman, "Have they developed a strain yet that thrives on neglect?"

I am always astonished at the number of people who go to the trouble and expense of putting in a lawn and then expect it to thrive on neglect.

They seem to assume that they can go on cutting it indefinitely without ever feeding it. And, I suppose, the fact that even a starving lawn will green up and make an effort to grow in the spring, simply renssures them.

Roughly speaking, the color and vigor and thickness of a grass lawn depends almost entirely on how well it is fed. Feed it regularly with a modern fertilizer and it will require little other attention. Fail to feed it and it won't vanish away or scream for help. It will simply go down hill.

Bare spots will increase. Weeds will get the upper hand. And one day someone is likely to say, "I can't figure out what's wrong with this lawn. It must have poor soil."

GARDEN BOOK SHELF

"Rhododendrons Of The World," by David G. Leach, is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, N.Y. A well known author defines the subject of rhododendrons, its history, culture and care.

"The World Book of House Plants," by Elvin McDonald, published by The World Publishing Company, Cleveland, O., is indispensible for everyone who delights in plants and greenery indoors.

Pines Afford Ornamental Beauty Around The Home

Nearly 100 species and varieties of pines are offered home owners by nurserymen. The pines offer great ornamental beauty. In general, they require a sizeable area in which to grow, since most species grow to considerable size.

For quick results, pines are often favored. They grow to fair size in a comparatively few years. White Pines, for example, grow a foot or more each year. Not all pines are fast growing, however, the Bristlecone pine grows only a few inches a year.

Foliage colors of the pines range from bluish to deep green. Needles range from about two inches in length, up to a foot or more for the Longleaf Pine of the South.

Pines of the north and central states include the White Pine, the most widely planted of all species, Red Pine, named for its reddish bark; Korean Pine, slow - growing Scotch Pine, growing with open branches, and several forms, some columnar; Black Pine, prized for its ability to withstand salt water spray and therefore excellent to plant along the seashore; and Austrian Pine, which is fast-growing, with glossy foliage, somewhat shorter needles.

WIDOWS TO MEET

Widows of World War I, Chapter 5, will hold a meeting at room 208, Veterans' Memorial Building, June 8 at 7 p.m.

Excutive Landscaping Plans Are Worked Out

The highly mobile state of some of the executives of many large corporations has caused nurserymen to work out practical landscaping plans for executives who may move to a new company location every few years or so.

Executives who move a great deal desire landscaping which is beautiful but they usually do not wish to install expensive long-range site development structures desired by more permanent home owners.

An answer to this problem has been worked out by nurserymen solely through the use of plants for beauty. The plants generally are in shrub form, or small trees, flowering roses and other plants, some in containers to supply a well-landscaped look without becoming involved in extensive planning and structural work.

In this way, it is stated, the mobile executive can enjoy a more permanent home landscape look and comfort at very reasonable cost and he has received full value even though he has enjoyed it for only a few years.

THE SPECTATOR SUPPLEMENT

YOUR Write SIDE

The Spectator's handwriting expert, Mary G., can give you a scientific analysis of your own character traits. Simply send a sample of your handwriting, along with $1 in cash, check or money order, to: Mary G., The Spectator, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, Ohio.

By The Spectator's
MARY G.

DEAR MARY G.:

Is it possible to determine from my handwriting if I have the ability to obtain the goals I have set for myself?

to obtain the

In your case it is entirely possible. I do feel, unless you do some work in a few areas, it will take a long time.

I feel there is a tendency to be rather set in your ideals in life. You keep a closed mind to what may be a better way of accomplishment of your goals.

You have been protected against the hurts of the world. You formed definite thoughts regarding your approach to living.

However, things do change and I hope you will keep an open mind to this. You do have some fear which makes me think that you have been exposed and found life a challenge.

You are now very unsure and this has caused your self confidence to waver.

I feel in selecting a profession and setting forth a goal in life, your strong forces for accomplishment will erase your uncertainty. There was no indication what vocation you desire, however you show tendencies toward drafting and architecture.

A PRETTIER YOU

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

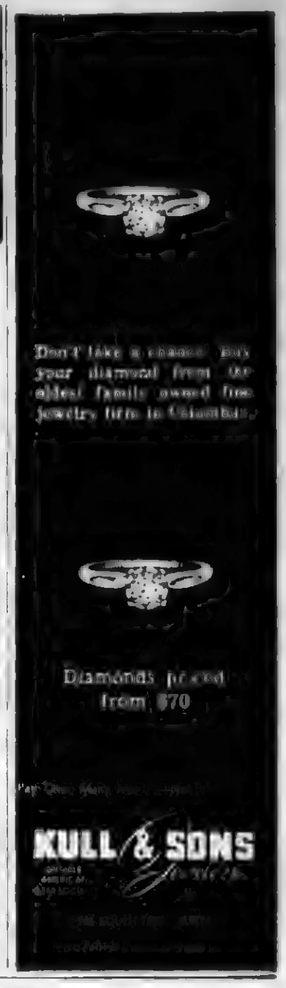
Racing has long been the "sport of kings" and what would be more appropriate for a fashion editor to report from the track than of the apparel some of the "kings" wore?

I got my chance last week when Scioto Downs "Ohio's Showplace of Racing," threw open the doors to members of the press.

The host of the whole affair (and president of Scioto Downs) is Charlie Hill and he is always fashionably and calculatedly dressed. He loves and knows expensive and good clothes. Why I've seen him in a silk jacket that was so roughly woven, only the knowing would know it was silk. This year he stood out in the crowd in a lilac colored cashmere jacket he bought in Palm Beach. The fine wool tweed had just a fleck of black to tone it down. With it Charlie wore a navy silk hanky and a tie in a combination of colors that complemented the jacket. But he also told me that he has purple silk slacks he had made to order that also go with the coat. How about that . . . race fans?

The first (after Charlie) fashionably dressed fellow I spotted was Jim Joseph, local restaurateur. Jim was wearing a very slimly styled black worsted mohair suit with one button and the trousers with it were slim and cuffless. Even his shirt was fashionwise with a high roll collar and button down continental cuffs. Now if you don't know what that kind of cuff looks like, I can tell you it's a variation of the French cuff and recommend you ask your favorite shirt seller about.

Marty DeVictor, who is king of sports at WBNS, wore a handsome coat by Brazzini. It was also the one-button roll with a notched curved lapel. The detail that amazed me though . . . no breast pocket . . . thus no pocket handkerchief in a Turf Club just oozing with decorative hankies.



It seemed to me at Scioto Downs (and also on national TV) that the red silk handkerchief has the edge . . . but Doc Bosworth of Electro Media likes the touch of printed Foulard. His Hunter green wool blazer turned out to be his Pumpkin Show jacket without the official crest. Doc is a director of the Pumpkin Show.

Chet Retousse of WLW-C TV was natty in black and white (he's natty in living color too) . . . a checked coat, black tie and black silk hanky. George Smallsreed, Jr., wore a cool coat of dark red silk and Chuck Stokes, a brown sharkskin suit with appropriate cufflinks, since he is the publicity director of Scioto Downs. The cufflinks were gold in a design combining a horsehead and horseshoe.

One outfit was particularly outstanding to me. It was worn by a lady named Mary DeStazio. It was a white shift uniform that buttoned down the front, that Mary said "needed only a touch of the iron." She looked good to me because in addition to being pretty . . . she served us our steak.

HERE'S WHAT they're wearing at the track. Colorful drivers' silks with helmets in coordinated colors. This is driver Frank Ervin with the famed horse Bret Hanover. The fine horse was the winner of harness racing's triple crown last year and has been selected as the national horse of the year.

Graduating? It's Not The End Of Your Education

By The Spectator's
STAN BORENSTEIN

TEEN BEAT

Educational problems troubling you? Wondering what college courses to take? Need scholarship information? Specific questions for teen-agers will be answered personally and many will be discussed in "Teen Beat." Write to Stan Borenstein, The Spectator, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, O.

No more school, no more books. No more teacher's dirty looks.

When you finish your last high school or college class and walk off the stage with that precious diploma or degree in your hand, don't think that you are done with education. Graduation is not the end of education.

Industry, government, business, labor organizations—all of these adult structures which you might consider void of educational asapects have something in store for you! Modern industry and government will soon place upon you a more mature educational opportunity in the form of "work orientation classes," "Staff development," "institutes" and "study courses."

Your education will not end with graduation.

Industry recognizes that learning cannot end with your hands on a sheepskin and it spends lots of money on staff training or staff development!

One has to keep going and learn anew. We must forget or unlearn old facts, prejudices and bad habits. Even a physician with his degrees, graduate training and long years at school has to relearn constantly what his enemy — pestilence and disease — can do.

He has to because the bacteria are learning this too by adapting or becoming immune to the remedies of old. The medicine of yesteryear is no good today — or else is outmoded by better prescriptions.

The lawyer must learn anew the laws recently passed — he can't afford to defend his clients on the sole basis of decisions and facts and laws he learned a decade ago and ignore the recent actions of courts and legislatures.

Business recognizes this in the staff development programs it offers. A top-notch business concern tries to acquire excellent instructors or staff development directors to assure itself that it does not become mired in outdated executive, administrative and supervisory thinking. To fail to keep up-to-date in today's business world, puts any concern in jeopardy of being tossed out by its competition.

Industry recognizes that relearning is essential to promote the vision required in an ever progressing and changing world.

The moral — don't ever stop learning. Create your own discussions and above all else, aerate your skull now and then for fresh ideas and new looks at what you have been doing all the time!

The day that the first tour book came to the aid of Columbus motorists . . .

Modern AAA trip-tics are a far cry from the first tour books provided Auto Club members in 1913. The groundwork for this service was laid in 1906 when the Columbus Auto Club began its Touring Bureau.

The first trips were usually less than 50 miles, almost always over unmapped roads. The Club employed a research man who traveled two months each spring charting better roads. These modest beginnings have grown into the International Travel Department.

The longest auto trip guide was prepared in 1961 . . . 12,125 miles. Today, the trained staff prepares plans for trips throughout the state, the nation and around the world. Services now include travel reservations and all accommodations.

The modern AAA trip-tic includes maps, accommodation guides, driving tips, a trip log and many other auto travel conveniences. All these services are, of course, free to Auto Club members.

There are many good reasons to belong to AAA. Trip planning is one of them. Also high on the list is the safety and security that comes with belonging. Wherever you travel as an AAA member, you know service and aid is nearby. Join today, just call for membership details.

PLAUDITS FOR A JOB WELL-DONE

Senator Jimmy Huffman, center, was almost as proud as Warren Moore, left, president of the Canal Winchester bank, when he accepted a community service award last week from Danny Quinlan of the Todd Division of the Burroughs Corp. Huffman's paternal pride came from the fact the reproduction of his son, James' oil, "Winchester on the Canal" on the bank's personalized check was rated top in the nation by Burroughs. The award was made at a press party last week attended by members of the business community and representatives of area news media.

Messiah Lutheran Church Holds Mortgage Burning

Messiah Lutheran Church of Reynoldsburg burned the mortgage on the educational unit in recent special ceremonies.

Selected from the congregation to touch a match to the $40.00 note was Mrs. Dorothy Ickes.

Mrs. Ickes is a charter member of the parish and has attended all but two Sundays since the very first service was held in 1958. Members of the church assembled at the recent Victory Dinner gave special tribute to Mrs. Ickes for this attendance record.

The final payment of $3,000 was made.

Following the mortgage-burning, President Arthur Jacob convened a business session of the congregation. Building committe chairman Carl Fosnaugh displayed drawings of the proposed new sanctuary and classroom suit.

After discussion, the congregation resolved to proceed immediately with working drawings and construction.

The new sanctuary will triple the seating capacity for worship and double the number of classrooms available for religious education. It will also contain an off complex and lounge. Cost is estimated at $250,000.

Specialist Predicts Lower Food Prices

Food prices will level off this year, according to Ohio State University Extension specialist, Thomas A. Bennet. "This is due to higher production levels of most food products, including beef, pork, poultry and eggs."

Bennet also pointed out that it will be difficult to tell what future prospects will be for fruits and vegetables.

"Freezing temperatures in Ohio in early May caused some damage to early vegetables, and especially to strawberries," he said.

Labor difficulties and weather factors in other areas may also tend to force retail prices of fruits and vegetables up.

Much of the rising cost of food has been due to supply and demand factors, the specialist believes. Short supply plus greater demand because of high incomes have pushed prices of some food products up.

OAGC Slates Festivities For June 6

The annual Horticulture Day and Tour for the members of the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs has been scheduled for Monday, June 6, and will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the OSU Greenhouses, 827 Neil-av.

Prof. James L. Caldwell, OSU Extension Horticulturist and OAGC Councilor, will conduct the tour of the greenhouses.

Dr. Robert Miller, turf specialist, will speak on different types of turf.

Later, members will have a catered box lunch at the Park of Roses Shelter House which will be followed by a guided tour of the park. The day has been planned for all members of the OAGC.

Members of the Officers Council of the Franklin County Garden Clubs will hold their annual potluck picnic Monday, June 6, at 6:30 p.m. and will meet at the South View Shelter House, Greenlawn-av.

Guest speakers will be Pat and Felix Merullo. Topic will be "Newer Trends of Today in Designing and Landscaping."

Hughes Anpointed As Medicare Manager

Hugh F. Hughes, of 112 E. Jeffrey-pl has been named Medicare manager for Ohio by the Nationwide Insurance Companies.

Hughes will be responsible for coordinating field activities and maintaining professional and institutional relationships for the Medicare program in the state.

A 20-year veteran with Nationwide, Hughes has served in various administrative, underwriting and service positions. He attended Scioto Township High School in Wakefield and Ohio State University.

'Y' Offers Swim, Fitness Programs

The Boys' Branch YMCA is offering a special $10 summer membership for boys eight through 17 years of age. Members are entitled to take part in the swimming instruction classes which are provided for boys of all swimming abilities, for non-swimmers through junior life saving.

Physical fitness programs are provided in the Y gymnasiums.

A special athletic conditioning course is planned for older boys who are interested in getting "in shape" or are interested in varsity athletics the next school year.

Anyone interested in YMCA membership information may call the Boys' Branch at CA. 4-1141.

Welding Course Now Available

A new class in welding instruction will start in the Columbus area Tuesday, July 5. The course, under the supervision of the Manpower Development Training organization, will be available to men 18 years of age and up.

The session will be a combination welding training course of 480 hours, lasting 12 weeks.

Information on the entrance requirements and other details of the course may be obtained by stopping in at the Ohio State Employment Service offices at 309 S. Fourth-st.

Here's A Few Helpful Hints

Remove rhubarb seed stalks as soon as they appear. If not removed, valuable food reserves in the plant will be wasted.

Using a sharp knife, cut as close to the base of the plant as possible, but be careful that the adjoining leaf stems are not damaged.

The cut should be on an angle so water won't accumulate in the remaining part of the stem.

When the area doesn't dry, sometimes decay occurs.

Don't plant tomatoes near black walnut trees. The tree roots secrete a poisonous substance, juglone, which causes wilting and eventual death of tomato plants.

This poison remains in the soil for several years after the trees have been removed.

Baxter Retires; Henry To Move

Archie Baxter, 1765 Ardleigh-rd, recently retired from the Ternstedt-Columbus Plant after more than 47 years of service with the General Motors Corporation.

Baxter joined GM at a Fisher Body Plant in Detroit in 1919. He has been with the Columbus plant since 1958, being appointed resident comptroller in 1963.

Plant manager Cal Stacey announced that Lawrence J. Henry has been transferred from the Detroit plant to replace Baxter. Henry is reportedly moving into Arlington.

DANCE SLATED

The Dudes and Dolls Square Dance Club will meet at the American Legion Hall, 4606 N. High-st, Thursday, May 26, from 8 to 11 p.m. Caller will be Bob Doran.

Capital University Plans Festivities For Graduates

The end of the 1965-66 academic year also means the end of a college career for 297 seniors at Capital University. The 105th annual commencement exercises Monday, June 6, will follow two days of senior and alumni activities, June 4 and 5, in a final farewell to the graduates.

Alumni day, June 4, will include a senior class breakfast; a senior art exhibit; class reunions for the classes of 1916, '26, '31, '36, and '41; an alumni board meeting; a nurses' alumnae reunion, a graduation banquet; and a reception for alumni and parents of graduates at the home of Capital University president, Dr. Harold L. Yochum, 805 Francis-av.

A baccalaureate service and an "Under the Stars" evening concert by the University Concert Band will be the highlights of Sunday's activities.

Addressing the 105th commencement class Monday will be William C. Craig, chairman of the department of speech at the College of Wooster. Honorary degrees will be awarded at this time to Craig, Lois Lenski, author and illustrator; T. Kline Hamilton, president of the Diamond Milk Co., Inc., Columbus; and the Rev. Ralph Piper, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Following the commencement exercises will be a commencement luncheon and a reunion luncheon for the Class of 1921.

Shopping Centers To Get Post Offices

Postmaster Victor J. Bodish announced recently that three local shopping centers will be provided with 24-hour a day, 365 days a year basic postal service.

Installation of self-service postal units in the Great Southern, Graceland and Great Western shopping centers has been authorized by Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien.

The units will measure 13 by 31 feet and will stand on an island in the parking area of the shopping center.

In addition to mail boxes with snorkels for drive-up mailing, there will be vending machines for stamps, postal cards, envelopes and minimum package insurance.

Letter and parcel scales, bill and coin changers, postal formation service will be information placards and a available. A specially de- direct-line telephone to the signed depository will accept post office for 24-hour in- parcels.

Jets Close Home Stand Tomorrow

The defending champion Jets, fighting for the loop's top spot, conclude their fourth home stand of the season with single games (8 p.m.) with IL toughie Jacksonville tonight and tomorrow night.

Tonight's clash with the Suns marks "Westside Neighborhood Council Night" while Thursday's finale will be the second "All-Kids Night" of the season with a pony, bicycle and other prizes to be awarded.

Following tomorrow's game the Jets hit the road for series in Toledo, Rochester and Syracuse before returning home a week from Monday (June 13) to open a four-game set with Rochester's Red Wings.

Shriners Plan Show, Meal

The Tri-Village Shrine Breakfast Club has announced plans for the 30th annual spring breakfast and show.

Activities will be held at the Covenant Presbyterian Church, Redding and Ridgecliff-rds June 11.

Breakfast will be served continuously from 6:30 to 7:15 a.m.

The show, entitled "T-V Gay Lay Tees," will be produced and directed by John Noll, assisted by Dick Westhoven.

For ticket information, Shriners from other clubs may contact George Simons at 451-1816.

GUIDANCE---A LINK FOUND

By HAROLD J. TRAPP
Written For The Spectator

People hear about the high school guidance program but few understand what it is. One reason for confusion might be that parents and teachers have been reluctant to accept these programs. But the development of guidance programs indicates a definite need to help students define objectives. Now the State Board of Education requires all schools under its jurisdiction have such a program. There is, however, a more basic purpose for having guidance in our schools.

The school must try to meet the needs of its students. Often this is quite difficult. A guidance program tries to help students understand where their talents lie so that they may have insight into seeking a goal in life.

The guidance program is made up of such services as educational information, vocational and occupational information, counseling, group guidance, testing and follow-up.

These services encompass the cluster of experiences which help the individual student to grow in self-understanding, to make wise decisions, and to do increasingly effective planning. The main purpose is to assist the student to achieve maximum potential in whatever field his talents lie.

Two guidance services are occupational information and counseling. The number of fields of work in today's world is staggering. Through vocational and occupational information students are made aware of many jobs and their requirements. Throughout the year, many business firms, companies and agencies are in contact with high schools. Students become better acquainted with the firms and what is expected from them, should they be hired.

The guidance department at Bishop Ready High School has set up a referral service. Through the aid of the Clarke Association students can obtain the names of people available for interviews. is the area of counseling. This phase of guidance is a one-to-one relationship with a student in which the student is more able to:

a) understand himself and his opportunities.
b) make appropriate adjustments and decisions in the light of understanding.
c) accept the responsibility for his choice.
d) follow a course of action in harmony with his choice.
e) make his own contribution to society.

These are a few principles which are found in guidance programs in high schools.

Arthur Bogen Heads Five-State Council

Arthur D. Bogen, of Bogen, Inc., 490 N. High-st, was recently named by industry colleagues to head up the five-state NWAHACA—affiliated Dealers' Council Region III, which takes in Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, a news release from National Warm Air Heating and Air Conditioning Association disclosed.

Bogen has been active in industry - upgrading movements for a number of years and was a moving force in the formation of Columbus NWA - affiliate Chapter, known as the Heating, Air Conditioning and Sheet Metal Association of Columbus.

The Bogen firm, of which the new Region III Dealers' Council leader is president and general manager, is a family-owned company that is familiarly known to the Columbus citizenry as "Bogen, Bogen and Bogen." It was founded by the late Amor E. Bogen more than 45 years ago and presently has members of the third generation in its employ.

Clean, flameless electric ranges are preferred 2 to 1 for better baking.
Go flameless...put on a happy face!
Women do prefer electric ranges for baking. That's a fact. The reasons are very simple. Best baking results depend on accurate heat control. And electric ovens give perfect heat control because they are precise, electronic instruments. Set the dial at the temperature you want and that is the exact temperature you'll get! Another thing, electric ovens are completely insulated. This keeps the heat in the oven where it belongs. Bakes better, keeps kitchens cooler . . . two thoughtful reasons for going flameless. Site Decision Nears

Tom Quick, Franklin County School superintendent, has expressed the hope that the question of a site for the proposed Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School will be settled at a special noon meeting this Thursday at the county office. The choice has been limited to a site northwest of the intersection of Hamilton-rd and Broad-st owned by the Casto interests; one southeast of Livingston-av and Brice-rd in Reynoldsburg which is owned by Guzzo interests and the section 16 in Madison Township on Hamilton-rd, set aside originally by the Continental Congress for the benefit of Madison and Canal Winchester School Districts. According to Quick, any o fthe three sites is conveniently located and adaptable to the new facility, but the school section probably, if found to be legally available, would have the advantage of being less expensive per acre, even with the expense of installing necessary utilities. He explained that money can be borrowed for land acquisition at any time the board deems it necessary.

R. B. A. Luncheon

The next meeting of the Reynoldsburg Businessmen's Association will be a luncheon meeting to be held at Don's Restaurant on June 15 at noon. The guest speaker will be Alvin Shames, manager of Product Planning with North American Aviation. Shames will speak of "A Company In Transition."

Off To California

Three young men who proved top vote getters in the Ashville IGA contest are packing their bags. They are Steve Cline, Jim Pritchard and Jerry Sabine who each won a jet trip to California. They will take off Monday, June 20 with John Little of the IGA, promoted from store proprietor to tour chaperone. Consolation prizes including bikes and transistor radios went to the next 37 boys tallying the most votes.

The Battle Will Rock

The Trends, Rouges and Emeralds, rock 'n roll combos, will stage a battle of the bands at the Torch A Go-Go tonight (Wednesday) as Groveport's latest recreation facility swings into its second week. More than 700 teenagers showed up at the huge outside dance floor last weekend and with the Rebounds scheduled for Friday night and the Esquires Saturday, Jim Young is expecting even a larger crowd at the torch-lit grounds.

Drownings Feared

At press time no trace had been found of Carl J. Baum, 62, of Groveport and his son and daughter-in-law, Joseph, 27, and Terri, 25, of Canal Winchester, who are believed to have drowned 150 miles north of Quebec, Canada. With a relative from Canton the family group was last seen leaving shore in an outboard motorboat to fish Friday evening. None of the local trio was able to swim. Mrs. Carl Baum who was vacationing with the family was advised to return home by local authorities who told her it might be 30 days before the bodies could be recovered. The capsized boat with life preservers was found Saturday.

THE SHEEPSKIN received by David Saxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Saxton, 5514 Saltzgaber-rd, represents a struggle against odds few could overcome. Severely handicapped since birth by cerebral palsy, Dave earned his diploma the hard way — in his bedroom classroom with the help of his tutor Mrs. Emma Johnston of Canal Winchester who for 12 years has spent an hour every school day with him. Wayne Wilson, president of the Madison Local School Board, is shown with Mrs. Johnston and David at the graduation ceremonies held at his home Sunday afternoon.

A Special Visit Paid To Very Special Lad

The members of the Groveport-Madison class of '66 received their diplomas Sunday evening.

That is—all except one.

That was Dave Saxton, and he was given his that afternoon outside his bedroom door — the bedroom that has been his classroom for 12 years.

This graduation ceremony had a reverse twist.

Dave had a gift for each member of the school board and the administrators who came to his home Sunday afternoon — a several page essay telling the story of the "work, thought, frustrations and satisfactions" that had earned him that diploma.

The well-phrased document, completely unedited by his teacher, Mrs. Emma Johnston ("I want it to be my words, not yours, Mrs. Johnston") dispelled any doubts the board may have entertained on Dave's right to a diploma.

It was a paper any 17-year-old could be proud to say he wrote. For Dave it was a miracle.

Since birth his bright mind has struggled endlessly against the handicap of a body damaged by a brain hemorrhage.

His hands are spastic, his speech faltering and his movement uncontrolled and unpredictable.

Unable to conquer his handicap, he has learned to live around it.

Too unsteady to write legibly, he painstakingly learned to type on a machine with a guard that prevents him from hitting more than one key at a time.

When the jerking of his head made focusing on the page of a book almost impossible, he learned to read and study from materials blown up and projected on a screen.

And when "hit like a ton of bricks" by the intricacies of algebra and biology as a sophomore, he turned up the steam to come through with flying colors and a new found confidence through which "life looked different."

Recalling the gruelling battle" he had with division, Dave attributes much of his success to the patience of Mrs. Johnston who, he claims, not only as a teacher, but as a friend.

Looking back on 12 years of tutoring David, Mrs. Johnson regards her experiences with him as the "epitome of 40 years of teaching."

She pooh-poohs the idea Dave has come so far merely

Junior High Gym Costs $172,975

Bids totaling $172,975 were awarded this week by the Madison Local School Board for construction and accompanying site improvement for the gymnasium to be added to the Groveport - Madison junior high school now under construction.

C. C. Vogel, American Electric Co. and D. F. Hood who hold respectively the general, electrical and mechanical contracts on the main building were the successful bidders. Completion date is Dec. 31.

Movable equipment contracts for the junior high in the amount of $17,444 were granted on basis of low bids to eight firms including the following local businesses: Heer Printing Co., 180 folding chairs at $3.40 each; Capital Equipment Co. of Worthington, 65 folding tablet arm chairs at $11.89 each; Folding Equipment Co., 38 tables of varying specifications totaling $1,558.20; Eriksen's Inc., wardrobe cabinets and teachers' desks totaling $3,389.50 and the Singer Co., 10 electric sewing machines and stools at a cost of $1,527.50. (All bids for filing cabinets were rejected in favor of purchasing them from Lazarus for $503.50.)

Another $21,799.45 bid went to Wasserston Fixture and Supply Co. for kitchen equipment at the new building.

Letting of all these contracts had been delayed until Monday's meeting at which The Ohio Company was named the agent to sell the $1,180,000 bond issue, a step necessary before construction and equipment bids could be okayed.

Neighbors of Asbury Elementary School are expected to welcome the news that the board plans to fence in the school property. With permission granted to the Asbury Baseball League to use the school diamonds this summer, the fencing, with its limited access, should eliminate the problem of foot traffic through adjoining property and motor traffic on the site itself.

Other business included authorization for Madison to loan $6,000 to the Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School District, pending the District's receipt of tax monies after the first of the year. Each of the six participating districts are ex-

Unlocked Doors Could Unlock Bollinger Mystery

By The Spectator's
JOHN AUBLE, JR.

There was Loren Bollinger in that second-floor Fidelity recording studio asking engineer Charles W. Strong and gospel singer Perry Horton to "be sure and lock the doors and telling them both "I'll be along shortly."

That was around 9:20 p.m. that Sunday, May 22. Sometime between then and midnight this respected rocket expert from OSU was shot to death in a sleazy third-floor storeroom above the J & M Grill at 274 S. Third-st.

He was laying there dead on the third floor and down on the second floor where he had been working a few hours before, both doors to the studio were unlocked . . . doors which he was so fastidious about locking because he knew that the studio contained thousands of dollars worth of valuable recording devices.

Loren Bollinger had been in that studio most of the day. He had heard the shrill sounds of the gospel singer and the brassy band which were mainly musicians Perry Horton had brought here with him. Horton was recording an album of gospel music and had been at it since early morning until he left with Strong around 9:20 that night.

During the afternoon, a man named Eugene Wolford of Kenton-rd near Marysville, O., came into the studio with a country-western singer named Helen Rae. Strong had scheduled them in around 12:30 p.m. so that Helen Rae could record during Horton's break, using the same musicians.

Helen Rae recorded two songs, one called "Little By Little" and another called "The Word Is Happiness." After the session, Bollinger and Strong and Wolford talked. Wolford asked Bollinger to spell "happiness." Is it 'in' or 'en'," he asked.

Bollinger grinned. "It's H-A-P-P-I-N-E-S-S," he said with an emphasis on the "I." "You should have known that." Strong laughed with them. There was some small talk about how nice it was to know a college professor at times like these.

Wolford, who somewhat master-minded a series of country music shows at the old Avalon Theater in Marysville until it closed down about a year ago, was so excited about the record that he and Helen left the studio "around 6 p.m." and went over to the Southern Hotel to talk with long-time friend Ron Barlow, a WMNI disc-jockey and former Spectator reporter.

They told Barlow he should go over to the recording studio because the gospel singer "sounded real good" and that "he'll probably be recording until midnight." Barlow thanked them but was on the air that Sunday night and couldn't get away.

But back at the studio Charles Strong said that he and the gospel singer were ready to leave around 9 p.m. They stood around the studio talking to Bollinger for about 20-minutes. The dead man had planned to start a cab company and he talked to Strong and Horton about radio equipment he'd need.

That's when Bollinger told Strong to lock both doors. Strong says he did . . . he's sure he did. WBNS-TV an-

THE 'NEW BREED' AT OHIO STATE

Written For The Spectator By
DAVID HAGLUND and SHELDON KELMAN

This is the first in a three-part series dealing with the 'New Left' on the Ohio State campus. In this exclusive Spectator article, authors David Haglund and Sheldon Kelman identify the groups and examine their philosophies and actions.

The Viet Nam conflict, the civil rights struggle, the poverty problem and other symptoms of what they call a "sick" society have become the focal points of an embittered new generation of leftists on college campuses throughout the United States.

At Ohio State this new breed, seen to be a danger by some people and a farce by others, consists of small tightly-knit chapters of the Progressive Labor Party, Spartacists and the WEB DuBois Club, all of which are national organizations.

The Progressive Labor Party (PLP) is the smallest of the "New Left" groups on campus. Its policies are determined by Stuart Smith, 11 E. 13th-av, a junior in political science, who bears the official title of Midwest treasurer of PLP.

Originally part of the Communist Party of America (CPA), PLP became an independent party, organized along Maoist lines, when the Sino-Soviet split divided the communist ranks in 1960.

Most of PLP's efforts towards achieving its ultimate goal of revolution have been centered in New York City—particularly in Harlem. Although he wouldn't disclose the size of the organization, Smith said that "in the last five years, our hard-line party cadre membership has increased 1000 times."

The Spartacists, while larger than PLP's Ohio State chapter, are also relatively small, claiming fewer than 10 members.

Like PLP, the Spartacists were also originally part of the CPA, having been expelled in 1928 when Trotsky was sent into exile by Stalin.

Like Smith, Houser wouldn't reveal the nationwide size of the organization, although he did say that the party's membership is rapidly increasing.

The DuBois Club perhaps doesn't belong in the "New Left," but it has a fairly large following on campus. It was recently declared a subversive organization by the House Un-American Affairs Committee (HUAC).

Phillip A. Luce, former PLP member now under federal indictment for illegal travel to Cuba in 1961, listed the DuBois Club (along with PLP and the Spartacists) as part of the "New Left" in a speech on campus in May.

DuBois recording secretary Jeffrey Gould, former philosophy major, doesn't agree. "The DuBois Club is merely a club, dedicated to exchanging ideas and backing socialist reforms," he said. He added that since HUAC's action, membership in the club has fallen off at Ohio State, because "most people don't want to be associated with a branded subversive organization."

Site Decision Nears

Tom Quick, Franklin County School superintendent, has expressed the hope that the question of a site for the proposed Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School will be settled at a special noon meeting this Thursday at the county office. The choice has been limited to a site northwest of the intersection of Hamilton-rd and Broad-st owned by the Casto interests; one southeast of Livingston-av and Brice-rd in Reynoldsburg which is owned by Guzzo interests and the section 16 in Madison Township on Hamilton-rd, set aside originally by the Continental Congress for the benefit of Madison and Canal Winchester School Districts. According to Quick, any o fthe three sites is conveniently located and adaptable to the new facility, but the school section probably, if found to be legally available, would have the advantage of being less expensive per acre, even with the expense of installing necessary utilities. He explained that money can be borrowed for land acquisition at any time the board deems it necessary.

R. B. A. Luncheon

The next meeting of the Reynoldsburg Businessmen's Association will be a luncheon meeting to be held at Don's Restaurant on June 15 at noon. The guest speaker will be Alvin Shames, manager of Product Planning with North American Aviation. Shames will speak of "A Company In Transition."

Off To California

Three young men who proved top vote getters in the Ashville IGA contest are packing their bags. They are Steve Cline, Jim Pritchard and Jerry Sabine who each won a jet trip to California. They will take off Monday, June 20 with John Little of the IGA, promoted from store proprietor to tour chaperone. Consolation prizes including bikes and transistor radios went to the next 37 boys tallying the most votes.

The Battle Will Rock

The Trends, Rouges and Emeralds, rock 'n roll combos, will stage a battle of the bands at the Torch A Go-Go tonight (Wednesday) as Groveport's latest recreation facility swings into its second week. More than 700 teenagers showed up at the huge outside dance floor last weekend and with the Rebounds scheduled for Friday night and the Esquires Saturday, Jim Young is expecting even a larger crowd at the torch-lit grounds.

Drownings Feared

At press time no trace had been found of Carl J. Baum, 62, of Groveport and his son and daughter-in-law, Joseph, 27, and Terri, 25, of Canal Winchester, who are believed to have drowned 150 miles north of Quebec, Canada. With a relative from Canton the family group was last seen leaving shore in an outboard motorboat to fish Friday evening. None of the local trio was able to swim. Mrs. Carl Baum who was vacationing with the family was advised to return home by local authorities who told her it might be 30 days before the bodies could be recovered. The capsized boat with life preservers was found Saturday.

THE SHEEPSKIN received by David Saxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Saxton, 5514 Saltzgaber-rd, represents a struggle against odds few could overcome. Severely handicapped since birth by cerebral palsy, Dave earned his diploma the hard way — in his bedroom classroom with the help of his tutor Mrs. Emma Johnston of Canal Winchester who for 12 years has spent an hour every school day with him. Wayne Wilson, president of the Madison Local School Board, is shown with Mrs. Johnston and David at the graduation ceremonies held at his home Sunday afternoon.

A Special Visit Paid To Very Special Lad

The members of the Groveport-Madison class of '66 received their diplomas Sunday evening.

That is—all except one.

That was Dave Saxton, and he was given his that afternoon outside his bedroom door — the bedroom that has been his classroom for 12 years.

This graduation ceremony had a reverse twist.

Dave had a gift for each member of the school board and the administrators who came to his home Sunday afternoon—a several page essay telling the story of the "work, thought, frustrations and satisfactions" that had earned him that diploma.

The well-phrased document, completely unedited by his teacher, Mrs. Emma Johnston ("I want it to be my words, not yours, Mrs. Johnston") dispelled any doubts the board may have entertained on Dave's right to a diploma.

It was a paper any 17-year-old could be proud to say he wrote. For Dave it was a miracle.

Since birth his bright mind has struggled endlessly against the handicap of a body damaged by a brain hemorrhage.

His hands are spastic, his speech faltering and his movement uncontrolled and unpredictable.

Unable to conquer his handicap, he has learned to live around it.

Too unsteady to write legibly, he painstakingly learned to type on a machine with a guard that prevents him from hitting more than one key at a time.

When the jerking of his head made focusing on the page of a book almost impossible, he learned to read and study from materials blown up and projected on a screen.

And when "hit like a ton of bricks" by the intricacies of algebra and biology as a sophomore, he turned up the steam to come through with flying colors and a new found confidence through which "life looked different."

Recalling the gruelling battle" he had with division, Dave attributes much of his success to the patience of Mrs. Johnston who, he claims, not only as a teacher, but as a friend.

Looking back on 12 years of tutoring David, Mrs. Johnson regards her experiences with him as the "epitome of 40 years of teaching."

She pooh-poohs the idea Dave has come so far merely

Junior High Gym Costs $172,975

Bids totaling $172,975 were awarded this week by the Madison Local School Board for construction and accompanying site improvement for the gymnasium to be added to the Groveport - Madison junior high school now under construction.

C. C. Vogel, American Electric Co. and D. F. Hood who hold respectively the general, electrical and mechanical contracts on the main building were the successful bidders. Completion date is Dec. 31.

Movable equipment contracts for the junior high in the amount of $17,444 were granted on basis of low bids to eight firms including the following local businesses: Heer Printing Co., 180 folding chairs at $3.40 each; Capital Equipment Co. of Worthington, 65 folding tablet arm chairs at $11.89 each; Folding Equipment Co., 38 tables of varying specifications totaling $1,558.20; Eriksen's Inc., wardrobe cabinets and teachers' desks totaling $3,389.50 and the Singer Co., 10 electric sewing machines and stools at a cost of $1,527.50. (All bids for filing cabinets were rejected in favor of purchasing them from Lazarus for $503.50.)

Another $21,799.45 bid went to Wasserston Fixture and Supply Co. for kitchen equipment at the new building.

Letting of all these contracts had been delayed until Monday's meeting at which The Ohio Company was named the agent to sell the $1,180,000 bond issue, a step necessary before construction and equipment bids could be okayed.

Neighbors of Asbury Elementary School are expected to welcome the news that the board plans to fence in the school property. With permission granted to the Asbury Baseball League to use the school diamonds this summer, the fencing, with its limited access, should eliminate the problem of foot traffic through adjoining property and motor traffic on the site itself.

Other business included authorization for Madison to loan $6,000 to the Eastern Franklin County Joint Vocational School District, pending the District's receipt of tax monies after the first of the year. Each of the six participating districts are ex-

Unlocked Doors Could Unlock Bollinger Mystery

By The Spectator's
JOHN AUBLE, JR.

There was Loren Bollinger in that second-floor Fidelity recording studio asking engineer Charles W. Strong and gospel singer Perry Horton to "be sure and lock the doors and telling them both "I'll be along shortly."

That was around 9:20 p.m. that Sunday, May 22. Sometime between then and midnight this respected rocket expert from OSU was shot to death in a sleazy third-floor storeroom above the J & M Grill at 274 S. Third-st.

He was laying there dead on the third floor and down on the second floor where he had been working a few hours before, both doors to the studio were unlocked . . . doors which he was so fastidious about locking because he knew that the studio contained thousands of dollars worth of valuable recording devices.

Loren Bollinger had been in that studio most of the day. He had heard the shrill sounds of the gospel singer and the brassy band which were mainly musicians Perry Horton had brought here with him. Horton was recording an album of gospel music and had been at it since early morning until he left with Strong around 9:20 that night.

During the afternoon, a man named Eugene Wolford of Kenton-rd near Marysville, O., came into the studio with a country-western singer named Helen Rae. Strong had scheduled them in around 12:30 p.m. so that Helen Rae could record during Horton's break, using the same musicians.

Helen Rae recorded two songs, one called "Little By Little" and another called "The Word Is Happiness." After the session, Bollinger and Strong and Wolford talked. Wolford asked Bollinger to spell "happiness." Is it 'in' or 'en'," he asked.

Bollinger grinned. "It's H-A-P-P-I-N-E-S-S," he said with an emphasis on the "I." "You should have known that." Strong laughed with them. There was some small talk about how nice it was to know a college professor at times like these.

Wolford, who somewhat master-minded a series of country music shows at the old Avalon Theater in Marysville until it closed down about a year ago, was so excited about the record that he and Helen left the studio "around 6 p.m." and went over to the Southern Hotel to talk with long-time friend Ron Barlow, a WMNI disc-jockey and former Spectator reporter.

They told Barlow he should go over to the recording studio because the gospel singer "sounded real good" and that "he'll probably be recording until midnight." Barlow thanked them but was on the air that Sunday night and couldn't get away.

But back at the studio Charles Strong said that he and the gospel singer were ready to leave around 9 p.m. They stood around the studio talking to Bollinger for about 20-minutes. The dead man had planned to start a cab company and he talked to Strong and Horton about radio equipment he'd need.

That's when Bollinger told Strong to lock both doors. Strong says he did . . . .he's sure he did. WBNS-TV an-

THE 'NEW BREED' AT OHIO STATE

Written For The Spectator By
DAVID HAGLUND and SHELDON KELMAN

This is the first in a three-part series dealing with the 'New Left' on the Ohio State campus. In this exclusive Spectator article, authors David Haglund and Sheldon Kelman identify the groups and examine their philosophies and actions.

The Viet Nam conflict, the civil rights struggle, the poverty problem and other symptoms of what they call a "sick" society have become the focal points of an embittered new generation of leftists on college campuses throughout the United States.

At Ohio State this new breed, seen to be a danger by some people and a farce by others, consists of small tightly-knit chapters of the Progressive Labor Party, Spartacists and the WEB DuBois Club, all of which are national organizations.

The Progressive Labor Party (PLP) is the smallest of the "New Left" groups on campus. Its policies are determined by Stuart Smith, 11 E. 13th-av, a junior in political science, who bears the official title of Midwest treasurer of PLP.

Originally part of the Communist Party of America (CPA), PLP became an independent party, organized along Maoist lines, when the Sino-Soviet split divided the communist ranks in 1960.

Most of PLP's efforts towards achieving its ultimate goal of revolution have been centered in New York City—particularly in Harlem. Although he wouldn't disclose the size of the organization, Smith said that "in the last five years, our hard-line party cadre membership has increased 1000 times."

The Spartacists, while larger than PLP's Ohio State chapter, are also relatively small, claiming fewer than 10 members.

Like PLP, the Spartacists were also originally part of the CPA, having been expelled in 1928 when Trotsky was sent into exile by Stalin.

Like Smith, Houser wouldn't reveal the nationwide size of the organization, although he did say that the party's membership is rapidly increasing.

The DuBois Club perhaps doesn't belong in the "New Left," but it has a fairly large following on campus. It was recently declared a subversive organization by the House Un-American Affairs Committee (HUAC).

Phillip A. Luce, former PLP member now under federal indictment for illegal travel to Cuba in 1961, listed the DuBois Club (along with PLP and the Spartacists) as part of the "New Left" in a speech on campus in May.

DuBois recording secretary Jeffrey Gould, former philosophy major, doesn't agree. "The DuBois Club is merely a club, dedicated to exchanging ideas and backing socialist reforms," he said. He added that since HUAC's action, membership in the club has fallen off at Ohio State, because "most people don't want to be associated with a branded subversive organization."

JUN 1966

nouncer Bill Hamilton — one of seven men (including Bollinger) who have keys to the studio — says he arrived at Fidelity about 1 a.m. with two other men to do some recording.

Hamilton reported that he found both doors unlocked. He couldn't understand why and telephoned another owner of the recording company, Richard Hertenstein, 31, of 500 Lodge-ct in Lincoln Village. Hamilton says he didn't check the third floor where Loren Bollinger was laying dead. He said he had no reason to.

Hertenstein reportedly told Hamilton that "Strong must have forgot to lock them." Strong told the Spectator he's sure that he locked them both.

Hamilton finished his recording and it was not until 7:35 a.m. the next morning that Hertenstein discovered Bollinger's body.

Why were the doors to the studio unlocked? Did Bollinger unlock them expecting to meet a friend? It's unlikely that he'd unlock both doors [illegible] the locks picked by a would-be robber? It doesn't look like they showed no sign of having been tampered with.

Why, then?

HAVE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kocks, 362 Nashoba-av, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on May 16. In honor of this special occasion a Solemn High Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, June 11, at twelve noon at St. James the Less Church, 1652 Oakland Park-av. A reception will follow in the church social hall. The Kocks are parents of 8 children, 3 sons and 5 daughters. They are John of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Bernard of Grove City; William, Columbus; Mrs. Owen Duffy, Akron; Mrs. Robert Kruczynski and Mrs. Michael Wodarcyk, Grove City; Mrs. James Longarbone, Columbus; and the late Mrs. Patricia Tierney. They have 24 grandchildren. John W. Tierney, C. P. P. S., of St. Charles Seminary, Carthagena, O., a grandson, will serve as sub-deacon for the Mass.

Lockbourne Officers' Wives Give Welcome

Members of the Lockbourne AFB Officers Wives' Club greeted newcomers to the base at a special coffee May 18 in the Officers' Open Mess.

Welcomed were Mrs. George Hallenbrook, Mrs. John Maroney, Mrs. Edward Munson, Mrs. Leland Waite, Mrs. Henry Wilson, Mrs. Joseph Nowikowski, Mrs. James Madory, Mrs. Michael Berkey, Mrs. Rex Clemmons, Mrs. John Knight, Mrs. Leo Wurschmidt and Mrs. David Goodnough.

The next newcomers' coffee will be held July 20 at 10 a.m. in the Officers' Open Mess.

Lockbourne WSCS Plans Last Meeting Of Season

The WSCS will have its last meeting before recessing for the summer, Thursday evening, June 9, with Mrs. Forest Doersam, Mrs. James Holloway and Mrs. Edson Doersam, hostesses. Mrs. Harold Peters, Mrs. James Wells and Mrs. Larry Ward are program chairmen.

Rev. Charles Hill received seven new members into the Lockbourne Methodist Church during the worship hour Sunday before last.

Mrs. Bertha Gray recently enjoyed a visit from Mrs. Ray Kuhlwein, who brought pictures and literature of her month long trip to Tulsa and California.

Mrs. Roger Hart has returned home after treatment at Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Mrs. Cecil Shirkey and daughter, Dora, visited Miss Elizabeth Barth in Chillicothe last week.

The Pickaway Women's Republican Club canceled meetings during June, July and August. The meetings will resume in September.

Visit—

by hard work. Stating that he is all too normal a teenager in that he's a master at shirking homework she reports he thinks "cars and music" with a great deal more pleasure than geometry and physics.

According to Mrs. Johnston, it is Dave's ability to reason and his curiosity about the world in which he lives which has made him a student and not merely another pupil who picks up facts like a blotter.

The big question in Dave's mind is "What next?"

Interested in going into business — possibly the used car industry (he has already bought and sold a half dozen at a profit) — he wants to study business administration at a college level.

However his need for speech therapy is recognized, and the family is checking out the potential of a specialized school, a branch of a mid-western university where therapists can supplement the work of his academic professors.

Dave realizes that getting a bachelor's degree is going to present a great deal more problems than even that bright blue arithmetic book that seemed like so much Greek to him 12 years ago.

But he's used to trying the impossible.

Seeing his lack of coordination, it is hard to believe that he can drive an automobile with ease.

But seeing the bright sparkle of intelligence in his eyes and hearing the flash of wit from his unruly tongue it is easy to believe in his dreams for the future.

Dave is one of those who, when dealt a bad hand, is attempting to make the best of the cards he has.

Mrs. Johnston is betting he'll make a grand slam before the game is over.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Buddhists Firing Grisly Hoax

WHITE

WASHINGTON — The most grisly hoax since the early Nazis leaped to power by burning the German Reichstag and framing the Communists for the crime is being undertaken by a handful of "Buddhist leaders" in South Viet Nam.

With a big lie technique similar in principle to the one Hitler used to seize Germany, they are seeking naked power under clouds of fraudulent spiritual motives.

The Buddhist extremist politico-clergymen, who speak not only for a tiny minority of the Vietnamese people as a whole but also for only a minority of their own co-religionists, are exploiting the deep religious tolerance of the Western World to seek the destruction of the regime of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

In the United States, as elsewhere in the civilized world, the mere suggestion that somebody is being persecuted for his religious belief is enough to turn honest public opinion to his side.

The simple fact is that the same pseudo-religious Buddhists who brought about the murder of Premier Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963 are now seeking the destruction of Ky's regime under the same ugly cover of a phony religious issue.

To its shame, the United States under President Kennedy condoned, at the very least, this mortal campaign against Diem. For all his faults, Diem was the most nearly effective national leader against the Communist invaders South Viet Nam has produced to this day.

There are many, this columnist among them, who have never believed Mr. Kennedy would ever have tolerated covert American collaboration with the most cynical of the Buddhist monks had he not been tragically misadvised by other officials.

The crucial point is that the frightful hypocrisy of those "Buddhist leaders" who at last got Diem never came through to the American people. Nor, it seems, does in come through now when the target is Ky.

Reliable American correspondents in Viet Nam have reported in detail the ghastly exploitation by such "Buddhist leaders" of the bodies of women and children put on display for American photographers as "proof" of the brutality of the Ky regime. Armed Buddhist revolutionaries themselves provoked the shooting of these hapless victims.

They are slandering not merely South Viet Nam and, by implication, the United States. Most of all, they are slandering the vast majority of the true Buddhists of South Viet Nam.

The very rock-bottom decencies of the Western world, and of the United States in particular, are being preyed upon by power-grabbing men who by the most generous estimate could never run South Viet Nam, even if they captured it. And it is not being professionally anti-Communist, moreover, to say that some of these men have very close ties, indeed, with other men in North Viet Nam who are the sworn enemies of South Viet Nam.—Copyright 1966 by United Features.

GOLDWATER

President Johnson's attitude toward inflation is the most two-faced ever displayed by a Chief Executive.

With one face he tells Congress they must not cut one cent from his record-smashing spending spree for political welfare programs. With the other face he tells Congress they must not appropriate one cent on their own because that would add to inflation.

The President does not even pretend to play the game on a fair-is-fair basis. He flaps back and forth between twisting congressional arms to spend his way and bending the public's ears with warnings if Congress dares to do anything on its own.

In a classic use of this two-faced system, the President held down his fantastically high budget by knocking out certain programs which he could be absolutely sure Congress would put right back.

The President "economized" by knocking out $52-million for the program that provides milk to school children and $85-million from the program that aids communities whose schools are overburdened by the presence of non-taxpaying federal installations which add children but no income to the local school systems.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee unanimously reported that restoration of such funds was inevitable and that the President must have known it. Of course he knew it. It was a bookkeeping trick intended to make a bad budget look better, and unless the electorate takes this financial double-talking into account, Mr. Johnson will get away with it.

Happily there are strong signs that Congress at least is getting fed up with his "only do it my way" attitude coupled with his efforts to pass the buck for inflation to everyone and everything except where it really belongs—squarely on his swollen spending.

"The President keeps telling us that filling unmet needs is a sort of holy cause," one legislator told me. "We try to do just that, as we did by giving the kids back their milk, and he yells as though we had committed some sort of crime.

"Then he turns around and tells us that he wants to keep spending down to an absolute minimum. So we try to hack some of the fat out of his program—and believe me it's full of fat. What happens? The roof falls in as before."

More power to all such congressmen who are once again beginning to represent their own consciences and the interests of their own people rather than selling out to Presidential pressure, propaganda and the most two-faced efforts at financial finagling we've ever seen. — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

"I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."—Thomas Jefferson

Advice To 'New Left'

This week, The Spectator begins the first of three articles examining the "New Left" at Ohio State University.

The youthful present-day radical abhors all power and organization as a matter of principle and yet both are a necessity.

It might be pointed out that some radical goals, even when achieved, have a way of going awry.

For instance, John Fischer, editor of Harper's Magazine who considered himself a radical in his youth, cites the early thirties when, he says, " . . . it seemed self-evident that the quickest route to universal reform was to muster all the unorganized workers into strong unions. The unions would pressure Congress into a radical remodeling of the economy, so that unemployment would become impossible. Instead of becoming the shock troops of liberalism, the unions quickly petrified into lumps of reaction and special privilege."

Mr. Fischer also enlisted in the farm program of the New Deal. Instead of helping the small farmer, it ended by unintentionally forcing hundreds of thousands of families off land, giving the biggest subsidies to the big farmers and speeding up the mechanization of agriculture.

The end product is still continuing, a river of refugees streaming into the cities. At the same time, American agriculture became the most efficient in history, capable of feeding the hungry of four continents.

The Spectator suggests to these young radicals that they may find it encouraging when they observe for themselves that the established structure of the American society is, in fact, far more porous, loose and pluralistic than they have been taught.

In other words, this is still a land of opportunity.

End Of An Eyesore

The Sensenbrenner administration has taken a giant step forward in urban renewal with the closing and impending demolition of the old Central Market.

Despite a concerted effort by Councilman Ronald DeVore to hold up progress in the Market-Mohawk urban renewal area, the administration set a final deadline and then followed through on it.

There is still an outcry from some misguided citizens who felt the dilapidated, rat-infested building was an "historical attribute" to the thriving downtown area.

The complaints that the downtown area needed a market have been quelled with the promise of a new, modern, clean market at Mound and Fourth-sts, in the same vicinity but out of the congestion that swirls around the old market site.

As The Spectator pointed out in calling for demolition of the market, the controversy was holding up an entire block of Market-Mohawk development.

Now the way is clear for Columbus to move ahead. And the obstructionists have been silenced — at least temporarily.

Very Funny

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

Nobody knows for sure what makes people laugh or what are the elements of humor.

One book said that humor began when two men, some distance apart, were walking parallel paths . . . one through the snow, the other over the ice of a lake.

The man trekking through the snow looked over to his friend on the lake. Suddenly, the ice broke and the man on the lake fell in the water and drowned. Not knowing what else to do, the man in the snow laughed. Thus was the birth of humor.

BEARDSHEAR

That book was pretty funny itself.

But it did serve to point out that the unexpected seems to be a part of humor. Not all, of course. Most people do not laugh after being struck by a bolt of lightning.

Steve Allen once said that tragedy plus time equals humor. In the case above, it would have been more apropos for the man on the snow to laugh a few years later.

Then they would have asked him what he was laughing about and, after hearing what it was, they would have locked him up as a nut.

So Steve's formula is only part of the truth.

But it points out another element in humor: tragedy. By somehow altering the process of tragedy, humor becomes cruel.

There is, I think, something more. In addition to being cruel, humor is basically hostile.

And, humor is also sadistic. One has to take some secret pleasure in riding roughshod over the hurt feelings of others to make laughter come from tears.

This is just a surface analysis. Books could expand the subject.

I just thought it funny that such unlikely things as surprise, tragedy, cruelty, hostility and sadism are parts of such a pleasurable fact of life . . . about as funny as falling through the ice.

They Said It

". . . the latest agreement with the Soviet Union includes agreements in the fields of science and industry, many of which are important in Russia's race to become the Number 1 world power. The length of our gullibility is nothing short of national suicide. These exchanges could make us an ex-nation. But we are cooperating in the boycott of Rhodesia. Boy, are we showing those Rhodesians who's who and what's what!" —Covington (La.) St. Tammany Farmer.

MARQUIS CHILDS: Patron Saint Of Beauty

WASHINGTON — In those grand and glorious days before Bill Moyers' chastening influence, when President Johnson romped around the White House grounds with a flock of reporters, he once held forth on the trials of living in the Executive Mansion. I'm trying to take a nap, he said, and Lady Bird is in the next room with Laurance Rockefeller and 80 ladies talking about the daffodils on Pennsylvania-av.

The daffodils have come and gone, but Lady Bird and what the President called the beauty bit are still in the ascendant. Not only in the capital but across the country her drive to beautify the nation is showing returns. She has contributed above all to a realization that this once beautiful land is being converted into a tunnel of concrete arched with billboards and lined with beaten-up hamburger shacks and old automobile dumps. She moved with unswerving determination but also with political finesse to push the Highway Billboard Bill and other measures to restore the natural landscape.

CHILDS

Recent polls have shown the President slipping in popularity because of Viet Nam and rising prices. If any poll has been taken on Mrs. Johnson this reporter has not seen it, but a safe guess would be that her popularity has risen.

While Mrs. Johnson is careful to insist that she is merely part of a national movement to beautify the environment, many members of Congress have reason to know the discreet pressure she applied to help put over the Billboard Control Bill.

A symbol of the movement to do something about the blight of urban dreariness, Mrs. Johnson has moved about the country as a kind of patron saint of beauty. She went to Peoria, Ill., to dedicate a park that was part of the effort to put new life into the central city. Each such appearance gets national attention and underscores not only the aesthetic values but the practical gains in attracting visitors.

In San Antonio, Tex., she inaugurated a lighting system that was part of a program to create on the river front an atmosphere conducive to the enjoyment of leisure. The citizens who worked for this development, related to a fair to be held next year, were not unaware that convention visitors spend on the average $58 a day. On June 10, Mrs. Johnson will go to Philadelphia to take part in a ceremony inaugurating the restoration of the city's historic center.

Now and then Mrs. Johnson's efforts, such as putting flower boxes on the windows of slum houses, seem like bailing out the ocean of ugliness with a teaspoon. But, in a phase of her endeavors which is not part of the beauty bit, she has shown an awareness of the need to relate the impoverished one-fourth of America to the comparatively affluent three-fourths. This is Project Head Start, the most effective of all the poverty programs in which she has been continuously concerned.

The First Lady organized a committee of a hundred prominent women from all around the country, including many governors' wives, to support Head Start. At one meeting of her committee in the White House, Sargent Shriver, director of the poverty program, talked about visiting a Head Start program in Boston. The pre-school youngsters were shown flash cars and asked to identify common objects. One card showed a Teddy bear. More than half the children said it was a rat. For the women from affluent backgrounds this was a lesson in what slum life means.

Mrs. Johnson has not a little of her husband's tireless energy. They have observed their 31st wedding anniversary, and those years have surely been instructive on how to live at the storm center of a power drive seldom paralleled in American politics. The fierce white light that in this highly personalized nation beats down not only on the President but also on his family can often be cruel. It is a condition of her life that the First Lady has accepted with courage and grace.—Copyright 1966 by United Features.

Letters To The Editor

Break 'Magic Spell'

To The Spectator:

If Governor Rhodes is re-elected for another four year term then we can expect:

Another four years of no new taxes but raises in existing ones plus the issuance of bond debentures in addition to the ones we are now paying interest on to the tune of $531-million a year.

Another four years of state government, controlled entirely by the spoils system. Another four years of government in which the efficiency and political honesty of state employes is not questioned and nepotism runs rampant.

It is time to break the magic spell that seems to have been cast over the state by slick-tongued propagandists, who journey over and around the state citing the so-called wonders of government inaugurated by the present incumbent of the Governor's chair.

Letters for publication must bear the writer's name and address. The editors, at their discretion, may permit use of initials or pseudonyms if this is requested for a good reason. In general, preference will be given to writers willing to take responsibility for their views. Letters should be kept as short as possible. All letters are subject to editing.

Defends Market Stand

To The Spectator:

Regarding your editorial calling Central Market an "Eye-Sore" (May 25, Spectator), let me point out that this condition is due to deliberate premature demolition of the two ends of the building by the Administration who also caused the ADT fire alarm system to be removed.

You are wrong regarding it being infested with rats. It has been protected through the years with continuous exterminator service.

Although your editorial inferred it, I doubt if anyone is so naive to believe I want to keep Central Market as it now stands. It can be rebuilt to conform to every building standard, retain its historical value and be a beautiful asset to the area, at a lesser cost than to demolish it and build a new one. It is not holding up construction in the area. Nothing is presently under contract for the site. Another muddy parking lot will replace it, if demolished.

I've been on top of this matter long enough to know beyond any doubt that Central Market serves to level fresh-food prices over the entire city and suburbs.

If Central Market is destroyed in the name of progress, then the people, as they see fresh-food prices soar, can cry: "What price glory?"

IN & AROUND TOWN

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Vim, Vigor And Vitality

Vim, vigor and vitality abound at the Olentangy Inn. Bill and Glen, two talented young men, are performing nightly at poolside (and in bad weather in the firewater room of the inn). Their legal handle is Bill Morris and Glen Dunne. Bill hails from the deep south and his piano playing and guitar work exemplifies some of the traditional New Orleans style. Glen may be remembered from good ole Columbus town. A graduate of North High, Glen appeared in many amateur and professional stage shows before going to New York. It is here that these two boys met. It is a happy combination for both audience and performer.

Both boys are good looking and clean-cut with lots of ability. They sing well together and individually. Bill is a baritone, whose voice is rich and mellow. He plays piano and guitar with a good strong beat. Glen is a tenor who certainly has a beautiful voice. He has good control and sings with more style and feeling than many of the so-called recording "stars" of today. Together, Bill and Glen sing some very close harmony. Glen also is the hide thumper in the duo. While he plays cocktail drums and not a full set, he is able to obtain some interesting rhythms.

They have a wide range of music that goes all the way from folk music to show tunes with many stops at musical junctions on the way. As I said before, these boys, Bill and Glen, are full of vim, vigor and vitality. And you will be too after hearing them perform.

Miss Dance-O-Rama Crowned

The excitement mounted as the time neared for the crowning of "Miss Dance-O-Rama-1966-67" on TV-4's special "Senior Prom" colorcast on "Dance-O-Rama."

First came the announcement of the members of the court, which includes runners-up Judy Schneider, 55 Riverside-dr, Galloway; Susi Osborn, 79 Marlemont-dr, Westerville; Gay Joslin, 114 Crandall-dr, Worthington; and Patty Taylor, 4421 Marland-dr, Columbus.

Then came the long-awaited moment! With a mixture of laughter and tears, an auburn-tressed beauty, Judy Turner, of 53 Wyandot-pl, Hilliard, accepted her crown from the current "Miss Dance-O-Rama," Becky Alkire, of Circleville, O.

The selection of the new host was the culmination of a three-month study of the qualifications of over 125 entrants in the contest. The judges based their decisions on the poise, appearance, vocal quality and scholastic standings and activities of the applicants.

Judy Turner is a junior at Hilliard High School. She is a member of the Honor Society, Future Homemakers of America, Tri-Hi-Y, Varsity Cheerleaders and several other organizations. Blue-eyed Judy will act as hostess for program host Jerry Rasor of TV-4's "Dance-O-Rama." (See Pix Below)

Waikiki Week-End

For those who enjoy taking long, exciting weekend trips, may I suggest a fascinating Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Waikiki? The cost of this fabulous weekend, including room, meals and entertainment is only $24.95. This does not include transportation. To get there, you jump in your old outrigger (car), head west on Rt. 40 to the Nationwide Inn Motel.

The "trip" includes a "King Neptune" buffet dinner Friday night in the Colony Room. Saturday night a Hawaiian Luau with all the traditional Polynesian excitement, decor and food is held at poolside. There is dancing every Friday and Saturday night to a smooth group of musicians, "The Tradewinds", at poolside.

The Waikiki Week-End also offers a beautiful guest room, continental breakfast at the pool on Saturday and Sunday, a buffet Sunday dinner, swimming and golfing. Waikiki guests can shop at Lazarus West, located next to Nationwide Inn.

If you can't spend an entire weekend at Waikiki, you may drift out to Nationwide Inn for a few hours and enjoy Polynesian food, music and dancing under the stars.

Go-Go West

The Business Association of the Great Western Shopping Center has announced a "Miss Go-Go Columbus" contest to be held at the shopping center on June 17.

The contest, which is open to girls ages 16 through 28, offers many prizes. Girls may be either married or single. Professional as well as amateur go - go dancers may enter.

The local winner of "Miss Go - Go Columbus" receives cash and merchandise and a chance to go to Pittsburgh for the national contest and be crowned "Miss Go-Go-America."

This is not a beauty contest. Judging will be based only on the girl's discotheque ability. In other words, the best dancer, in the eye of the judges, wins the contest.

For a real moving experience, be sure to attend this go-go contest at the Great Western Shopping Center June 17.

'COMMANDMENTS' COMING

Yul Brynner is cast as the evil Pharaoh in Cecil B. De Mille's Biblical spectacle, "The Ten Commandments" in widescreen and Technicolor, scheduled to open Friday, June 10 at Loew's Ohio at popular prices. Charlton Heston is seen as Moses in the giant production.

OCTA Confab Set

The Ohio Community Theatre Association (OCTA) is planning a Central Area Regional Conference at Nationwide Inn June 25.

Representatives from area theatre groups plan an enlarged play excerpt competition. There will be an afternoon and evening session with registration beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Dr. Roy Bowen of Ohio State University's Stadium Theatre will introduce key note speaker, Dr. Charles C. Ritter, assistant professor in the department of speech at OSU. Dr. Ritter will speak on "Play Selections for Community Theatre."

A buffet supper is to be served at 6 p.m. and the annual play excerpt competition will start at 8 p.m. Each theatre group will present an excerpt from their best play of the season. Judges are to pick a best actress and actor as will as best play.

Curtain Players of Westerville are hosting the conference, with Claudia Elkins in charge of arrangements. Anyone interested in attending the conference should contact Carolyn Lane at TR. 8-5449.

Workshop Set

TV-4's soap box derby workshops, hosted by sportscaster Dave Collins, are televised each Sunday at 5:45 p.m.

With diagrams and sample cars, instructors show the boys the best tips on building and driving a car.

Any boy interested in entering this year's race should watch these programs.

Workshop subjects and dates for June are: June 12, wheels; June 19, steering; and June 26, driving.

STARS

Philippa Bevans co-stars in "Arsenic and Old Lace," which begins a two week engagement at Playhouse-on-the-Green Monday, June 13. This is the summer stock tent theatre's 12th season. Money - saving coupons and individual tickets are on sale at Central Ticket Office (Richman's), 37 N. High-st, Sears Northland and Town and Country and Discount Records, Inc., 1956 N. High-st.

FESTIVAL IS SCHEDULED

Henry "Hank" Leeds, promotion director of Northland Shopping Center, announces additional plans for the first Northland annual Summer Music Festival which takes place every Thursday and Friday this summer.

Thursday, June 9, Mrs. Elizabeth Lang continues the festival with an organ recital.

A variety of choral and instrumental groups from the Columbus area will be presented in the succeeding weeks. Concerts begin at 7 p.m. in the Special Events area near the clock tower.

Admission is free. The public is urged to bring pillows, folding stools, or otherwise provide their own seating.

GATE 10

Stadium Theatre's 17th annual season opens June 22 and continues for eight weeks through Aug. 14. The theatre is Central Ohio's pioneer summer theatre and is an arena theatre specially built each summer under the stands of Ohio Stadium.

The 1966 season includes two musical productions, two popular comedies, the Central Ohio premiere of a new play by Robert Anderson and the first summer theatre production of a recent English avant garde drama.

Opening the season for an 11 - performance run from June 22 to July 2 is the popular Broadway musical comedy "Bye Bye Birdie." Following on July 5 is the comedy "Mr. Roberts." Then Stadium Theatre produces the Central Ohio premiere of Robert Anderson's "The Days Between." This play, written by the author of "Tea and Sympathy" is produced under the auspices of the American Playwrights Theatre.

"The Doctor in Spite of Himself" is to be given beginning July 19. One of the highlights of the '66 season will be Harold Pinter's "The Birthday Party." Stadium Theatre's presentation of this British drama will be the first in an American Summer Theatre and only the fifth in the United States. Concluding the 1966 season will be Rodgers and Hammerstein's beautiful and fascinating musical play, "The King and I."

Stadium Theatre has also announced that it is now taking applications for ushers for this season. Anyone living in the area is welcome to apply. One is asked to usher one night each week during the summer season. Of course one may usher as many nights as one desires. In return for this service, ushers may watch the shows.

UA Thins, Eagle-Stallion Game Topped '65-'66 Thrills

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Trying to capsule a full schoolboy athletic year into one story is an impossible task — especially this past '65-'66 "season."

Certainly, a bucketful of outstanding performers and performances will be passed over without report. The job is as difficult as naming a single "Squad of the Year" (UA's cindermen) and single "Top Athletic Contest of the Year" (Watterson-DeSales football game).

BUT BORROWING from the courage of our own "Fearless Predictor," we have attempted below to skim across the high points of a bountiful, exciting and thoroughly enjoyable school athletic calendar.

For the composite record, Arlington paced all schools with laurels in football, basketball, swimming and track (plus fielding an outstanding but league-less baseball squad).

Reynoldsburg was close behind with championships in football, basketball, track and baseball. Next followed East with basketball, wrestling and track honors.

SCHOOLS capturing league titles in two sports were Gahanna (football and track), DeSales (wrestling and track), Watterson (football and baseball) and Pleasant View (football and basketball).

FOOTBALL

Both Marv Moorehead's Golden Bears and Dick Walker's Eagles closed with perfect, unbeaten seasons and held high state rankings.

Fans who drooled for a meeting between the two powers will get their wish—this coming fall.

UA FINISHED with an 18-game winning skein and the final CBL grid title (Bears enter Central Ohio League next spring after independent scheduling for '66 football and basketball).

Highlight was 13-6 win over Whitehall (both entered game at 5-0) in which Bears scored in final minute of each half to win.

Watterson's key victory came two weeks later with an 18-14 verdict over unbeaten DeSales, mentored by "Treeze" Sharrock, with Kevin Ryan's TD in the last 67 seconds serving as the clincher.

JACK RYAN'S Hartley Hawks, paced by hard-driving fullback Scott French and Jim Veeley's Ready Knights, gave the four-team CCL perhaps the toughest lineup of squads in Central Ohio.

Reynoldsburg nabbed the final Franklin County League title, largely on the strength of a come-from-behind 20-18 victory over St. Mary — the latter enjoying an 18-0 lead until late in the third period.

Brookhaven reversed a 6-0 setback to East in '64 with a defense-loaded like win over the Tigers, replacing East as City champ.

QUICK-SILVER halfback Steve Kesterson, a '65 All-City repeater, was a dominant factor in Jim Anderson's Bearcats' success story.

Marion-Franklin, with Jim Harper at the helm, was City runnerup for the second straight season and showed one of the area's top pitching quarterbacks in Dale Darnell, soon to select OSU for college.

The big return of the passing game filled area stadiums like North's where Jack Roth proved to be another top flinger.

ANOTHER passing quarterback — Pleasant View's Charlie Hess — helped Don Eby's Panthers to the last South Suburban League grid title.

George Troutman's Gahanna crew was a surprise repeater in the topsy-turvy Mid-Eight race, the Lions keyed by fullback Dave Belli, who outrushed the entire opposition in six of nine games.

BASKETBALL

"AA" tourney kings were Bob Hart's East Tigers and Vince Chickerella's Linden Panthers who joined with West to provide the City League with the top cage spotlight.

TWO TOP '65 squads—South and University—who didn't fare too well in the regular season provided the "Cinderella" entries.

In the Mid-Eight League, Perry Reall's Hilliard Wildcats, who boasted their own brother combo (Dave and Dan Walker) surprised the "experts" by gaining a share of the loop title with perennial favorite Grove City.

ARLINGTON, with ex-OSU star Doug McDonald at the helm, added the CBL cage title to its football honors.

WRESTLING

With District champ East, Worthington and DeSales showing the way, area grapplers made their best showing in local memory at the State Meet.

Worthington's John Chrystal won the state title at 154 (only the third area matman to do so in recent years).

ANOTHER individual standout was Whitehall junior Steve Beery, who went unbeaten and won his third straight District title at 120.

League champions were Groveport in the Mid-Eight, East in the City, DeSales in the CCL and Franklin Heights (paced by a pair of lightweights — Roger Branham and Dick Grambo) in the SSL (all but East repeaters).

SWIMMING

John Bruce's UA Golden Bears nabbed most of the headlines again by repeating as COSL and District champs and losing only one meet all season.

BEAR CO-CAPTAIN Roger Jones provided the area with its lone State champion in the butterfly event.

Hard work evidently paid off for UA. Bruce estimating his squad to have swum some 110 miles during the season.

TRACK

Long-time Arlington coach Dick Larkin tabbed his '66 unit as the best he had ever coached, the Bears' perfect 17-0 season speaking for itself.

PACED BY such standouts as sprinter Skeet Hopkins, high jumper Glenn Kohl and broad jumper Tom Spies, the Bears impressed everywhere they traveled throughout the state and were truly in a "class all their own" on area ovals.

Gahanna, with hurdler Mike Bokros showing the way, gained its fourth straight Mid-Eight title despite a fine Hilliard squad, paced by such standouts as sprinter Bill Humes and discus flinger Pete Miller.

Other area champs included Whitehall in the Metro, East in the City, DeSales in the CCL and Reynoldsburg in the FCL.

THE RAIDERS' title came despite a one-man show by Canal Winchester's Jim Burke, an Indian standout all spring.

An ankle injury sidelined St. Mary's four-event star Mike Hodge at the FCL Meet, adding to the misfortune which seemed to dog Ray DeCola's Rams all year.

Carroll, behind sprinter Steve Fridley, won the "A" District title while East's Sol Espie proved to be the lone area champ (100-yd. dash) at the State Meet two weekends later.

BASEBALL

FRANKLIN Heights' hurler Mickey Pless stole most of the diamond headlines by twirling three no-hitters.

Bob Nolan's South baseballers made the biggest title noise by taking an undisputed City League flag for the first time in 32 seasons after losing two of their first three loop tilts. Strong pitching and a tight defense paced the Rebs.

Other flag winners were Watterson in the CCL, Reynoldsburg in the FCL, latecomer Mifflin in the Mid-Eight and Whitehall in the Metropolitan.

ED LEWIS' Falcons and Moe Cordle's "Cinderella" Walnut Ridge nine shared District baseball tourney honors.

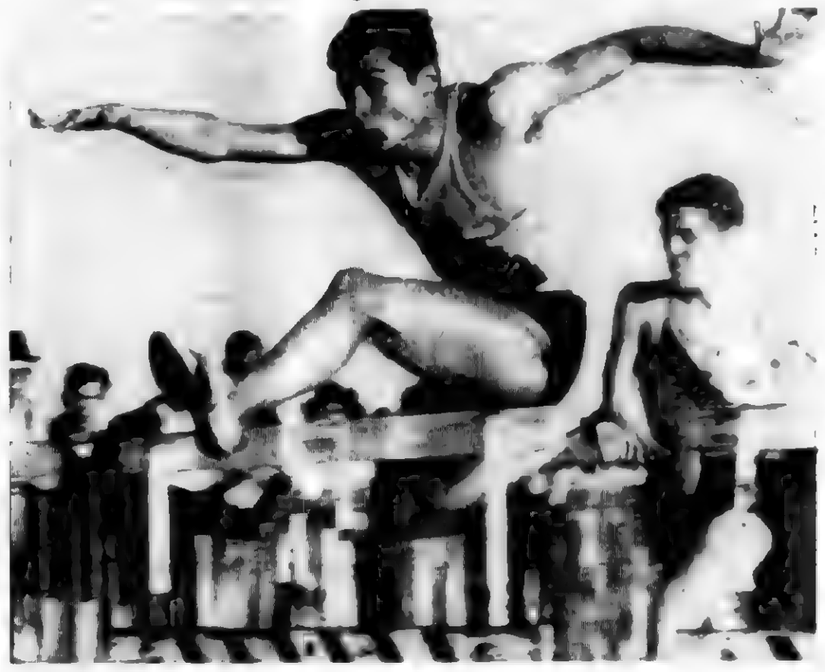
Top diamond marks were collected by South and Whetstone (12-3), Arlington (17-6) and Worthington (16-6).

BESIDES Pless' three no-hitters, hitless efforts were turned in by Brookhaven's Jack Hoopes, St. Mary's Phil Corbett, F-H's Ray Malone, P-V's Carl Salyers, Grove City's Andy Cotner and West's Walt Richards — the latter the only no-hit author to lose his game.

In the field of gymnastics, South High's Bruce Trott singlehandedly brought the school the state gymnastic runnerup trophy.

Walnut Ridge's Pat Beveridge was named to both All-City football and basketball teams while Reynoldsburg's Gary Shade did likewise in the FCL — besides being selected on the loop baseball team.

BISHOP READY paced coaching changes, releasing both head football coach Jim Veeley and diamond mentor Bud Trapp.



Elsewhere, Walnut Ridge and ex-East High mentor Ralph Webster stepped down from active coaching after a long and fruitful career, while South cage mentor John Colmery, who coached the Rebs to a state championship in 1965, moved on to OSU.

Tragedy struck both Worthington and Whetstone as a pair of varsity Cardinal swim stars — Dave Burt and Chuck Shupe — were killed in an auto accident and cancer claimed Brave sophomore standout Jim Pierce.

MANY OTHER outstanding teams deserve recognition (such as Whetstone's golf team which won CL title for third straight and Bexley's fine tennis team).

But space dictates that we must bid farewell to 1965-66 and look forward to the next season — when new champions, new individuals and new athletic thrills are sure to come to the fore.

Bear Cindermen – Spectator's Top '65-'66 Squad

A PERFECT dual record (5-0) against six of Central Ohio's top track squads plus victories in 12 other major cinder events (including Sectionals, District and Regional) earns Dick Larkin's Golden Bear squad The Spectator's nod as the '65-'66 season's top athletic squad. Above, hurdler Bruce Sanders exemplifies UA's position all spring—first place—by winning at school's invitational.

Watterson Vs. DeSales

WATTERSON won this one, 13-6, in final 67 seconds of play, capping headon battle between Eagles and Stallions (both entered game at 7-0) in rough, tough Central Catholic League dogfight. Game edged Arlington's win over Whitehall, Reynoldsburg's victory over St. Mary and Brookhaven's blanking of East as season's top single athletic contests in Spectator consideration. Pitching Paces Opening Games In Pony-Grad

Pitching was the keynote in opening games of the Eastern Ohio Pony Grad League last week.

Otis Ross fired a no-hitter as the South Side Merchants blanked Licking Heights, 7-0.

..SHADYWOOD'S Dave Meites missed the same distinction by only one pitch as he shutout Reynoldsburg on a single safety, fanning 17 batsmen enroute to a 5-0 verdict.

Gahanna managed but one hit off Avery pitching as the latter chalked up another 5-0 victory.

In other games, the Warhawks edged the Jr. Hawks, 4-3, and the Whitehall Rams and Columbus Tigers battled to a six-inning 5-5 standoff with Mike Case pitching for the Rams and Kapko going for the Tigers.

Espie, Bokros To Head Area Hopes At Classic

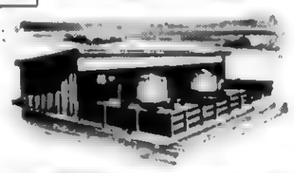
East sprinter Sol Espie and Gahanna hurdler Mike Bokros pace area hopes Saturday at the third annual Ohio Classic, scheduled this year in Maumee, just outside Toledo.

Espie, recent state champion in the 100-yd. dash, will compete in that event plus the 220 while Bokros will shoot for honors in both low and high hurdle events.

OTHER AREA representatives include: Arlington's Skeet Hopkins (440), Grove City's Jim and Jerry Docherty (two-mile), Gahanna's Nelson Bobb and Hilliard's Bruce Adams (shot put), Hilliard's Pete Miller (discus), Central's Tony Jones and UA's Glenn Kohl (high jump) and South's 880 relay unit (Tony McQueen, Ken Latham, Bill McCall and John Turner).

Alternates include Gahanna's Ron Doran in the 440 and West's Chuck Starkey in the mile.

Meet participants are selected by the Ohio Track Coaches Association, sponsors of the meet. Field events will get under way at 12:45 with running events set 15 minutes later. All 15 events will be finals.



RECENTLY crowned "AA" State champion Glenville paces the Classic field with nine individuals and its 880 relay foursome on the invitation list.

'Get Growing' For Franklin County Fair

The Floriculture Department of the 1966 Franklin County Fair will be entered in competition with other fairs in the state, according to Mrs. Philip N. Reger of 468 Darbyhurst-rd, publicity chairman.

The entire show, which is scheduled for Aug. 16 and Aug. 18 at the Franklin County Fair, will be evaluated by an accredited judge. The evaluation will be entered in the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs state competition and compared with evaluations of other state shows.

Winners on the county level will be picked by OAGC.

"The time to plant for the 1966 Franklin County Fair competition is now," says Mrs. Reger.

Individual winners in that show will be awarded ribbons for first, second and third place.

Mrs. Reger reminds potential exhibitors that an Exhibitor's Pass must be purchased before entries are made. Cost is $3. Passes can be obtained from The Franklin County Fair at Hilliard, O.

Specimen classes for the Tuesday, Aug. 16, Franklin Fair exhibition include:

1. Foliage plant (no flower required: height maximum, three feet).
2. One geranium (one plant).
3. Tuberous begonia (one plant).
4. Any other begonia (one plant).
5. African violet (one plant: single bloom).
6. African violet (one plant: double bloom).

ADD THAT LOVELY TOUCH

The foundation entrance planting should be green and fresh all year long. This is best accomplished by evergreens with a sprinkling of flowering shrubs and plants. Notice how the effective use of evergreens and shrubs enhance the beauty of this home.

Lawn and Garden SECTION

JOYCE LOUGHMAN, EDITOR

Thoughts Of An Amateur . . .

By The Spectator's JOYCE LOUGHMAN

We all seem to be sitting around talking about juvenile delinquency but unable to do much about it. This past March, during a garden show, I was amazed at the number of young people, eight and nine years old, who were asking questions (some more intelligent than those asked by the adults) about the care of plants.

This is the picture we all seem to miss. There is a chance to open up "new" fields of interest for these youngsters. We all say "Junior" has a natural talent for art; "Junior" likes to read; but have you ever seen a child that didn't like to dig in the dirt . . . get a little on his face and wear it under his nails? Meanwhile parents are often scolding. Isn't it about time we took advantage of this and started a program of educating children in the wonders of gardening, both inside and out?

It really wouldn't be too hard an undertaking. A small spot in the garden or a potted plant is all that is needed to start. The only thing that seems to be lacking is adult patience and fortitude.

And what would be wrong with using this knowledge to benefit the mentally ill or retarded? It is being done in a very small way but why not let these programs expand into trips to garden centers or to nurseries?

And then there is always the possibility of someone working out the problems of starting classes in flower care. Someone could donate the use of a large greenhouse and a teacher could be found. Certainly it would be of great interest during the winter months for at least one evening a week. I think it would "snow ball," because anything good always catches on with the public.

The only question now is are you the one that is willing to accept the responsibility of starting such projects? The sense of peace and security that you would be providing for all ages would be quite a contribution to a very unsettled world.

Need An Answer?

I like woods violets but not in my perennials. Is there any way to get rid of them?

MCR, Columbus,

Just start digging and keep hoeing. This will keep the young plants from becoming established.

Please tell me if this is the right time to prune spirea. Our bushes are much too tall and shaggy.

Jane, Bexley

Prune your spirea anytime after it has finished blooming. Cut out all unwanted older branches and weak, crowded new ones.

SPEAKER IS SLATED

Dr. Paul R. Miller, 340 E. State-st, medical director of the Franklin Society for Crippled Children's Treatment Center, will be the guest speaker for the Parents' Group of the society Wednesday, June 15, at 7:30 p.m. at 555 S. Monroe-av.

OSU Horticulturists Reveal Variety Of Useful Hints

Cucumbers don't cross pollinate readily with muskmelons, watermelons, pumpkins, or squash, say Ohio State University horticulturists. And if cross pollination does occur, the result wouldn't show up until the fruit is harvested from the seed of this year's crop. Some cucumber varieties will cross pollinate with other cucumber varieties. And, summer squash will cross with pumpkins, but pumpkins and winter squash can be planted close without crossing.

If you haven't had a chance to get your rose garden started yet, it's not too late. Simply buy and set out potted roses. In contrast to dormant, bare-root plants, potted roses have the advantage that you can see exactly what you're getting. Plant them in a sunny spot that is well-drained. All roses should receive the equivalent of an inch of water a week.

Summer plantings of most vegetable seed should be deeper than spring plantings. The soil usually is drier in the summer. Seeds planted deeper will be more likely to be in close contact with moist earth.

Firming after covering the seed also is desirable. If water is available, soaking the furrow the evening before planting will help. Then mulch lightly with straw, shavings, ground corn cobs, or similar material after the seed is planted and covered with sufficient soil.

Savoy King cabbage is a new hybrid excellent for Ohio gardens. For a fall crop, sow the seed around June 10-15. The plants should be ready for setting in the garden in about four weeks.

Deep cultivation damages roots of vegetables. Don't cultivate any deeper than one inch.

Believe it or not; it's not too early to start planning for next year's garden. Begin by starting a compost pile in a convenient place in your garden. You can pile up leaves, old grass, pulled weeds, lawn clippings, sawdust, sod, soil or animal manure. Avoid using any diseased plants.

White, gray, or yellow slimy masses in round or irregular patches growing over the grass blades in your lawn are harmless. And if let alone, they'll probably disappear soon.

These masses, called slime mold, are common in spring but may occur during midsummer or in the fall following heavy rains. The colored masses dry to form bluish-gray, gray, black, or white powdery structures. They can be removed with garden rake or forceful spray from a garden hose. If the slime mold continues to appear, you may want to drench the area with one of the common turf fungicides.

Keeping wild onions and garlic out of your lawn can be difficult. U. S. Department of Agriculture agronomists recommend using a herbicide - a low volatile ester form of 2,4-D at the rate of ⅛ to ¾ ounces of active ingredient per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Always follow label instructions for precautions and use.

Chrysanthemums Need Doses Of Fertilizer

Garden chrysanthemum are ready for fertilizing, according to Ohio State University.

An initial application of fertilizer when the plants were planted in the spring should be followed by monthly applications of a complete fertilizer such as 4-12-4, 5-10-10, 5-10-5, 4-16-16 or similar analysis at the rate of ¾ lbs. per 100 square feet.

Fertilization should continue until October.

Be sure to syringe fertilizer off the foliage of the plants with clear water.

Make Reservations For OAGC Meet

A meeting of Ohio Associa-ty hits, slides of Wahkeena, tion of Garden Club members of Franklin County will be held Thursday, June 23, 1 until 3:30 p.m. at Cedar Ridge Lodge at Darby Creek Metropolitan Park, Koebel Suydam-rd, south of Route 40, west of Columbus.

A presentation of OAGC information including publici- yearbook and therapy information, State and County Fair schedules, will be given.

Registration fee is 50 cent. Registration is from 12:30 until 1 p.m.

Reservations should be sent to Mrs. Philip N. Reger, 468 Darbyhurst-rd, Columbus, O., 43228, by June 10.

On The Lawn

By LARRY LAWRENCE

Here's a provocative question from a man who writes me from Maryland: "As a practical matter, what in your opinion is too large a lawn for a hand mower? I have a power mower of course but dislike using it. By the time I buy gas and service it I feel that cutting could have been well under way with a good hand mower."

The swing back to hand mowers has been remarkable. In fact, in a country where we are all supposed to detest physical effort of any kind, it is phenomenal. Yet, when you think about it, it is understandable. Many people dislike the noise and smell of a gas engine and the need for service. A hand mower is quiet, safe, doesn't smell and seldom needs fixing.

How can I answer that backhanded question? Obviously it depends on both the machine and the pusher. The old clickety-clack mower took real effort whereas the new silent models are easy to push as a grocery cart. With one of these, anyone — and I don't mean a teenager — should be able to cut a 50'x50' lawn in half an hour. I know a man in his seventies who keeps 10,000 sq. ft. looking immaculate and does it all by hand. He cuts it a bit at a time.

Inflation In Fruits? Grow Your Own . . .

What will the American family do for fresh fruit if prices keep rising due to inflation? Will peaches some day cost a dollar each, or an apple about as much? Pears in the markets may be 15 cents or more each today.

Not so long ago, apples could be bought for a dollar or two a bushel, but not any longer. Today in the stores they cost from a dime apiece up to a quarter for the choicest fruit.

The average family doesn't have to go without what may soon become the luxury of fresh fruit, says the American Association of Nurserymen. It can plant its own fruit trees.

A small dwarf tree fruit orchard can be planted in a space only eight feet wide by 24 feet long and give you all the family fruit you want. Planted on eight-foot centers in a single row of trees, this would allow a family apple, pear, peach and plum tree. Twice as many dwarf trees can be planted in an area double that size. Dwarf fruit trees make good screens when planted in a row.

In France, choice peaches are grown on espaliered trees along fences. Peaches in America even come in shrub form for planting where space is extremely limited.

In the semi-tropical areas orange, grapefruit, avocado, and other fruit and nut trees require more space, but orange and grapefruit are not large trees. There is room for one or two such trees on practically every southern property.

Grapes can also be grown in small areas.

Every dollar's worth of fruit today may be worth two dollars in a comparatively few years. A home fruit garden should not cost more than $15 upward, depending on variety and number of trees, while producing plenty of fruit for the family. Spraying with a dormant spray and all-purpose sprays at two-week intervals takes no more than 15 or 20 minutes for a few trees up to a half hour or more for a family fruit garden. The sprays can be purchased at any garden store or nursery and they are ready to apply with the addition of a little water.

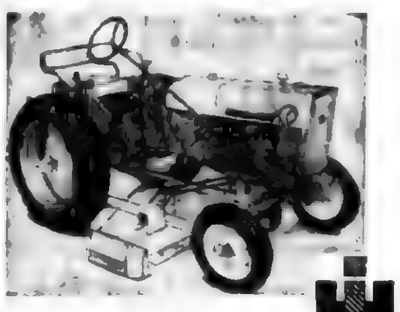
Inflation makes a good supply of home fruit an economic and healthful asset for a growing family.

Specialist Advises Care With Pesticides

It is important to read the fine print on the container when applying pesticides, insecticides and fungicides, according to Dr. D. Lyle Goleman.

Useful as they are, it is often the case that "familiarity breeds contempt."

Trouble can start with the plants or even with the applier himself if care is not taken.



Dr. Goleman, extension specialist in Agricultural Chemical Residues at The Ohio State University can provide a leaflet from the United States Department of Agriculture called "Safe Use of Pesticides in the Home and in the Garden."

TYPICAL of the "little" hat is this 1966 version of the famous skull cap of the 30's. It is shaped of powder pink felt with a white camellia to soften the line around the face.

YOUR Write SIDE

The Spectator's handwriting expert, Mary G., can give you a scientific analysis of your own character traits. Simply send a sample of your handwriting, along with $1 in cash, check or money order, to: Mary G., The Spectator, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, Ohio.

By The Spectator's
MARY G.

DEAR MARY G.:
I am very interested in how you are able to do this.

very interested

Many others have asked the same question until I feel a little more knowledge should be given regarding Graphoanalysis. It is a recognized science telling the character and personality traits of an individual through handwriting.

In using this science we can tell from your individual strokes and letter formations such traits as jealousy, humor, resentment, your emotions, talents and thinking pattern.

With proper evaluation, it is easy to tell, from the positive and negative traits, how the individual will react and fit in with society. For instance you have an abundance of generosity as shown in the way you finish your d in the word "interested."

The uses of this science are many, selecting personnel for good working conditions, parents better understand their children and vice versa, police can use it in forgery detection and questionable document work and actually the possibilities are unlimited.

A PRETTIER YOU

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

If you can tell a gaiter from a garter . . . if you know why "construction" may be better in a skyscraper than in a suit . . . if you know what goes with (and under) this year's slip of a dress — then fashion experts would call you pretty smart, in every sense of the word.

Now I've been working with Central Ohio ladies for the past twenty-some years . . . and I know how smart they are . . . but just for fun, let's test your nose for fashion news by seeing how many of these questions you can answer.

1. Why are there now two sides to the fashion fabric story?

2. What is the unconstructed look? What's good about it?

3. Why do the new fashions require a new kind of girdle?

4. Would you wear gaiters with (a) slacks (b) swimsuit (c) your newest suit or coat?

5. Are the latest hats big and bold . . . or small and and close to the head?

6. What accessory are smart girls borrowing from racing drivers?

7. Name three dazzling new uses of Vinyl . . . other than rain-gear.

8. Whatever happened to the strapless evening dress?

9. Where, besides in fashionable outerwear, can you find bias cut?

10. Are the new coat shapes small . . . or daringly flaring?

Now for the answers . . . are you ready?

1. Double - faced fabrics add an extra helping of "bazazz" to current clothes. Very often the flip side of a coat or jacket matches the color and fabric of the dress underneath. Or, a checked or striped suit can be made to look even snappier when trimmed and double - faced in a coordinated solid color.

2. "Unconstructed" clothes have natural charm. Thanks to skillful cutting and sewing, suits and coats can hold their shape without inside stiffeners like canvas or muslin. As easy to wear as a sweater . . . and not much bulkier . . . these garments can actually be rolled up for carefree carrying and packing. In dresses, the unconstructed look means shape . . . currently a slim, unwaisted and free - moving shape . . . without a welter of darts and complicated seams.

3. Today's lithe and limber clothes demand foundations that control without cramping your style. This means airy fabrics like Spandex, and designs that take the bind and pull even out of panty girdles. For example, Sarong's newest, appropriately named "So - Freee", Unlike conventional panty girdles, which are designed in continuous line from leg to leg, it has entirely separated legs for maximum freedom and movement. To make motion even more free and easy, Spandex front and back panels adjust to your stride . . . or, says the manufacturer, to your Frug!

4. (c) Gaiters, says the dictionary, are coverings for ankle and instep, or for the leg from instep to knee. But this dry definition doesn't hint at the fun and fashion potential of these accessories, which currently rise to several inches below the knee. Try beige or gold gaiters with a brown coat or suit or maybe bright red ones to spark a red plaid outfit. A word of caution: since gaiters snap over shoes and leave a large portion of shoe leather visible, be sure they also harmonize with footgear.

5. Small and headhugging . . . in all kinds of fabrics . . . are tops. But nobody has banned big, striking hats. . . especially for those who can wear them. Just remember . . . big hats are not for little girls.

6. Their gloves . . . the newest ones have racy cutouts like the racing gloves.

7. Beach cover-ups; shifts; slacks and tops; hats; scarves; evening coats and even evening dresses! New fashion uses are being devised all the time, partly because vinyl is now softer and more supple, easier to work with. And it's available in matte as well as shiny surface.

8. It's back . . . look for it in both short and long versions.

9. In foundation garments, which are more supple and easy - moving because of the bias cut. There's even bias construction in bras to adjust to your every move and breath you take.

10. Sometimes both! Plenty of narrow coats are to be seen, and they are perfect mates to the lean little dresses. But some of the freshest looking coats play it close to the chest (and shoulder), then flare out boldly for a wide hem.

Well . . . how did you do? If you were the gal who knew all the answers . . . or only eight of them . . . I'm proud of your fashion sense. Five to seven right answers make you pretty smart . . . though not quite a model of fashion knowledge. But even if you scored four or less, you now have the facts, ma'am, and you can use them to look lovelier and save (what else?) a pretty penny.

Eliminate Old Troublesome House Windows With Low-Cost Nu-Sash

Unique New Replacement Unit is Installed Easily and Economically to Modernize Home

Costly problems caused by old-fashioned, troublesome, hard-to-wash house windows are quickly and economically answered for homeowners who need to modernize. Nu-Sash, a unique new product that has gained fantastic success in thousands of homes, provides the easy solution.

Nu-Sash is an aluminum unit specifically designed to replace old windows — at about 40% in savings over other methods of replacing.

One Low Price

One low-price includes complete installation. The reason Nu-Sash are so economically priced is due to the unique and exact method of installation.

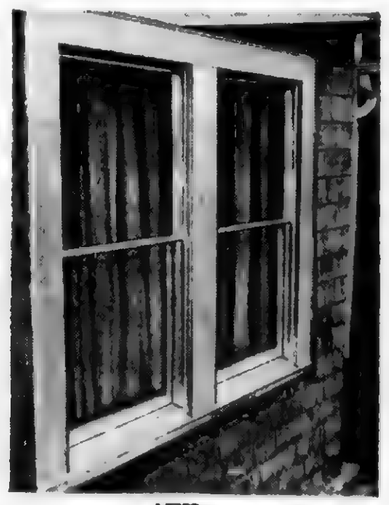
No outside work or renovating is required. Plaster and woodwork are never disturbed. The old sash are removed, new side jamb liners are fitted into place, then the Nu-Sash units are inserted. The average window can be converted in about 20 minutes.

Nu-Sash replace most all types of house windows. Picture window models are available to replace old-fashioned twin and triple units. A heavy duty model is available for schools, apartments, and commercial buildings.

Nu-Sash replacements are so sturdy that test results show the window superior to standards set up by FHA for new-house construction requirements.

Nu-Sash Pays For Itself

Savings in heating bills and air conditioning will pay for a Nu-Sash conversion. Other costly painting, puttying, and constant maintenance are eliminated.



The windows are constructed entirely of rigid vinyl and aluminum. A satin-like anodized protective coating keeps the aluminum finish bright and new looking for years.

Complete fiberglas insulation all around the window, as well as complete full weatherstripping, seals out cold, dust, dirt, drafts, and air.

As an important and permanent addition to the home, Nu-Sash qualify for low interest home improvement loans. Additional details and free literature about this replacement window are available by mailing the coupon.

BEFORE:
These old unsightly wood windows were rotted, hard to open, let in dirt and air.

AFTER:
Nu-Sash, installed here, has economically updated home, seals tight against weather, never needs paint.

Trojan 4-H Horse Club Sixth Annual Show Set

The Trojan 4-H Horse Club will hold its sixth annual horse show Saturday, June 11, at Kitsmiller's Riding Stables, Gahanna.

The show will begin at 1 p.m. with 18 qualifying classes for Franklin County 4-H members. At 6 p.m. is a junior open show, open to all junior riders 21 years old and younger. There will be both Western and English classes, including equitation, pleasure and contest competition.

This will be the second of four qualifying horse shows sponsored by Franklin County 4-H Clubs during the 1966 season. Members and their project horses earn points at the four qualifying shows and at the horse show at Franklin Fair at Hilliard in August. Members with the highest number of points will represent Franklin County at the Ohio State Fair.

Trophies and ribbons will be awarded in all classes and prize monies paid in performance classes. Judges will be Paul Peboto, Western, and J. E. Whitehead, English.

Gahanna-Lincoln Students Set New Endurance Record

Jerry Serafini, 3465 Hamilton-rd, son of Mrs. Mary Serafini, and Paul Medbery, 627 High-st, Blacklick, O., son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Medbery, recently set a new chess endurance record.

Their accomplishment, a 54-hour chess marathon conducted out-of-doors in front of the Gahanna Police Department on Mill-st.

To win a $2 bet with a teacher, to prove a point, and for whatever other reasons students of this decade resort to such endeavors (similar to Volkswagen and telephone booth stuffing), they persevered through chilly nights, through rains, aimd guffaws, reckling from adults and fellow teenagers On completion of their feat they issued a challenge daring anyone to better their record.

In the history of the game of chess, it has been a frequent thing for a chess master to conduct a chess marathon, played usually against more than one player (one master of the 1800's played 20 at one time, defeating 15 players in the first round, and the remaining five in play-off rounds).

This was the first known time two players have played consecutive games over such a long period of time against each other. Also, it is the first known time such a chess-athon was conducted out-of-doors irrespective of weather.

Asked how they felt after the long siege, Jerry Serafini said, "It hasn't been too bad. The only thing that really got to us was that darn rain."

Paul Medbery had this to say: "It wasn't too hard staying awake and concentrating, because of all our friends, and our neighbors, and parents of kids from school, who kept coming by to see if we were still at it. They kept us company and kidded with us."

Both agreed that it was a lot of fun, but that if anyone beats their new record they aren't going to do it over again to recapture the title.

Bill Konzik, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Konzik, 302 Rivers End-rd, acted as official timekeeper for the new record holders. His job was to verify the time, and record it on a blackboard that they kept posted to keep passersby informed of the progress. The area in front of the Gahanna Police Department was a constant source of curiosity from residents and additionally from north and southbound travelers along Route 62.

During the daylight hours into early evening, and on their way home from dates, friends and fellow-students stopped by for a chat or a heckling session, or just to see if the fellows' stick-to-it-iveness was still going for them. The normal Gahanna curfew was waived for the occasion in light of the event being conducted in front of the watchful eyes of the Gahanna constabulary. No objections were heard from parents or school officials.

Serafini and Medbery have issued a challenge open to anyone interested in more than 54 continuous hours of chess, open-air style, in spite of rain, or hail, or dark of night.

Asked if they were going to catch up on lost sleep, they replied, "Not especially, we're not really tired. The only catching up will be on some of the fun we missed while we were setting this record."

Both record holders are looking forward to summer and new enterprises.

On Sunday, sessions will be at 9 and 10:15 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday's session will be at 7 p.m. while Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday sessions will be at 10 a.m. and 1:30, 7 and 7:45 p.m.

Larvae Able To Defoliate Tree

If you've noticed greenish-brown worms feeding on the needles of pine plantings, they're probably the larvae of European pine sawfly.

These larvae are about an inch long when full grown and feed on old needles, sometimes defoliating an entire tree.

One can control sawfly larvae by spraying or dusting infested trees with DDT.

Ohio State University Extension specialists in pest control suggest the home gardener use 1¼ tablespoons of 25 percent emulsifiable concentrate or two tablespoons of wettable powder per gallon of water.

School Board Approves Fifteen Teacher Addition

At the regular meeting of the Reynoldsburg Board of Education approval for the employment of 15 new teachers to the school system was given.

The new employes are: Jeanette Davis, junior high science; Judy Ulrickson, elementary; Flora Hyatt, high school girls' physical education and health; Karen Nimon, special education; Jean Dieckmann: kindergarten.

The resignations of Jerald W. Roth, junior high; Harod F. Berner, administrative assistant; Joan Greathouse, Rose Hill; Larry Ochs, junior high and Judith Kehoe, were accepted.

The board heard a report on the progress of new federal programs under Titles I and II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Acts. To be employed for the summer reading program under Title I, are: Mary Pritchard, head teacher; Beatrice Gillette, Delores Nielsen, Mary Key, Millicent Oliver. Roberta Mullins, Margaret Rosales, Margaret Gorrell, Verrenna Palmer and Suzanne Read.

The next regular meeting of the Reynoldsburg School Board, formerly scheduled for Tuesday, June 21, has been changed to Tuesday, June 14.

Father-Son Communion Set

St. Pius X Holy Name Society announces its annual father-son communion breakfast Sunday, June 19. Corporate communion will be received at 8:45 Mass and breakfast will follow at Howard Johnson's East. Guest speaker will be Wayne Byers of a local TV station.

New officers of the society are: president, Ken Petry; vice - president, Ted Klott; secretary, Tom Lilly and treasurer, Madison Tully. They will be installed after the 8:45 Mass.

All men of the parish are invited to attend and meet the officers for next year.

Price Support Maturity Dates Set For Crops

Further improvements are being made in the operation of the price-support commodity loan program which should tend to encourage redemptions of loans and thereby reduce program cost, according to Owen VanSchoyck, chairman, Franklin Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee.

Most recent changes — effective in 1967 for 1966 crops — are the elimination of advance applications for price-support loans and the establishment of later loan maturity dates for most crops.

Donald Gordon Served In Viet

Seaman Apprentice Donald N. Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton N. Gordon of Rt. 1, Pataskala, helped train Nationalist Chinese navy men aboard the gasoline tanker USS Elkhorn during a visit to Kaohsiung, Taiwan.

His ship has just completed an eight-month assignment with the Naval Support Activity, at Da Nang in Viet Nam.

During that time, the ship provided fuel in the Da Nang area for both vehicles and aircraft operating with American and South Vietnamese ground forces against the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

NEW OFFICERS

New officers for Reynoldsburg Junior High School PTA are: president, Mrs. Richard Daugherty; vice - president, Mrs. John Davidson; recording secretary, Mrs. W. H. McTeague; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John Bowman; treasurer, Frank Lowery.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Sealed proposals will be received by the Clerk of the Board of Education of the Reynoldsburg Local School District at his office until 12:00 Noon (EST), June 15, 1966, for the furnishing of all labor, equipment and materials necessary to fully execute the plans and specifications for the construction of Addition to Rose Hill Elementary School as prepared by Joseph Baker and Associates, Architects, Sharon Valley at King Roads, Newark, Ohio, which documents will be on file at the office of the Architect, at the plan rooms of the F. W. Dodge Corporation and Builders Exchange, Columbus, Ohio, and at the office of the Clerk. They are open to public inspection during all reasonable office hours until the time fixed for the closing of bids. At that time the bids will be publicly opened, read and tabulated.
A copy of plans and specifications for individual use may be secured at the office of the Architect upon the deposit of $30 cash. All plans and specifications must be returned to the Architect within seven days after the Bid Date and, if they are in good order, a full refund of the deposit, minus any shipping costs, will be made to all who submit a Bonded Bid. For all others, and for extra sets a refund of $20 will be made. Selected sheets are available at cost of $3 each, not refundable.
Separate proposals will be received for the General, the Electrical, the Plumbing, and the Heating and Ventilating Contracts, although combined bids will be considered. Any contractor submitting a proposal combining bids for more than one contract in one bid shall also enter his bid for each of the contracts in the space provided on the proposal form.
Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid bond or a certified check payable to the Board of Education in the amount not less than ten per cent (10%) of the amount of all items bid upon. Bidders agree that the check or bond shall become the absolute property of the said Board of Education in lieu of damages if the bidder refuses, fails or neglects to enter into a contract and furnish the required one hundred percent (100%) Contract Bond within ten days after notice of acceptance of his proposal. A satisfactory Performance and Payment Bond will be required, guaranteeing the performance of the work and payment of all bills. No bid may be withdrawn after the scheduled closing time for the receipt of bids for at least thirty (30) days. The Owner reserves the right to waive informalities in the bidding. Time of completion shall be a valid consideration in determining lowest and best bid.
The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. Published by the order of the Board of Education.

Farm Science Review Signups Is Near 150

The signup for commercial exhibit space at the Ohio State Farm Science Review is running well ahead of last year, according to Dale Friday, review manager.

Recent records show 146 exhibitors have contracted for space at the Sept. 21-23 event. Firms already signed represent all major farm implement companies.

Review visitors also will see more crop demonstrations this year. Commercial corn hybrids number 288, compared to 239 a year ago. In addition to the corn, the crops demonstration area will include 10 new alfalfa varieties, 25 sudan grasses, 14 grain sorghums, and eight forage sorghums.

New tillage practices and narrow row planting are among the farming innovations being established on the review grounds in northwest Franklin County.

COMBINED MEET

Members of Wing 31 and ARC 15 will have a combined meeting at the home of Mrs. James Schaeffer, 208 S. Kenner-av, on June 8, at 8 p.m. A white elephant sale will highlight the evening.

Columbus received the lion's share with $847,091. Other distributions included Worthington, $52,278; Bexley, $9,317; Grandview Heights, $5,795; South-Western, $178,718; Upper Arlington, $31,385 and Whitehall, $60,323.

NO GERMAN VILLAGE artist plies his brush with more care than Clyde Shields, 691 Moler, (left), as he takes up his spotting gun to magically erase a stain from a garment brought to the Prince Royal Cleaners in the heart of German Village. With a one thousand batting average to date, the "Spotting and Finishing Award" which came his way in a mystery spot contest recently was an anti-climax to a lifetime of developing the highest professional skills. As he works on a wedding gown he discusses his latest challenge with his employer, Billy G. Prince.

German Villager Establishes His Spotting Skills Unexcelled

"Out, Out, damned spot!"

Clyde Shields, of the Prince Royal Cleaners at 256 E. Whittier-st, must have felt a kinship with Lady MacBeth as he struggled with the "mystery spot" recently.

He was one of the cleaners across the nation who accepted the challenge of the trade magazine, "Drycleaning World" to remove a stain from a swatch of yellow polished cotton, affixed to a page from a magazine page.

No hint was given as to the origin of the stain. Shields knew only that it was an unusual combination of soil which would require all of his professional skill to remove without damaging the pastel shade or the material itself.

Shield's success was no surprise to Billy G. Prince, his employer.

"Clyde's the best in the business," Prince claims.

And Prince backs up his claim with his money.

He has a standing offer that no charge will be made for the cleaning of a garment from which Shields is unable to remove any and all spots.

"He scares me with that offer," the veteran spotter and finisher muttered, but conceded he hasn't been "stuck" yet.

Shields revealed he has two enemies—mustard and customers who have a spin at do-it-yourself spotting before turning the job over to him

The tannic acid in the condiment taxes the skills of the master cleaner, and the home spotter can make a difficult stain impossible.

"Before he can cope with the original stain, Shields must remove the residue of the amateur efforts," explained the German Village businessman.

In the business for more years than he cares to admit, Shields' profession is a changing one.

"What used to work on cotton, silk, wool or linen can be a flop when working with a fabric made of corn stalks or foam rubber," Prince added.

P. W. Brown In Viet

T/Sgt. Peavy W. Brown, whose wife, Marilyn, is the daughter of Mrs. Ethyl Tomlinson of 1586 Aberdeen-av, is now in Viet Nam. Sgt. Brown, a machinist, is a member of the Pacific Air Forces.

180 Welfare Employes Form CIO-AFL Local

Claiming an initial membership of 180, employes of the Franklin County Welfare department have informed the United Community Council they are forming a union organization affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

The new group's spokesman stated they are in accord with "the spirit and substance" of the UCC study made of welfare last September and many of the goals are those originally proposed by UCC.

The employes' action, according to them, springs from their concern with the "effectiveness of the welfare department and with the causes of the limited successfulness of its operations, the working conditions at the agency and the policies, regulations and laws governing the service we provide."

The county auditor has granted authorization for payroll deduction of union dues, and a recruiting program is under way to further enroll members.

The chapter is the local of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes.

Homemakers' Short Course Scheduled

A three - day college course for homemakers will be held June 15, 16 and 17 at The Ohio State University.

The theme for this year's Homemakers' Short Course is "The Homemaker in Today's World," reports Mrs. Naurine Higgins, assistant director, home economics, for the Cooperative Extension Service.

The short course program includes 18 classes in home economics and related subjects, plus assemblies and special events. Each "student" will attend two classes of her choice.

Any Ohio homemaker is eligible to attend the course. Details about program, classes and registration are available at county extension offices.

WWI Vets Plan 13th Convention

The Veterans of World War I will hold the 13th annual state convention June 10-12 at the Deshler - Cole Hotel in Columbus.

The convention gets under way unofficially Friday, June 10, with a reception for auxiliary state president Mrs. Eleanor Zinsley of Cincinnati.

Principal speakers at the Saturday evening banquet will be Past National Commander William S. Kime; Mrs. Leah Brandmo of Minneapolis, national senior vice-president and U. S. Representative Robert T. Secrest of Ohio's 15th Congressional District.

A memorial service will be held on Sunday, to be followed by a business meeting and installation of officers.

Young Republicans To Donate Blood

The Capital City Young Republican Club is planning a blood drive Wednesday, June 15. Purpose of the drive will be for Young Republican Club members to donate blood for U. S. military men stationed in Viet Nam.

Dana A. Deshler, Jr., 1770 North Star-rd, is chairman of Cap City Blood Drive Day. Deshler said it is expected that over 100 of the club's members will be donating.

Those participating will give blood at the Red Cross Regional Blood Center, 995 E. Broad-st, June 15 between 2 and 8 p.m.

For further details on the Cap City Blood Drive and basic requirements for donation of blood, contact Dana Deshler at 486-5314 or Linda Hayes at 276-3886, in the evening.

Sunday, June 12, an open house will be held beginning at 11:30 a.m. The show is a special feature of the bank's 100th year anniversary.

AND THAT'S QUITE A COBBLER'S SHOP

Sixty years ago Harry Gilbert took a big step—he put out $75 and became a capitalist—as the owner of a small shoe repair shop. Throughout the years as the business underwent a metamorphosis and became synonomous with the phrase "quality shoes at cut prices" the little shoe shop was engulfed by additions. But soon it will go, and the knell was sounded recently when ground was broken for the New Gilbert Shoe Co. on the southeast corner of Town and Fifth in the 45-acre Market-Mohawk redevelopment area. The two-story building to be completed the first of the year by United Redevelopment Corp. for Gilbert's will utilize the first floor for customer area and the cantilevered second floor for storage and office space. Lawrence A. Rubenstein is the architect and John W. Galbreath & Co. the general contractor.

Federal School Aid Compliance Is Problem

"Compliance with the federal school aid program requirements is a problem for many Ohio school districts," State Auditor Roger Cloud said recently in announcing plans for five regional seminars to be held in June for school board clerks and other officials.

"Determination of eligibility for aid, school programs for which the federal aid funds may be used, and accounting procedures which will show that the funds have been used for the authorized purposes pose unusual difficulties for district administrators."

The first of the seminars will be held Thursday, June 9, at Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, for clerks and school administrators in the northwest region.

At each seminar, following introductory remarks by State Auditor Cloud, the entire morning session will be devoted to clarifying the federal accounting requirements for school aid projects. Rex Haecker, assistant auditor of state and supervisor of the schools audit division, will conduct the discussions.

The school seminars are expected to attract nearly 900 local board officials. During May more than 400 librarians and other library clerks attended a series of regional clinics held to clarify a new uniform system of accounting for libraries which was inaugurated Jan. 1, 1966.

James Favret Sees Increase

Residents of Ohio spent a record $39 million for installed home air conditioning equipment in 1965 and James L. Favret, president of the Favret Company, predicts sales will reach approximately $43.4 million in 1966.

Favret said Carrier Air Conditioning Company reports show that about 103,500 room units and central air conditioning systems will be installed in Ohio homes, including apartments, during 1966.

Last year installations of some type of home climate control equipment totaled about 94,500 for the state.

Seymour Service Held

Services were held at the Groveport Methodist Church Saturday morning for Edward R. Seymour, owner of Ed's Furniture Store in Groveport. Interment was made in Lithopolis with the Darfus Funeral Home in charge of arrangements. Mr. Seymour entered Doctors Hospital West last month with a diagnosis of heart disease. Active in the Groveport Business Association, he was also a member of the Moose Lodge, the local Methodist Church, and the Columbus Maennerchor and was past president of the East Columbus Lions Club. Survivors include his wife, Margaret; his son, Bert R., of Groveport, and daughter, Mrs. Loretta Workman, who lives in California; his father, Bert R., of Groveport; two sisters, Mrs. Mildred Lloyd of Delaware, and Mrs. Irene Smith of Lancaster, aand two grandchildren.

Why Not Socialize?

Do you like the sight of a bandbox-neat band marching down the street? Do you like the taste of home-made ice cream slipping down your throat? If so, the Canal Winchester Music Booster Club has a natural planned for you. According to booster president, Mrs. Sarah Smiley, all proceeds from the ice cream social planned at the school Saturday, June 25, from 5 until 8 p.m. will go for new Canal Winchester band uniforms. The menu in addition to ice cream includes sandwiches, baked beans, potato salad, kitchen baked pies and cakes and coffee, all to the tune of the concerts provided by four school bands.

It's A 'Sweet' Name

Everyone will agree that one of Canal Winchester's youngest residents has a "sweet name." She is Candy Sue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Fulks, who was born a week ago. Fulks is the principal of Obetz Elementary School.

She's Italy Bound

Miss Carol Ice, 5775 Refugee-rd, having completed a two-week seminar at Harding College in Arkansas leaves for Italy Friday, June 24 with 24 other students. They will spend the summer in missionary work in that country. The eight-week trip which will end with a five-day campaign for Christ in London is sponsored by the Donmoyer Avenue Church of Christ in South Bend, Ind. It was planned to give the students the opportunity to acquire a first-hand knowledge of the work of foreign missions and better understand the need for both more missions and more persons committed to this work. Miss Ice is a Groveport-Madison graduate and currently attends Ohio Valley College.

SOUTHEAST AREA HIGH SCHOOLS TO SEND 12 TO BUCKEYE GIRLS' STATE

JILL BUTT

PAMELA SMITH

Twelve junior girls from Southeast high schools will join their peers from throughout Ohio on the Capital University's campus Sunday, June 19, for the 20th Annual Buckeye Girls' State.

Each of the young women, certified by their principals to be outstanding representatives of their class, will participate in mock government set up on a city, county and state level.

The nine-day workshop through which tomorrow's leaders are given the opportunity to see Democracy in action is the answer of the Auxiliaries of Ohio American Legion posts to the lack of preparation of youth to take over tomorrow's governmental responsibilities.

The girls, representing one of two political parties, will campaign for office in the legislative, executive and

LIKE CHAUCER'S STEEDS "trapped in steel, were all glittering," Treasure, the quarter horse, ridden by Jack Orum, sergeant-at-arms of the Groveport Cruisers 4-H Club, is ready for next Saturday's show. Ponies from the Orum stables of Lithopolis-rd, traveling to Groveport on the big day are, from left, Tic and Toc, ridden by Jill and Jeff Orum. Thunderbolt, Toc's colt, held in line by Jack Warner, Cruiser president, won't make it this year because of his tender age.

It's Horse Show Time Again

Are residents of the Southeast community "horse minded?"

Members of the Groveport Cruisers 4-H Club are betting their bottom dollar they are with their sponsorship of an all-day Horse Show at the Big City Garden Center in north Groveport on Hamilton-rd Saturday, June 25.

(Collapse of the Groveport Madison Boosters Club several years ago is attributed to the group's chagrin when the community gave the cold shoulder to a similar show.)

Eighteen classes in the morning show which will begin at 9 a.m., are limited to members of the Franklin County 4-H. The 14 classes in the Ohio Contestants Equestrian Association show at 1 p.m. are open.

Judge for the show will be Ed Ufferman of Marengo. Other officials include Art McCollister of Groveport and John Caldwell of Pickerington as announcers and the Ohio State University judging team, and Abe Johns of Pickerington as ring masters.

A $2 entry fee is charged for the open show only, but prizes are alike for both morning and afternoon performances. Except in classes with less than six entries in which trophies and ribbons only will be offered, first place winners will receive $8 and a trophy. Second place money is $6. Third place, $4 and fourth $2. The first five places will all receive ribbons.

Classes in the 4-H division are: Western horse showmanship for age 10 through 12, 13-14, 15-16 and 17-19; sad-

Ordinance Change Okays Pure Station

Modification of Groveport's anti-house moving ordinance paves the way for a new Pure Oil service station at the corner of Main and Moore-av.

According to Mayor Bob Baer, the ordinance, before amendment, was so rigid that anyone moving his dog house from one side of his lot to another would have been subject to court action.

As a result of the action, "Doc" Seymour, who has optioned a portion of the property to the oil company, will be allowed to move his residence to the northwest corner of the lot, facing Monroe. The Main-st frontage will contain the station. Opening date is anticipated for late fall or early winter.

Baer explained the decision to widen College-av from Main-st north to the railroad tracks by using four feet of the right-of-way on the east was the only practical solution.

Right-of-way taken to the west would have involved destroying the sidewalks used by school children and the sacrifice of a number of large trees.

Widening of College was the primary recommendation of the engineering firm employed by the village to survey the need of street improvement in the village.

Although College is the only street that will be resurfaced, all chuck holes will be filled, a sealing process applied to other thoroughfares demanding attention and all alleys oiled to keep dust to a minimum.

Other recent business of council includes the awarding of a contract to McDorman Chevrolet for a two-ton dump truck on his low bid of $4,175; one to Sutherland Lumber Co. for a pole barn at the water works at a cost of $1,700 and arrangements made to purchase a 32,000 BTU air conditioner for council chambers for about $450 installed.

Spokesmen emphasized that the unit is being purchased with the idea of making council chambers an oasis where villagers will be glad to come to work out their problems with the legislative body.

Want A Hot Tip?

With Gene Tosca busy making the final arrangements for the "Night at the Races" when the Ashville Kiwanis Club travels to Scioto Downs next Tuesday, June 21, Howard Hosler and C. D. Bennett have taken the very unofficial post of "Tout Committee Chairmen." The word is out that the wise and the prudent will consult either of these gentlemen before visiting the betting windows.

LAFB-USA Strangers To Puerto Ricans

Up with the birds and to bed with the chickens.

That's the order of the day for the 200 AF Reserve Officer Training Corps students encamped at Lockbourne AFB for the next six weeks.

In between dawn and dusk is a stringent training program designed to separate the men from the boys, as the former prepare themselves for future leadership in the Air Force.

Ready to enter their junior year in 59 colleges throughout the nation and Puerto Rico, the students make up the first contingent of those involved with the new two-year AFROTC program.

The program was initiated this year after Congress, for the first time in 42 years, amended the College Land Grant statutes, which previously made a four-year training course mandatory for commission in the armed forces after college graduation.

This first look at military life is expected to be something of a revelation to the students, most of whom have never been in uniform before. (A few who dropped four-year Army ROTC to enter the new program have a pretty good idea what it's all about).

But to the 15 young men from Puerto Rico the encampment means more than a look at the Air Force.

They will be taking their first look at the United States — and its people.

Language is no barrier. Puerto Rican children begin the study of English in kindergarten and after the sixth grade never see a text (except a Spanish grammar book) that isn't written in English.

The handful of students interviewed upon their arrival has a thousand questions.

"Are Ohioans friendly?"

"Where is there a drag-racing strip?"

"What are your industries like?"

"Isn't rice ever served?"

"Are the nights always this cool?"

"Where are the girls?"

Explaining they are "leg men" (a Latin tradition) they expect the sight-seeing to be superlative with the current vogue of abbreviated skirts.

Not particularly sports-minded (except on the beach) the Puerto Rican has another difference from the average American college boy.

They think rock 'n roll is for the adolescent and looked a little incredulous when told that would be the beat when dances are held at the Air Haven Club on base.

On the more serious side, they also showed unanimity in their support of U. S. Viet Nam policy that President Johnson undoubtedly would find a welcome change among men of their age.

As one said, "I'm for anything that fights Communism."

They explained that with Cuba a next door neighbor, leftist-turmoil is no stranger, quoting the hullabaloo accompanying the Cuban athletes attending the Pan-American Games now in session in San Juan.

They conceded that although the voice of the few Communist-minded students on Puerto Rican campuses represents a very small

They Saved The Best For Last

The Spectator for and about WOMEN

By The Spectator's
MARY SELLECK

Central Ohio will never, somehow, be quite the same. A graciousness, a grandeur, a way of life is no more.

When St. Mary of the Springs Academy, the school for girls founded by the Dominican Sisters 136 years ago, graduated its last class on June 8, a grand and glorious academic history came to an end. The school, because of on-campus expansion and ever-growing diocesan high school development, will no longer operate.

Tradition and gentility, St. Mary hallmarks taught by the Sisters of St. Dominic, will be forever cherished by those fortunate enough to have known and loved SMA. Her graduates, outstanding women in a plethora of fields, may be found almost anywhere. They are linked by a common bond—the uniqueness of their St. Mary ways, their St. Mary days.

Last Wednesday's final commencement services, exquisite, impressive and highlighted with tradition, triggered a reverie of memories.

St. Mary's, my second home, claimed me from happy kindergarten days with childhood's beloved Sister Anna Mary through college with the then rare distinction of earning a degree in three World War II years rather than the customary four.

I remember . . . an emerald green campus purple-patched with violets . . . serenity . . . the Angelus bell . . . the sound of vespers, like incense, wafting heavenward . . . the warm feeling of love everywhere . . . patient teachers . . . inspiration . . . challenge and accomplishment.

I remember my first-born dressed in a long white gown carrying a traditional nosegay and reaching for her diploma. Last week my second daughter, long-gowned in white as her mother before her, was also awarded an SMA diploma.

As 55 radiant, but touched-to-tears girls glided off stage and down the aisles of the Little Theatre for the last time to the refrain of "The Bells of St. Mary's", there was not a dry eye among the more than 900 parents, relatives and friends gathered for the occasion.

And I remembered the motto of the Class of '66.

"They Saved The Best For Last."

Miss Skaggs, Mr. Ingram Are Engaged

Major and Mrs. James L. Skaggs, 6961 Clymer-dr, Reynoldsburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jean, to Mr. Robert Douglas, Ingram, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Ingram, 3070 Brice-rd, Brice.

Miss Skaggs, a Reynoldsburg High School graduate, will enter Ohio State University in the fall. Mr. Ingram is a graduate of Groveport High School and is attending OSUU.

BATMAN PARTY

The Lockbourne AFB Noncommissioned Officers (NCO) Wives' Club hostessed a Batman Soiree in the NCO Open Mess on Saturday, June 4.

Mrs. Calvin Boone was general chairman. Her assistants included Mrs. Harvey Eckhoff and Mrs. Leroy Kemp, Jr.

PICNIC SLATED

Central Ohio Alumnae Chapter of Pi Lambda Theta will meet for a catered picnic at Beech Maple Lodge, Blacklick Woods, at 5:30 p.m. June 16. Speaker for the meeting will be Mr. Dick Mosley, aNturalist and Program Supervisor at Blacklick, who will show slides of Ohio wildflowers. New officers will be installed. Patti Denny is picnic chairman.

ENGAGED

Mr. and Mrs. Murven C. Shoemaker of New Market, O., are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn Marie, 767 Holly Hill-dr, to James M. Beard, 4948 Eastham-wy, son of the former Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Beard of Waco, Tex. Miss Shemaker attended Ohio State University and is a graduate of Ohio State School of Cosmotology. She is proprietress of the Enchanted Mirror Beauty Salon. Mr. Beard, a former Waco resident, attended Baylor University and is associated with E. C. Frazier and Associates of Waco. The prospective bridegroom resides in Columbus. The wed-2.

Flambeau Boss Night To Be Held June 28

Flambeau Chapter, American Business Women's Association will combine the annual Boss Night Dinner and regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, June 28, when the group gathers at the Kahiki Supper Club. Activities, all of them Hawaiian accented, will get under way at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Carl Wolf of United Airlines who will speak on Hawaii and show slides. The Kuuaina's will entertain with island music and native dances.

Mr. John Martin, Executive Secretary, Office of Campus Planning, Ohio State University, will be the vocational speaker.

Scholarship recipients for the year will be introduced and the "Boss of the Year" will be named.

Mrs. Norman LeVeck and Miss Joyce Seely are project co-chairmen. Their committees include Mrs. Donald Dewhurst, Mrs. Joseph Taxter, Mrs. W. E. Franken, Mrs. Raymond Grinstead and Miss Margaret Eubanks.

Area Gals To Attend Ohio Y-Teen Confab

Y-Teens throughout the state have been planning since early this year for the 1966 Summer Conference to be held at Ohio Wesleyan University, June 19-25. Miss Martha Elliott, 4380 Olentangy-blvd, a new Whetstone High School graduate, will serve as Y-Teen Executive for the Conference. Mrs. Robert B. Weaver, Teen Age Program Director of the Columbus YWCA, will be the adult executive.

In choosing the theme "The I in Soc (i) ety," the girls hope to find some of the answers to "where I as a teenager stand in the adult world, in a democracy, and in my own Y-Teen club."

Area girls attending the Conference include Mary Garvin, 2850 Canterbury-rd; Debby Riedmiller, 1074 Pauline-av; Linda Marburger, 2662 Summit-st; Mary Kay Branscom, 52 E. Bridal Parade Will Highlight K. C. Tea

Bridal fashions of the past sixty-five years will highlight the style show to be held Sunday, June 19, in the Oceanic Suite of the Sheraton-Columbus Hotel. More than one hundred wives of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus will be entertained at a tea in conjunction with the exemplification scheduled by the Knights this weekend.

Twenty-three wedding gowns representing a variety of style periods will be modeled by wives and daughters of the Knights. The collection will feature World War I styles as well as turn-of-the-century and flapper era fashions. Bonnet veils as well as kowns with tunics and hobbled skirts will be shown.

Assisting Mrs. William P. Downey, wife of the Master of the Central District, are Mrs. Thomas O'Reilly and Mrs. James J. Ryan. Arrangements for the fashion parade are under the direction of Mrs. Fred Masse, wife of the Faithful Navigator, Columbus General Assembly. Serving with Mrs. Masse are Mrs. Gene Mullen, Mrs. George Kinkel and Mrs. Paul Essman.

The Bridal Show will be narrated by Mary Selleck. Mrs. John Metzger is vocalist.

Gahanna Gets New Industry; Reported First Since 1910

By The Spectator's
DON LYLE

Gov. James Rhodes recently turned the first spadeful of Gahanna earth in the formal groundbreaking of Gahanna's latest industry.

The manufacturing and warehousing facility of Rapi-Kleen, a firm which produces the equipment for coin-operated car wash dealer outlets bearing the corporate name, represents the first new industry in Gahanna since 1910, it has been reported.

Prior to the decision to locate the plant in Gahanna, Rapi-Kleen, according to Earl Bridgewater, president, a branch administrative office was opened in the village to evaluate the area.

This branch, under the supervision of the home offices in Athens, employs 25 local residents. With eventual plans calling for a payroll of 100, completion of the first stage of construction will involve another 25 positions to be filled by area residents.

Both Bridgewater and Rhodes noted the cooperation of Albert Roby president of Gahanna's Community Improvement Corporation and other village officials as instrumental in bringing the new plant to Gahanna.

Claiming that export of its youth to larger cities is too often the primary business of small communities, Rhodes stated, "with foresight, planning and get-up and go" on the part of the local residents, new businesses can become an import which will end stagnation.

He emphasized that business shoulders a part of the tax burden born by the townspeople and that the job of selling Gahanna to industry demands each resident become a salesman of the community.

After expressing hope the Ohio-shaped shovel presented to Mayor Paul Van Aucken would lead a busy life, he recommended the Union Fork and Hoe for possible replacements.

Other speakers at the ceremonies included Rev. Donald Swift, Van Auken, Roby and F. P. Neuenshwander, director of Ohio State Development.

Strangers—

minority, it is a very noisy one.

Without exception, the visitors claimed they are seriously considering the Air Force as a career.

They reported that their original interest sprung from the "spit and polish" evident at Ramey AFB in Puerto Rico.

As Felix Rivero put it, "In my mind, the Air Force has class."

The major present when the boys were interviewed indicated the compliment could be returned.

"These boys are exceptional young men," he said.

As an after-thought he laughed, "Did you notice not one of them had a kooky haircut?"

If they had, it wouldn't have been there for long. Monday was "hair cut-day" with one quarter of an inch length, in the major's words, "strongly recommended."

It was mentioned that any to whom this might be a "fate worse than death" better worry about another peril lurking at Lockbourne.

Childhood diseases are non-existent on the island and many a strapping Puerto Rican lad has been chagrinner to find himself laid up with the chicken pox or measles after an encounter with a pre-schooler.

Church Bible School Dated

Lockbourne Methodist Church Bible School will be held June 26 to July 1. There will be a program at the church July 3.

The Bookmobile Library will serve Lockbourne every two weeks through the summer with books for all ages. Next visit will be June 20 from 1:30 to 2:45 p.m.

Mrs. John Drake was able to return to her home Thursday after spending the winter with her daughter in Xenia, O.

Clarence Barth and daughter, Dorothy, of Columbus, visited Lockbourne friends Sunday.

Robert Henson of Tennessee visited his mother, Mrs. Albert Knece, over the weekend.

Sunday dinner guests at the Knece home were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Knece and family, Mrs. Lola Weigand, Mrs. Lenna Buskirk of Laurelville and Millard Hart of Circleville.

A Reynoldsburg man is the new commander of the Franklin County Council of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Henry J. Schutte of 1745 Rose Hill-rd will be installed June 26 at the department convention in Cleveland.

Tennis Reinstated

The announcement that Harvey Vance of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., will return to the Madison Local School District as a ninth grade English teacher and reserve basketball and tennis coach at Groveport-Madison next fall confirms the report that tennis will be reinstated as a sport in the district. Vance lefe Madison Local two years ago because of his wife's health. Others hired this include Mrs. Judy A. Campbell, a recent OSU graduate who will teach high school English and Latin and two teachers for Asbury Elementary, Mrs. Judith Tuckerman of Columbus and Miss Beverly Sankey of Cleveland. Both OSU graduates, Mrs. Tuckerman has two years of teaching experience. The 1966-67 school year represents Miss Sankey's first assignment.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: GOP Powerhouses On Move

WHITE

WASHINGTON — Some of the powerhouses of Eastern Republicanism are moving at last to head off Richard Nixon's rapidly-accelerating, if undeclared, campaign for the 1968 Presidential nomination.

They are gathering about Gov. George Romney of Michigan. The consequences are of the highest importance. Only a week ago Romney was a Presidential possibility, but hardly more than that. Nixon was far out in front.

Now, Romney is moving up. And though the odds objectively would still favor Nixon at the 1968 Republican National Convention, those odds have dramatically shortened within a space of days.

The new and capital factor is what amounts to a public embrace of Romney by Gov. Scranton of Pennsylvania. In a word, the Eastern G.O.P. establishment, which has mastered every convention except one since the Franklin D. Roosevelt era, is bestirring itself.

The Easterners awoke far too late in 1964. Suddenly, and to their horror, they found that Goldwater, whose somewhat grumpy aspirations were not treated seriously anywhere along the Atlantic Seaboard, had locked up the nomination while they had been sparring in polite rivalry among themselves.

Scranton then gallantly walked over a mine field as head and symbol of a stop-Goldwater movement at San Francisco that never had a chance.

There is, therefore, a historical fitness in the circumstance that it is again Scranton who goes up to the firing line for the Eastern wing, this time to stop Nixon.

What is developing is another classic intra-Republican contest between the Ivy League and the state universities, between very big business and smaller business, of a kind that has become a part of Republican party history. It is the mixture as before; it is the tableau as of old.

It is early yet for an attempt at firm prediction, but it is far from fanciful to see matters developing along these lines: A determined push by the Easterners to put Romney over for the Presidential nomination with "somebody from New York," quite possibly Sen. Jacob Javits, as his Vice-Presidential running mate.

Almost certainly, Javits will be the favorite son of New York's huge convention delegation.

Going still farther into a rational iffiness, Scranton might well figure significantly in this arrangement. He could easily become Secretary of State in a Romney administration, if one there should be. Not only has he loyally supported the basic foreign policies of this country, as has his chief mentor, former President Eisenhower; his record also includes service as a major associate of two Republican Secretaries of State, John Foster Dulles and Christian Herter. — Copyright 1966 by United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Ronnie Won 'Cause He's Right

GOLDWATER

Ronald Reagan's impressive victory on Tuesday for the Republican nomination for California governor, I believe, will turn out to be the first major step in the greatest conservative surge this country has ever seen.

It spells the beginning of the end for the arch-liberal Establishment which is determined to turn the American republic into a collectivist society. Americans have had all the liberalism they can take.

Most people can remember what the liberals said in 1964 about the nation's problems. On the big one, Viet Nam, they were completely wrong. President Johnson has been literally forced to follow the GOP recommendations of 1964, but he got around to them too late to do much good in the "limited" fashion he insisted upon.

The Democrats are in real trouble. They have overspent, overpromised, overlegislated and overestimated in every government category. The result is utter confusion on the economic front and a condition bordering on chaos in the fields of health, education and welfare.

I regard the Reagan victory as indicative of things to come. The way he won over George Christopher will assure him a resounding victory over Democratic Gov. Pat Brown in November, presaging a nation-wide GOP victory of major proportions in the congressional elections this year.

Ronnie has been described in the public print as a "Goldwater man" and as a "conservative trying to shed the association with Goldwater." Reagan is nobody's man but his own. A politician who runs on principles, as Reagan and I did, can't be anybody's man.

If Reagan felt it a profitable tactic to move away from Goldwater — assuming his move was to a position he believed in — it was wise.

Regardless of how he conducted his campaign, his victory is one more justification of the positions we took in 1964. It may still be a "bad dream" to some GOP liberals, but if our advice had been followed on Viet Nam, NATO, inflation, the draft, crime in the streets and adequate weapons for Viet Nam, this country would be in better shape than it is under that rapidly fading "consensus."

Our crime in 1964 was losing, not in advancing an honest program to fit America's needs. The tiny minority of Republican spokesmen who keep harking back to 1964 obviously are proponents of the game of "political expediency."

Reagan did not commit my crime. He won, and he's going to keep on winning because he's right. The people are beginning to wake up to what's right and wrong in U.S. politics.

When Republicans score congressional victories this fall it won't be because John Lindsay was elected New York mayor or because the GOP put up "me-too" candidates or because the party leap-frogged the Democrats and promised more federal spending. It will be because we were right in 1964 and the people are only now beginning to understand. — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

The Fees Of OCRC

By RICHARD ZIMMERMAN

Dayton Journal Herald

If justice delayed is justice denied, three Negro youths from southwestern Ohio have been accorded the same treatment in our state as they might expect to receive in Mississippi. The three boys' revealing tale of judicial delay and administrative neglect serves dramatically to point out both the modest accomplishments and the glaring weaknesses of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission (OCRC), which recently has come under a bitter barrage from the Columbus NAACP.

In July of 1962, three Negroes, members of a mostly-white Boy Scout troop, were told by their scoutmaster that the owner of a swimming pool in Warren County would not permit them to swim. While the pool billed itself as a "private club," the white scouts were subsequently offered the opportunity to swim.

Charging that the "private club" label was only a ruse to avoid compliance with an Ohio law barring racial discrimination in places of public accommodation, the families of the three Negro scouts complained to the OCRC. When private conciliation between the commission and the pool owner failed, a public hearing was ordered. The hearing examiner found that the operation of the pool bore none of the hallmarks of a legitimate private club, so the commission subsequently issued a "cease and desist" order against the pool owner. As was expected, the owner appealed the order to the Common Pleas Court of Warren County.

That was in February of 1964. The case has never been docketed by Judge Warren Young, even though he proudly reported (before the subject of the swimming pool case was brought up) that his civil cases were being heard within six to eight months.

The Attorney General of Ohio, who serves as the OCRC's counsel, has been less than diligent in pressing for a hearing. Nevertheless, an assistant attorney general who handles OCRC cases, along with looking after legal matters for six other state agencies, did file a formal motion in January, 1965, asking that the case be moved along because of its great general interest. The case was a landmark test of the right of a nominally-public pool to adopt a "private club" posture.

Last August, an assistant attorney general wrote a polite letter to Judge Young inquiring about the delay. The judge has never ruled on the motion, nor has he answered the letter from the representative of Ohio's highest legal official.

The swimming pool management which is reaping all the benefits of the delay because the cease and desist order is being held in abeyance, is represented by Fred Jones, boss of the arch-conservative Warren County GOP organization. Jones' law partners are Judge Young's son and brother. The judge, like five out of every seven Warren countians, places his allegiance with Jones' political organization.

If the attorney general's office is guilty of cavalierism in this case there is no evidence that it was ever called to task by its client. Except for a few quiet, informal queries made to the attorney general's office, the OCRC has kept a public silence more than two years.

When he was recently asked about the case, OCRC Chairman Hugo Sabato, a Rhodes administration appointee with no previous background in human rights or intergroup relations, brushed aside the question by saying it was a matter for the attorney general. Even though Sabato supposedly brought to the commission some valuable political savvy, he claimed to know nothing of the apparent political overtones of the delay in Warren County.

There is some indication that Robert Coates, the OCRC's highly respected southwestern regional director (who recently resigned to take a better-paying federal civil-rights job), agitated to dislodge the case by quietly using nonlegal, but often effective, wedges available to politically-astute civil servants. But because the OCRC has no legal staff of its own and, more likely, because Coates was not backed up with a public outcry from the commission's tiny Columbus staff, the case did not move.

This clear evidence of a lack of aggressiveness on the part of the OCRC in this and other cases is in a large part responsible for the general dissatisfaction discovered when civil-rights leaders in Columbus and throughout Ohio were asked to evaluate the commission's work.

A compilation of these interviews reveals:

- Even the most charitable and moderate rights leaders qualified their remarks by pointing out that the commission is understaffed and underpaid.
- The less charitable added that the lowly-paid staff positions too often attract political hacks who are intellectually and professionally incapable of aggressively following through on tangled cases.
- The more militant claimed the OCRC has become so politically oriented that its major aim is to keep Ohio Negroes from rocking the peaceful political boat of the present administration.
- An articulate Columbus Negro politician spoke for many when he wondered why the five-member commission does not have even one person with a statewide reputation in the field of human relations.
- Even the more conservative civil rightists suggested that the commission is too timid about using its legal teeth and relies too heavily on conciliation—even if it means the same case must be conciliated over and over.
- Many of those interviewed pointed out weaknesses in Ohio's civil-rights laws, such as a prohibition against the commission having its own legal staff and its inability on its own motion to initiate investigations into housing and public accommodations.

How valid are these complaints? Gubernatorial aide John McElroy observes: "No matter how aggressive the commission might become, some civil-rights leaders wouldn't be satisfied."

(NEXT WEEK: A look at the continuing OCRC investigation into charges of racial discrimination made by the Columbus NAACP to evaluate the validity of complaints against the Commission.)

Of A Three-Part Series

Examining Ohio's Civil Rights Commission

As a result of this article, Judge Warren Young has requested that the Ohio Supreme Court assign Judge Fred Cramer of Butler County to hear the Warren County swimming pool case, reportedly by the end of this month.

Signs Of The Crime

Apparently due to its lack of success with conventional crime detection methods, the Columbus Police department has decided to try a unique means of getting its man.

The police department is proposing to advertise.

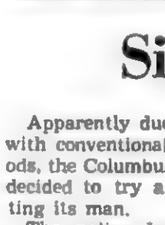
Seriously. The department is going to use billboards.

The billboards will carry a big drawing of one of the suspects in the department's growing list of unsolved murders.

This way Columbus motorists and tourists in the state capital will get a chance to stare daily at the culprit and try to figure out "who done it." Anybody can play and no doubt many good citizens will be turning in their neighbors, who will begin to resemble the man on the billboard after a few weeks. Heaven knows what the tourists will think.

Of course, as a newspaper The Spectator is skeptical of billboards as an advertising medium. As a matter of fact, The Spectator is sort of skeptical of the whole idea.

And unless the department changes its mind, it is very probable the public is going to get even more skeptical of the department.



The Women

By The Spectator's TED BEARDSHEAR

Older women seem to have the grace, poise and presence that typify what femininity is all about.

Not that younger women completely lack this quality, but it is more developed in the older woman.

Now every woman comes equipped with a body. But no matter how curvaceous, young or well-endowed it is, it varies only in degree with the equipment of every other woman.

BEARDSHEAR

Given this constant base, a woman's charm becomes the important part of the feminine mystique.

With older women, the emphasis is not on the trivia of a small degree of anatomical difference. Rather it is on the meaningful plane of femininity itself.

Granted that males are first attracted to the shapely . . . the obvious anatomical difference. However, in picking a wife, more enduring qualities are sought. Finally, with added years and added experience, a man admires the woman who has made an art of being a woman — a quality rarely found in the young.

Take for example the life of Eleanor Roosevelt. Even in her youth she was as homely as a sorority closet case. Not being endowed with physical grace, she developed a high degree of charm. And the charm was coupled with sharp intelligence.

Not only did she marry a president of the United States, she was successful both as a mother and as a career woman. She had truly mastered the art.

I am personally acquainted with two women over the age of 45 who have, in a smaller way, made an art of being a woman. Their charming company has led me to the conclusion that fine women, like fine Scotch, improve with age.

Letters To The Editor

Likes Craig's Approach

To The Spectator :

Regarding your editorial "Economy: Craig vs. Rhodes" (June 1, Spectator) may we suggest that Prof. Craig of OSU be publicly proclaimed the most conscientious, sensible and courageous citizen of Ohio because he was the first (aside from candidates) to publicly expose the entirely mistaken philosophy of state government of the Rhodes administration.

Much to their (the administration's) consternation, he dropped it like a bombshell in their midst. His address should be applauded by all thinking voters and a copy of it sent to every home in Ohio.

Why not create a Prof. Craig Good Government Fund to which all citizens capable of understanding good government could contribute.

No doubt Prof. Craig's professional career will not be adversely effected too soon as that would be too obvious.

May Prof. Craig be our modern Paul Revere with his timely warning of the intolerability of another four years of this political opportunist which would bankrupt Ohio with bonded indebtedness and exhorbitant interest and further depress our economy. Furthermore it would continue the sad state of the majority of our supposedly free and fearless journalistic fraternity who are cringing behind their editorial desks in mortal fear that they will print something offensive to their Master Rhodes.

Letters for publication must bear the writer's name and address. The editors, at their discretion, may permit use of initials or pseudonyms if this is requested for a good reason. In general, preference will be given to writers willing to take responsibility for their views. Letters should be kept as short as possible. All letters are subject to editing.

Can't We Keep Anything?

To The Spectator:

I write in complete disgust with the editorial attacking Mr. Ronald DeVore (May 25, Spectator) and to register my personal gratitude for him for his effort to preserve the old Central Market.

Must everything be reduced to shambles? Are we not permitted to keep anything? Must this city display nothing but chrome and glass?

It is not a matter of childhood nostalgia. Traveling in Europe and catching a glimpse of a similar structure would make one ecstatic. We have little enough relief from architectural modernity.

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Dynamite At Lincoln Lodge

One of the most dynamic, most explosive, most high-powered lounge acts to ever play in our city is currently appearing in the cocktail lounge at Lincoln Lodge. Foster and Ferrell is the duo which has been breaking all house records. This is not their first engagement at the lodge. If my memory is correct, this is their fourth booking in the room. Foster and Ferrell is a piano and drum duo. From here on, the simularity between this act and any other act stops.

Mardell Foster is the piano player in the group. And does she play. Hardly ever looking at the keys, hands flying high above her head, this gal beats out tunes ranging from folk music and Dixieland to show tunes. She has an indelible style. For those who remember the early days of TV, a piano player by the name of Al Morgan performed much in the same manner as Mardelle, except that she has a thousand times more energy than Al Morgan. Mardelle Foster sings with as much enthusiasm as she plays piano.

The other half of the team, both in real life and on stage, is Mardelle's husband, Ted Foster. Ted sings and is the drummer. Not just an ordinary hide thumper, either. He gets more tones and rhythm from his percussion set than do most people using twice as much equipment. Vocally, Ted knows what he is doing. He has good phrasing and styling. There is soul and feeling in his music, and when he sings, Ted is able to hold his audience and project the true meaning of the lyrics.

Mix Foster and Ferrell together and you have a package of dynamite ready to explode at the first applause. They will be at the Lincoln Lodge most of the summer. But don't wait. See them now. I defy you to listen to this duo more than 15 minutes without stomping your feet or snapping your fingers.

Aztec Lounge Opens

This Thursday, June 16, the new and beautiful Aztec Lounge holds its grand opening. Located on Courtright-rd, one-half block south of Livingston-av, the Aztec Lounge is furnished in authentic Indian decor. This has to be one of the most intimate cocktail lounges in the city.

To celebrate the grand opening, a special buffet table is being prepared—all you can eat for $1. For the readers of the entertainment page of The Spectator, the Aztec Lounge is offering the buffet menu at one-half of the regular price.

If you can't make it for their grand opening, be sure and stop by soon. In the daytime, there are two good-looking, cheerful gals behind the mahogany, Ruthie and Marilyn. Jack Stavroff is the host. There is dancing nightly and businessmen's luncheons and evening dinners are always on the menu.

Civil War Roundtable To Meet At Rotunda

Columbus Civil War Roundtable will meet in the State House Rotunda at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 22.

Lt. Col. William B. Haines will explain to the group the restoration process he uses on the Civil War battle flags.

New officers of the roundtable are: president, Jerry Bloomfield; vice president, Nathan Hatfield and secretary-treasurer, Warren E. Motts.

Aquarium Show Set This Weekend

The Central Ohio Aquarium Society will present an aquarium beautiful show and a betta show Saturday, June 18 and Sunday, June 19, at the Haydocy Pontiac Showroom at 500 W. Broad-st.

The public is invited. Admission is free. Prizes will be awarded. Trophies will be given to the best aquariums and fish.

President of the society is Robert E. Bushnell of 2744 Woodstock-rd.

Two Suits Make A Panelist

The personalities who comprise the panels on "I've Got A Secret" and "To Tell the Truth" on CBS Television and Channel 10 all agree that it's a wonderful way to make a living.

As both series plan to celebrate anniversaries on Monday, June 20, members of each show have their own ideas about what makes an outstanding panelist.

Daytime "To Tell the Truth" begins its fifth season with a panel including Kitty Carlisle, Tom Poston, Peggy Cass and Orson Bean. "Secret" launches its 15th season with regular panelists Betsy Palmer, Bess Myerson, Bill Cullen and Henry Morgan.

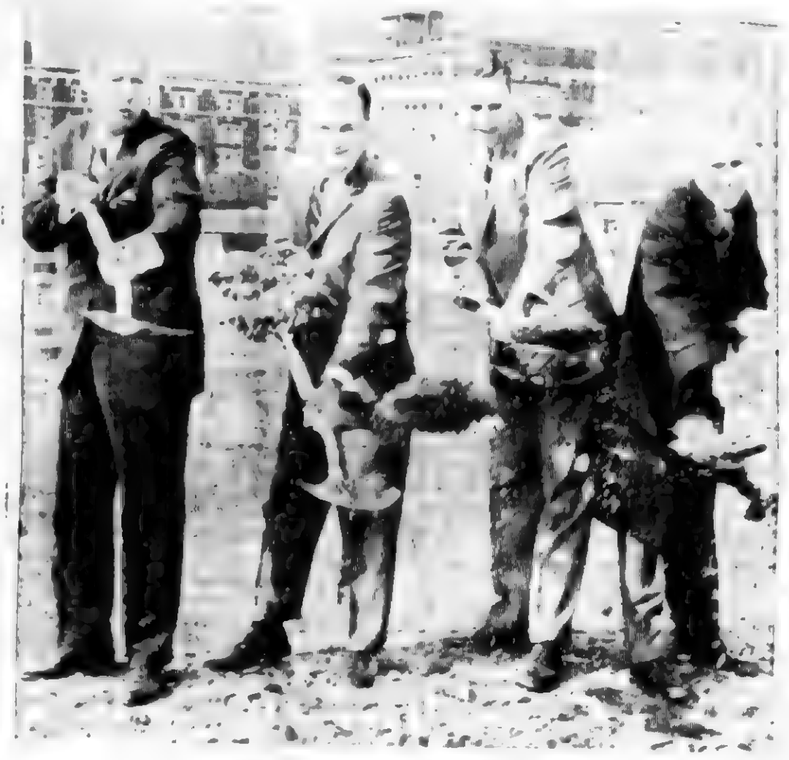
According to Mark Goodson of Goodson-Todman Productions, which developed bith of the panel shows, the person who would be a panelist should be a celebrity in some way. "He must reflect something other than mere show biz," says Goodson. "Since he can't play a part, he must show himself as he really is, have no inhibitions, be a talker and have the capacity to communicate."

Henry Morgan agrees with Goodson, and adds a definition of his own. "The ideal panelist," Morgan insists, "should have charm, beauty, grace, money—and two good suits."

Morgan swears he has two good suits.

Bill Cullen's classic definition of a good panelist is "someone who can think on his own seat."

Betsy Palmer describes the complete panelist as a performer who can become so involved in the game "he doesn't care how he looks or what he's saying."



Bess Myerson goes along with Miss Palmer and further stipulates that "the ideal panelist must have an inquisitive mind. He must be interested in others and in the world around him.'

Bible School Under Way

The Shepherd Church of the Nazarene, 1501 N. Hamilton-rd, Gahanna, is having Vacation Bible School until June 24.

Sessions are held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. All children ages three through junior high school are welcome to attend.

Mrs. E. K. Richey is the director of the Bible School.

THEY DUG RIGHT IN

Ground was broken for the new Lawyers Title Insurance Corporation building at the southwest corner of Town and Fifth-sts last week. On the business end of the shovels and looking like they "meant business" were Lieutenant Governor John Brown; Don Galbreath of United Redevelopment who are builders of the Market Mohawk structure; Bill Hanschmidt, local manager of Lawyers Title and William Kelley, state manager for the firm. The 16,000 square feet of floor space on three levels is planned to allow a fourth floor to be added later. The building, which will house both the Columbus and state offices of the nation's largest company engaged exclusively in insuring real estate titles will be of brick and marble, set back 18 feet from Town on the 165 by 130 foot lot. The customer parking area will be surrounded by a decorative four-foot brick wall, on the completely landscaped lot and drive-in facilities will be provided. Completion is scheduled by the end of the year.

Junior Garden Club Program Is Reviewed

Following World War II, four booklets were prepared to assist the junior garden club programs, which were previously conducted on an individual club basis.

These books, plus a special junior gardener pin and contests to choose the typical junior gardener and outstanding junior garden club, gave added interest to the youth department.

In 1952, the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs, Inc., junior garden club program was combined with the 4-H garden program, to widen the scope of assistance offered by OAGC and to enable the juniors to have the benefit of both programs.

Requirements for Junior Garden Clubs are:

1. The club must be sponsored by an adult club affiliated with OAGC. Such a club may also be registered with the 4-H program.

2. The club must have five or more members and must have an adult to serve as its leader. Members must be between the age of 10 and 21 years. Children under 10 may be associate members. It is suggested that the children be grouped according to age.

3. The club must hold at least eight meetings during the year. These may be: a. During the school year, once each month; b. During the growing season, every two weeks; c. Monthly during the entire year.

4. The club must be organized and have officers elected by May 15.

5. The club must be registered, each year, with the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs junior garden chairman by June 1. Registration forms will be sent by the chairman upon request. Only those clubs officially registered will give the adult sponsoring club credit in their year book scoring. Four-H registration dates vary with counties.

6. Each member should keep a project book of his or her progress. Those affiliated with 4-H clubs are furnished these books by the local county extension office. Club yearbooks should be sent to the regional and state chairmen of junior clubs.

7. Applications for Outstanding Junior Garden Club Award and for Typical Gardener Award should be sent to the state chairman by Nov. 1. Special blanks for entering these contests may be secured from the state chairman.

For more information, the state Junior Garden Club chairman is Mrs. Cletus Harding, R.R. 1, Box 109 Marengo, Ohio, 43334.

Guests are welcome to attend this meeting. Current rules in entering flower shows will be discussed, along with plans for Leawood's Flower Show

Thoughts . . . Of An Amateur.

By The Spectator's
JOYCE LOUGHMAN

Did you know that the graceful fleur-de-lis, the historic emblem of France, and the purple flag, so common in even the most neglected gardens, are sisters under the skin?

Both are members of the large iris family.

Endless contrasts in color and form, endless combinations of shades and markings only serve to enhance the beauty and flexibility of the iris. Siberian, Japanese, Dutch, English, Spanish indicate the origin of, and interest in, the different types that you find in the gardens here in Columbus.

Tall bearded types are readily recognized by almost every gardener and perhaps are the most wanted. New varieties are on the market each year bringing as much as $20 to $25 for a few seasons.

But expensive items are not necessarily better, just newer. Wait a year or two and they will come down.

Some of the older varieties that are most in demand are the dark crimson "Ranger," reddish brown, copper and henna tones in beautiful "Bryce Canyon," "Her Grace" with an ermine-white edge setting off shades of violet-blue, impressive "Cloud Cap" with broad pink petals and a tangerine beard, magnificent "Sable" in blue-black. Take your pick, from snow white to almost black, from pale blue to deepest midnight, rainbow of pure delight.

Culture is an added charm. Besides sun, iris likes shallow planting and reasonably good drainage. Ideal as a background for rock gardens or an old-fashioned perennial bed, Iris also makes a wonderful partner for day-lilies.

Dividing of established clumps should be done in midsummer as soon as the blooming period is finished. Some garden centers here in Columbus already are offering corms for this season's planting. Let's start collecting.

Fruit Growers Plan June 30 Greenford Meet

The Ohio State Horticultural Society and the Ohio Apple Institute will hold a combined meeting at the Salem Fruit Growers Cooperative Association packing plant at Greenford June 30.

Tours to two modern fruit farms will highlight the morning part of the program, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Visits to the farms of Ralph Papania and Sons at New Waterford and Joseph Leas of Salem are planned. Lunch will be served at noon at the Salem packing plant.

Dr. Roy M. Kottman, dean of Ohio State University's College of Agriculture and Home Economics and director of the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service and the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, will address the visitors in the afternoon. He will speak on "The Importance of Fruit Production on the Economy of Ohio's Agriculture." Commercial exhibits and demonstrations of equipment also are planned.

Eldon Banta, Ohio State University Extension fruit specialist, reports that damage to the apple crop in the Columbiana-Mahoning County area has survived the May 10 freeze better than many observers had expected earlier. He predicted that many growers in the area would harvest 75 percent of a normal crop.

The meeting is being planned by the Columbiana-Mahoning Horticultural Society and Extension agents in the two counties.

AND SO IT GROWS . . .

Two good herbicides to control poison ivy are Amitrole or a mixture of 2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5-T, say Ohio State University Extension agronomists. Either should be applied in liquid form directly to the ivy foliage. But you must be careful not to let the herbicides touch any desirable plants, or they'll die too. Always follow package directions for rates of application.

Remember that the poison can be carried in the smoke from burning ivy plants. Humans also can be poisoned by pets or garden tools that have come in contact with the plants.

Your house plant collection can be set outdoors now. Simply set the pot so the top edge is level with the soil. When the potting soil starts to dry out, water thoroughly. Also, give each pot a turn every two or three weeks to trim the roots that grow through the drainage hole.

Now's a good time to repot house plants that need it. Ohio State University floriculturists recommend using a potting mixture of equal parts of good garden loam, sphagnum peat moss, and perlite.

If you have a small planting of blueberries or other small fruits that birds insist on eating before you get them picked, try covering them with cotton, rayon, or nylon netting.

For good growth, most bedding plants can use a monthly feeding with a complete analysis fertilizer such as 4-12-8, 5-10-10, 3-12-12, or similar fertilizer at the rate of three to four pounds per 100 square feet.

Water newly set trees and shrubs each week, especially in dry weather. Water thoroughly. Don't sprinkle.

Need An Answer?

My roses are showing quite a few black spots on the leaves. Is there anything that I can do to prevent this?

This is perhaps one of the worst of the rose diseases. It is called "black spot" and it seems to be invading all of the rose beds this year. The only thing that the authorities say to do is spray or dust on a very strict schedule.

What is the best way to prevent rabbits and chipmunks from damaging plants?

Either ornamental fencing or sitting up nights with a shotgun. The many chemicals on the market seem to work for awhile but then the damage is again evident.

Shade Link Stays On Top Of COBL

Shade Link Insurance remained alone in first place after Saturday night and Sunday's action in the Sunday Division of the Central Ohio Baseball League.

Shade Link and Stacy Hall Sheriffs battled eight and a half scoreless innings until the Insurancement pushed across a run to retain their undefeated status.

Pitcher Denny Swetnam started off the SL half of the ninth with a single and raced to third on Ken Schultz' hit. Schultz then stole second, and George Steele was intententionally passed.

Curt Tong promptly responded with a single to center to plate Swetnam with the winning tally.

Jud Boley of the Sheriffs was the only hitter of the game with more than one hit (two for two).

Emerald Cleaners won their first game of the year by outscoring the Columbus Plutes 13-3 in an eight inning game at Upper Arlington.

Jim Howison, Bill Howell and Rick Benjamin led the Cleaners attack with two hits apiece while Gene Harper with two safeties and Jim Green's triple paced the Plutes.

Galbreath - Perry Realtors was bounced out of first place tie with Shade Link by losing to the last place Colts at Chillicothe Saturday night.

In games this weekend Emerald Cleaners travel to play the Colts Saturday night. Each team will be seeking its second win of the season. Feature game of the set will find Stacy Hall Sheriffs battling with Galbreath-Perry Realtors.

Area Baseballers Have Hand In West All-Staters Sweep

By BOB WHITMAN

Columbus was invaded last weekend by the giants of the state's schoolboy baseball diamonds.

The annual East-West All-Star baseball series (three games in two days) was won by the hard-hitting West legions to reverse last season's outcome.

On the star-studded roster of the victorious West were eight Columbus area standouts plus two coaches who aided the West to the winner's circle.

HEADING THE impressive scroll of Columbus players was Mickey Pless, Franklin Heights' nifty winger and Marion Franklin slugger Dale Darnell.

Others include infielder John Knox from Arlington, Dale Corbett and Jack Ries from Bishop Ready, Jim Geddes from Pleasant View, Dublin's Mike Bullis and Big Walnut's Don Van Loon.

The coaches from the area were Pete Corey, who coached Arlington High to a 17-6 record and Ed Lewis who piloted District champ Franklin Heights.

BOTH COACHES had praise for Pless' Saturday night performance.

Lewis felt that his pitcher was one of the best of a group of pretty respectable moundsmen while Corey claimed that nobody could hit him in Saturday's single contest.

"He had plenty of stuff," Corey said, "they were not getting to him."

PLESS RAN into trouble only once during the five innings he stayed on, and that was in the third.

Three walks, a bloop single and a passed ball let in three runs. After that no one touched him as he struck out seven in five innings.

Hitting star for the area boys was Marion Franklin muscleman Darnell who hammered a triple and a pair of singles for three RBI's over the three days.

ARLINGTON'S KNOX had a two for four day in the second game of the double header Sunday.

The coaches hailed the boys as a "fine, coachable group," that were "a credit to the area."

Southfield Saints Eye Improved '66 Record

The Southfield Saints, who opened their season on Memorial Day with a 2-1 win over Breyfogle Construction, have amassed a 3-1 mark to date this season.

Once again entered in the strong Independent Knothole League where they compiled an 18-7 mark last season (were loop runners-up), the Saints are a better balanced club this summer, according to coach Ray Humphrey.

"WE ARE strong defensively in all nine positions. Our hitting should be consistent and our baserunning good. The boys on the bench are just as capable as those on the field," says Humphrey.

New additions to the '66 team include: Bill Dore, Rick Pickering and Mike Lombardo (Teays Valley), Chuck Bland (Groveport), Danny Keene (Walnut Ridge) and Ronnie Glenn (South).

Back from last year's team are Art Armstrong, Bill Hopson, Jim Humphrey, Willie MsClure, Eli Washington, Nate Williams and Henry Wellman (Marion-Franklin) and Ray Humphrey (Central).

DORE, PICKERING and Glenn will handle pitching. Lombardo and Bland the catching with Keene, McClure, Williams and both Humphreys in the infield and Washington, Armstrong, Wellman and Hopson ticketed for the outfield.

317 FSM Giants Hold Top Spot In Majors

The 317 FMS Giants remained in first place of the Major League division of the Lockbourne AFB Little League program with a double win last week over ARS Pirates. The Giants got the first game, 9-1 and the second 10-5.

Roy Maez, who has logged a 4-0 pitching record thus far, was the winner in the first game with Roger Coleman winning the second.

The Giants head the league with a 9-1 with the Pirates holding the second slot with a 6-4 log.

The United of Omaha Dodgers broke a nine game losing streak after the Al Texaco Mets dropped them in the first of two, 8-5. The Dodgers won the second one, 6-5.

Mike Frost was the winning pitcher in a relief role. Frost aided his cause with a two run homer in the four and got added help in the six when Reggie Bassa made a standout, shoe-string catch and turned it into a triple play.

In minor league action, the 87 F15 Orioles stayed ahead of the league with a 21-8 win over the NCO AGA Indians. Gary Kitchen got the winning pitcher tab as he got help from slugger Brian Bakken, who hammered a two-run triple.

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

CAMP KENOGAMING, Timmons, Ontario — Last week, if you remember, I had just arrived at Camp Kenogaming with visions of bears dancing through my head.

PAUGH

This was to have been a combination bear hunt and fishing trip. Early signs indicate that the fish are biting and the bears are not.

As I flew in by float plane last Saturday, a cold front followed me in and seemed to settle over all of Northern Ontario. My guide — an Ojibwa Indian named Frank —took me that evening out to a recently bothered bait and we took a post uphill within sight of the bait but far enough away to assure that the scent was not strong.

THE ICE had been off the lakes just two weeks but the suckers had run already. After a black bear comes out of his sleep in the spring, one of first tasty bits he looks for are the spawning suckers that come up into the inlets and creeks for just a few days before going out into deeper waters for another 51 weeks.

During the 'sucker week,' the bruin will spend most of his time along the creeks, flipping fish onto the banks and wolfing them down.

The party before me had taken two bears at Sucker Creek and missed another.

AFTER THE suckers go, the bears become a bit less predictable, eating tender shoots, tearing stumps apart for grubs and just generally being bears for the rest of the summer.

In going early this year, I had hoped to be here during the sucker run but such was not my luck. I shall pass the remainder of my stay here fishing the mornings and early afternoons, then going to another baited area and watching until it's too late to see my gun sights.

John Lehner, the lodge owner, has control of 14 lakes, two are excellent pike lakes, four are known for their walleyes, four smaller lakes are loaded with speckled trout, two are reserved as rainbow trout lakes and two are unexplored.

THIS MORNING, I got up early and Henry Lehner, the owner's son, accompanied me to Sashihaw Lake. This is quite a trip.

First, we go by boat five miles up Lake Kenogaming to a landing where we portage for an hour, carrying all our goods, to Sashihaw Lake. There, we take to the boat once more and troll for half an hour, catching enough fish for a shore dinner.

After eating, we put on our Rapalas, Daredevils, yellow jigs and started fishing in earnest. Seldom are both our lures in the water at the same time, one is unhooking while the other is trolling or reeling in.

THIS IS Great Northern Pike fishing at its best. Had we both kept all the fish we caught, the boat would surely have been swamped.

Even though the fish are surely more numerous here than at any other place in North America, I always feel that fish put back this year will be bigger to catch next year.

We took some back to the lodge for Mrs. Lehner — excellent cook that she is — to fix for everyone. Beyond that, we fished for the joy of fishing.

NEXT WEEK I'll be able to make a final report on my Kenogaming bear hunt.

We do good ads fast. Cheap, too!

THE SPECTATOR SUPPLEMENT

A PRETTIER YOU

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

In France, they call him pere; in Spain, padre; in Russia otets, and in Japan otosan. Here at home we call him father, pop or sometimes daddy-o . . . but regardless of what you call him, his special day is Sunday, June 19th.

Do you know how Father's Day came into being? Surprisingly, it is not a holdover from Europe or Asia. It did not originate in any foreign country. It's an American holiday . . . as much as Washington's or Lincoln's birthdays or the 4th of July.

It all began in Spokane, Washington, in 1910 when Mrs. John B. Dodd decided it was time Americans did something special to honor Dad. She undoubtedly was inspired by her own father, a Civil War veteran who reared his six motherless children on a Washington farm. Today, 56 years later, we each have our own personal reasons for honoring Dad.

For their part in maintaining the home and training their offspring, over 50 million fathers will be remembered with all kinds of thoughtfully selected gifts . . . mostly ties. However, no need to settle for a tie because on a research trip through the Men's department of Lazarus, I was elated with the NEW fashions for the male contingent.

The biggest surprise was in the shoe department . . . (and to think I was under the impression that men's shoes were dull) . . . Today they come in all colors, even prints and they go to all lengths.

For color and le sport, how about a smart red and black golf shoe with a wing tip and kiltie flap or a sparkling white saddle shoe with a fringed kiltie? These and many other styles are made of Corfam, Dupont's man made leather, and to keep them bright and sparkling all you need to do is wash them . . . all dad has to do is play like a pro, he'll certainly look like one.

REAL COOL sandals for sheer comfort of soft supple leather feature thong wrappings, hemp trims, sculptured soles. All imported from Italy and available now in Columbus.

The prints are Hawaiian and are sneakers . . . available in red, navy and green with white. Zaniest sneaker is called the "Grubby". It's constructed of heavy-duty Hopsacking . . . intentionally frayed . . . and grubby . . . Would look very camp mowing the lawn.

If a Beau Brummel lives at your house, how about some suede gaiters? (These were formerly called Spats and they promise to be big for Fall.) They're "real dapper" . . . grey suede with little shoe buttons and they buckle under the instep of any regular shoe. Shades of Adolph Menjou!

According to the men's shoe buyer, Boots also promise to be good for Fall . . . "plain old Texas boots" . . . so if your fella has a hankerin' to be a cowboy, this might be a good choice. Other boot styles range from the knee-length Carnaby style with Spanish heel to the Musketeer boot of soft glove leather.

Most practical new shoe idea follows the feminine trend of baring the foot and looks great with masculine sportswear. It's the sandal . . . continental styled sandals from the classic Toe-ring style to the Roman Gladiator high-wrappers. Sandals are practical in one way because they eliminate the need for socks and (in my opinion), no one has come up with a good looking men's sports sock, yet.

That same opinion was shared by my amiable authority and he pointed out that the college boy must have felt about the same way because he started shedding his socks about ten years ago. First they wore heavy duty sneakers, then loafers sans socks. The only other choice they had to wear with sporty attire was knee socks with heavy street shoes . . . still not proper accessorizing. Now we have the sandal with no worries about socks . . . cool . . . comfortable. It appears that dad could take a lesson from the younger generation and throw away those old tennis socks that ride high above the ankle and get a pair of sandals . . . maybe from you for Father's Day.

Why don't you take a peek inside his shoe and get his size and surprise him with one of the new shoe fashions . . . or if you prefer, get him a gift certificate so he can be fitted by a professional . . . after all, the head of the household needs a firm foundation.

Other Father's Day gift thoughts . . .

If you must buy a shirt, (42 percent of the dads would like one) how about a Voile one . . . 65/35 dacron and cotton . . . guaranteed to stay crisp and cool on the hottest day.

If he's Karate minded, there's a reversible Kimono of paisley print cotton and terry cloth.

I fell in love with a jaunty double breasted blazer with twin slits and brass buttons.

If your dad is currently watching his waistline, there's an impressive looking scale printed with the Dow-Jones averages and Market quotations.

His and Her shirts . . . for him and you . . . available in prints, plaids or solids.

Or why don't you convince your man that it's smart to wear an ascot in the neckline of his sport shirt. They come in reversible styles of print and plain . . . the most popular is paisley.

Whatever you buy, remember that dad usually pays the bills, and he's a pretty swell guy . . . not just on Father's Day, but 365 days of the year.

Art On The Sidewalk

The merchants at the Town and Country Miracle Mile are readying their seventh semi-annual "Sidewalk Arts and Crafts Show and Sale" scheduled for Friday, Saturday and (for the first time) Sunday, June 17-19.

Merchants there expect over 90 participants who will be competing for prizes totalling $350 for art exhibits and $75 for crafts.

Show hours are between 10 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. Merchants are furnishing equipment needed for the displays, including electricity.

For further information on how you can enter, phone F. W. Grover, 3724 Town and Country-rd (BE. 5-0064 or CA. 4-7766).

WASHINGTON CALLING

by MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — As he mastered the technique of the press conference, the late President Kennedy went from the humorous to the ironic to the solemn with a virtuoso's ease. An unforgettable moment was in May of 1963 when he spoke in somber tones of the apparent failure of the negotiation for a nuclear test ban treaty with the Soviet Union.

"If we don't get it now," he said, "I would think that perhaps the genie is out of the bottle and we'll never get him back in again."

The bottle in this instance is the proposed treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

If within the framework of the disarmament commission the two nuclear giants, the United States and the Soviet Union, cannot agree on the terms of a treaty, the issue will be passed back to the U. N. General Assembly.

The Americans ask, as they have repeatedly for nearly three years, whether the Russians really want a non-proliferation treaty. Or is the whole business of advance and retreat, hopes raised high and hopes dashed, merely another maneuver to drive a wedge between Germany and the United States and further fragment the Western alliance?

The Russians will not, of course, accept any degree of German participation in NATO's collective control and possible use of nuclear weapons. No German finger on a shared trigger. Isn't it certain, as the question is put, that the so-called German threat will be used to raise the ante every time the 17 nations seem close to agreement on a treaty?

Others, particularly in the Pentagon, ask if it really matters whether a treaty is concluded, since the Soviets will never give their allies nuclear weapons.

The nuclear calendar plays some odd tricks. By sheer coincidence, yesterday, (June 14), when the disarmament commission resumed, it will be 20 years to the day since the late Bernard M. Baruch proposed to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission the American plan for strict, veto-proof international control of the dread force science had unlocked in splitting the atom.

The march of events in two decades has seen, with the exception of the nuclear test ban treaty and its limited application, the unimpeded spread of nuclear weaponry. America then had a monopoly. Thanks in part to traitorous men such as Klaus Fuchs, the Soviet Union got the bomb far in advance of American estimates. Britain, with help from this country, was next. France and China followed. Short of a greater effort at Geneva, the list in a few years will be 10 or 11 or 12, and the genie will be forever out of the bottle.—Copyright 1966 by United Features.

Knights Plan Big Weekend

The Central Ohio District of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus will hold its annual banquet, ball and exemplification ceremonies Saturday and Sunday, June 18-19, in Columbus.

The weekend will begin with a banquet at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Sheraton-Columbus Motor Hotel, with nationally-known author Leo G. Byrne as principal speaker. A formal dance will follow the banquet.

On Sunday morning, the Knights will parade to St. Joseph Cathedral for mass and an address by Bishop John J. Carberry of the Catholic Diocese of Columbus.

A ladies' tea Sunday afternoon will close the festivities.

Arrangements are under the direction of William F. Downey, master of the district, and his staff. The district includes assemblies in Columbus, Delaware, Dover, Lancaster, Marion, Newark, Portsmouth and Zanesville and has 800 Knights of the Fourth Degree under its jurisdiction. More than 50 new members will be installed at the Sunday exemplification ceremony.

Auto Club Committee Plans Orphans' Outing

The Orphans Committee of the Columbus Automobile Club will stage its 61st annual Orphans' Picnic Tuesday, June 28, at the Zoo Park.

Donations from members of the Auto Club are used to support the annual picnic.

CONTEMPORARY HACIENDA is the theme of this room, part of a home furnished by Lazarus Decorating Studios for the Columbus Home Builders Association's annual Parade of Homes, continuing through Sunday at Worthington Hills.

Lazarus Designs Hacienda For Parade Of Homes

A "contemporary hacienda" designed to project a country-house feeling has been created by Lazarus Decorating Studios for the Columbus Home Builders Association for its Parade of Homes, now under way in Worthington Hills.

The home is completely decorated in what Lazarus refers to as "art-nouveau, the fresh, colorful and rather elaborately decorative style of art linked to the early 1900's and Hollywood's famous movie stars of that era."

Typical of that style are bright room-dividing curtains of beads, bright green upholstery, long shag carpeting and Roman window shades.

The Parade of Homes continues through Sunday off Olentangy River-rd north of Ohio 161.

ARE NEW OFFICERS

Worthington Hills Site Of Annual Parade Of Homes

The 1966 Parade of Homes ends its nine-day run Sunday at Worthington Hills off Olentangy River-rd north of Ohio 161.

This year's "quiet parade" features 24 model homes especially constructed to reduce unnecessary noise.

"There is just too much noise in our modern society," said E. W. Preston, chairman of the parade. "People are looking for ways to get away from it. One of the most logical is home construction which will cut down or isolate noise in the home."

Each builder in the parade, all members of the Columbus Home Builders Association, has included numerous sound - retarding devices. Each has selected a major area of the home for a thorough "quietizing" treatment.

More than half the homes are fully air-conditioned and three-quarters are furnished to display their appearance when occupied.

Hours for the Parade of Homes are 5-10 p.m. weekdays and 1-10 p.m. on the weekend.

Secretaries Slate Meet

The Columbus Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (Int.) will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, June 21, at the University Club. Social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

The following 1966-67 officers were installed at the last monthly meeting: president, Mrs. Peggy Hauser, CPS; first vice president, Carlene Hamilton, CPS; second vice president, Mrs. Ruth Canterbury, CPS; recording secretary, Mary McGonagle; corresponding secretary, Thelma Fehrman; treasurer, Mrs. Martha Rohleder; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Doris Alcock; membership secretary, Mrs. Toni Paullus, education secretary, Cora Weber; publicity secretary, Diana Ginnan. Carolyn Wiederkehr, CPS, is the immediate past president.

Wilson Speaks At Convention Of Funeral Group

Noted columnist Earl Wilson spoke on "Confessions of a Columnist" this morning as the highlight of the 86th annual convention of the Ohio Funeral Director's Association.

Theme for the three-day conference, which ends tomorrow, is "Striking at Motivation."

Also appearing today was Jerrie Mock, Columbus' record-setting "flying housewife."

Young GOPers To Stage Annual Politics School

The Capital City Young Republican Club will hold its annual School of Politics on Saturday, June 25, at Stouffer's University Inn.

Keynoting the school will be State Auditor Roger Cloud. Featured luncheon speaker will be Attorney General William B. Saxbe.

Others scheduled to speak include U.S. Rep. Samuel Devine, State Representative Chalmers Wylie, Franklin County Probate Judge Richard B. Metcalf, Columbus Municipal Court Judge Robert Duncan, and First Assistant Attorney General Gerald Donahue.

Want ads are one of the easiest, most inexpensive means to extra cash in your pocket or purse. Use them often. It's so easy that if you can spell "W-A-N-T A-D" you can use Spectator Want Ads. . . successfully!

When your ad appears in the Spectator Want Ad Section, you're in business. Want Ad readers are buyers . . . they're looking for the things you are advertising . . . and they're willing and even anxious to pay you cash for them.

A phone call to BR. 4-1155 connects you with a friendly ad-taker who will help you word an ad to sell those things around the house you no longer need or use.

OSU To Hike Fees Beginning Next Fall

Student fees will be up $25 per quarter for Ohio residents and $46 a quarter for non-residents beginning next fall at Ohio State University.

The Board of Trustees approved the new pay schedule at a recent meeting on recommendation of President Novice G. Fawcett.

The last fee increase was in the fall of 1963, when both resident and non-resident fees rose $15 per quarter. A survey of land grant institutions indicated Ohio State was the only state university which did not raise fees during the past two years.

Fawcett said "a reasonable advance in student fees is necessary if the university is to continue its planned improvement in the quality of its educational programs and remain in a competitive position in its attempt to retain and recruit faculty and staff."

OSU fees will be the lowest among state universities in Ohio but resident fees will be the highest among state-supported schools in the Big Ten.

"Drop-Outs" Can Finish High School at Home

If you are a High School "Dropout" a special state issued High School Equivalency Certificate which receives general acceptance in private business, civil service or helps qualify you for college entrance, can mean $25-$250 more for you each week.

The National High School of Home Study now offers a short High School Equivalency Diploma Course which you can complete in your own home in your spare time. So why be held back from better pay because you lack a High School Diploma?

For a Free HOME STUDY HIGH SCHOOL BOOKLET, write to National School of Home Study, Box 234 c/o Spectator, 2465 W. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio 43204.

THERE'S A BIKE WAITING FOR YOU

Steve Babbert, left, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Babbert, 5736 Bromley-av, became the proud owner of an eight transistor radio on his birthday Saturday, but it wasn't a gift. Steve and his big brother, Jack, both Spectator newsboys in Worthington, earned the radio and Firestone 500 bike with their respective sales of five and 31 pre-paid subscriptions to The Spectator. With the contest open to one and all, Rodger Clevenger, right, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Clevenger, 154 N. Warren-av, also won a radio although he isn't a carrier — just a fine 12-year old salesman. Circulation Manager Jack Schleup, shown with the boys, explained this is a "Bike Unlimited" deal (transistors too) and for each and every 20 subscriptions a bike is waiting, and for every five, a radio. "I don't care if a super-salesman ends up with a fleet of bicycles or enough radios to stock a store," Schleup said. If you want to enter the winner's circle, just give Jack a ring at BR. 4-1155.

Statistics Prove People Can Be Truly Amazing

By The Spectator's MARY BILDERBACK

We live in a record breaking world. There's always something or someone popping up to challenge the latest statistic, but you have to go mighty far to beat these . . .

The greatest number of children produced by a mother belongs to the wife of a Russian named Fedor Vassilet who died in 1872. Mme. Vassilet gave birth to 69 children (16 pairs of twins, seven sets of triplets and four sets of quadruplets). Few survived infancy, but Mme. became so famous she was presented to the court of Czar Alexander II.

You gals with the long nails, take a look at this one. The longest record for finger nails was reported from Shanghai in 1910. A Chinese priest took 27 years to achieve nails that measured up to 22¾ inches in length.

Or if you have hay fever, the worst chronic sneezing fit occurred in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1835. A 13-year-old boy sneezed six sneezes per minute for 30 days. The highest speed at which he expelled particles measured 103.6 m.p.h.

The oldest city in the world is Jericho. Radio carbon dating indicates habitation there by 3,000 people as early as 7800 B.C.

The country with the largest population in the world is China with 740 million. This is 23.2 percent of the earth's population.

Uncle Sam isn't that poor either, the world's largest land owner is the United States government with a holding 769 million acres. This includes 360 million acres in 109 countries with a total value of more than $71,960 million.

Ladies, next time you are asked by that special man what type of perfume you prefer say "Jasmine" by Tuvache of Egypt. It retails here at $90 per ounce. The biggest and most expensive perfume is the 1¼ pint size of Chanel No. 5 made in France. It retails in the United States for $300 a bottle.

For the connoisseur, the most expensive French wine is Chateau Lafite Rothschild, 1806, which is $102 a bottle. The highest priced spirits are Grande Fine Champagne Arbellot 1794 Brandy which retails in Paris at $136.12 per bottle. Or if you prefer an 1830 bottle of Napoleon brandy, one was sold to a New York restaurant owner in January of 1962 for $1,000.

The world's most expensive shoes are made by Field and Flint. They're baby alligator skin and are manufactured at Brockton, Mass. They sell at $150 per pair.

A sable great coat was sold in the U. S. for $65,000, and the most costly fabric marketed is sold quipure lace which can be purchased in London, England, for $151.20 per yard. The width is 18 inches.

The highest price paid for an orchid is $3,234. H. F. C. Sander of England bought an odontoglossum cripum pittianum (whatever that is).

To an addict, the most potent and expensive of depressant drugs is heroin, a chemically processed form of opium from the juice of the unripe seed capsules of the poppy. An ounce, which comprises up to 1,800 hypodermic shots or "fixes" may bring up to $9,000. The U. S. has 60,000 known addicts.

Christmas Seal Design Contest Now Under Way

The Christmas Seal Design Contest, co - sponsored each year by the Tuberculosis Society of Columbus and Franklin County and the Columbus College of Art and Design, is once again under way.

Local artists, both professional and non-professional, have an opportunity to win awards on the local level and on the national level.

Locally, professional artists receive prizes of $150, $100, $75, $50 and a 5th place prize of a family membership to the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts.

On the non - professional level, locally, awards consist of $200, $150, $100, $75 and $50 scholarships to the Columbus College of Art and Design. All awards on the local level have been increased this year.

The National award is $1000 plus the honor of being the designer of the 1968 Christmas Seal. The winning seal is produced over 8 billion times.

Deadline for the contest is Sept. 6.

Jets To Host Wings, Chiefs

The Columbus Jets, battling for their second straight IL flag, host Rochester and Syracuse through Sunday in their fifth '66 home stand.

The Red Wings provide the opposition tonight and tomorrow evening with single 8 p.m. contests.

THE CHIEFS then invade for a five-game set which includes a twi-night twin bill (6:30 p.m.) Friday, a single Saturday contest (8 p.m.) and a Sunday double-header (1:30 p.m.)

Tomorrow evening is Prairie Boys' Baseball Night while the Agonis Club and the Fraternal Order of Eagles share the Friday spotlight.

Saturday night will be "Upper Arlington (Little League baseball)" and "Anderson Concrete Night."

FOLLOWING the Sunday doubleheader, the Jets will travel to Toronto for a four-game set before returning home Friday, June 24, to open a four-game series with Buffalo's Bisons.

The Jets battle for the IL's top spot has drawn 52,305 fans in 18 home games prior to June 13. That's an increase of 20,097 for the same number of dates last season.

The Southgate Optimist Club will meet on Wednesday, June 22, at the Southview Park for a potluck luncheon. Arrangements are under the direction of Dorothy Burton, Edna Leslein and Ruth Green. Children are welcome to attend.

Philosophies Of 'New Left' Are Probed

Written For The Spectator

By DAVID HAGLUND and SHELDON KELMAN

"If all the 'New Left' got together, they couldn't take over a post office, but they might take five people with them in trying." With this tongue-in-cheek quip, Phillip A. Luce, former member of the Progressive Labor Party (PLP), summed up the feelings of many about the radical left: it's not too strong, but don't turn your back on it.

"New Left" members Stuart Smith, treasurer of PLP, and Michael Houser, coordinator of Spartacists, have dedicated their efforts to one goal: overthrowing the government of the United States; if necessary, by means of bloody revolution.

Both seem to feel that recent trends towards reform in the United States are indications that a revolution may be in the not-too-distant future.

"The middle class is turning away from capitalism," Smith said, explaining that the American people are getting tired of fighting an imperialistic war. He said that the internal struggle created by the civil rights problem will combine with exterior forces to topple the American system, paving the way for a Utopian communist society.

Houser re-affirmed Smith's beliefs, "If the tempo of change continues at its pace of the past 10 years, we will see the revolution soon," he said. "Hopefully, bloodshed might be averted, but if necessary, the proletariat will fight."

Ironically, neither Smith nor Houser see eye-to-eye on who will lead this revolution. Smith call the Spartacists "screamers" who wouldn't be willing to follow the lead of the militant PLP.

Houser, however, not only claims his organization is the more militant, but has accused PLP of having taken many "right-wing" stands on issues in the past.

The H. E. B. DuBois Club takes a substantially less militant stand. "Our goal is increased socialization toward the objective of eliminating unjust conditions wherever they exist," said recording secretary Jeffrey Gould.

Calling himself a pragmatist interested in liberal reform on campus, Knepley, a junior in philosophy, considers many of the battles won by "legitimate" student reformers, with the unwanted help of the "New Left," to be Pyrrhic victories.

To the "New Left," Knepley is a sell-out, a political opportunist. However, the "New Left" often expresses a greater contempt for the more liberal elements of politics.

Sen. Ernest Gruening (D-Alaska) received a standing ovation for a speech given at Ohio State, May 27, in which he said: "It is painful for me to admit this, but I have come to the conclusion that we are the agressors in Viet Nam . . . we must get out." Houser referred to the Alaskan Democrat as "a naive old man."

Gruening's warm reception brought home the facts that elements of change are indeed circulating in the United States: America, beleaguered by civil rights and poverty problems, is rebelling against an unpopular war.

NEXT WEEK: Has the "New Left" been true to its goals; has it been harnassing the energies of unrest in this country to advance the cause of revolution?

The day the Columbus Auto Club bought horses for the city . . .

Horses were common, but cars were a strange sight in Columbus at the turn of the century. Oscar Lear and Perry Okey had built their own autos. Campbell Chittenden was seen and heard driving his Winton. Several buggy factories took to the "fad" and switched production to gas buggies.

The Columbus Auto Club was formed and grew from a handful of local motorists, to a club dedicated to serving ALL motorists and pedestrians. The Auto Club fostered activities to set speed limits, require horses to be hitched, erect directional road markers and promote the use of hand signals. In 1912, the Auto Club made one of the most unusual presentations in its history. The popularity of vehicles and the rapid growth of Columbus was putting a burden on the police force. So the mounted horse patrol was formed. Ironic as it may seem, the horses were purchased and donated by the Auto Club.

The tradition of working closely with police for safety still stands. Through the club's efforts Safety Cars, Practice Driving Ranges, Safety Films and Driver Training Schools are provided throughout the area.

By promoting safe driving the whole city benefits. And every member benefits with added personal driving safety and protection.

Eastland Seen Boon To Southeast

With the official okay given to the use of Section 16 in Madison Township as the site for Eastland Vocational School, few voices of dissension have been heard.

All the five districts involved (Madison, Canal Winchester, Jefferson, Reynoldsburg and Whitehall) agree that it is centrally located to a reasonable degree. (Any argument that might have arisen from Gahanna, for example, died with the realization the asking price for another considered site was a cool $15,000 an acre.)

School administrators in the Southeast are especially pleased with the site from a financial angle.

With the lion's share of open ground in the county in their backyard, they confidently are recounting the history of industry moving into an area on the heels of a vocational school.

As Carl Miller, Canal Winchester superintendent, stated, "This can do more to broaden our tax base than a dozen housing developments."

Boards of the C-W and Madison districts (which by law originating with the Continental Congress benefit from the section) are also well aware that there are still about 500 acres left in it.

If the shadow of industry becomes an actuality, they undoubtedly will seek legislative approval to sell some of this land, as the income from monies received from an industrial sale would be a welcome addition to school revenues.

The results of the latest survey indicate that taxpayers and school boards are not the only ones ready to clap as the vocational school begins to get away from the drawing board stage.

Students in grades eight through 12 in the five districts were asked whether

Funeral Set Today

Service was set for the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gullet at the Church of Christ in Christian Union Ashville, at 2:20 p.m. Wednesday. Keith Jenkins, 11, and his nine-year-old brother, Jeffery, who lived with their mother and step-father at 288 Groveport-pk, drowned in Big Walnut Creek Friday. The tragedy occurred sometime after the boys left home to visit a near-by friend who they found away from home. They apparently decided to go swimming. Survivors beside the parents are their brothers, Roy and Charles, and a maternal grandmother. The Cook and Son Funeral Home officiated and interment will be at Reber Hills Cemetery in Ashville.

Perry Home Hit

According to Mrs. Rothbe Perry, of Obetz, the damage to her home when hit Sunday morning by a 1966 Ford will amount to thousands of dollars. The accident occurred when Wayne Vaugn of Hilliard, enroute to take charge of services at the Canal Winchester Baptist Church, lost control of his car just east of the viaduct in the center of the village. Vaugn, who is reported in fair condition in Riverside Hospital told Mrs. Perry he believed he blacked out. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are the parents of Ronald Perry, Obetz's mayor.

RUTH HAYNES

Ruth Anne Haynes, named to the court of the Maiden of Roses Sunday, embarked on her royal career several years ago. Even as a freshman she was chosen attendant to both the football and basketball queens of Canal Winchester, as a sophomore she was C-W Track queen and in both her junior and senior years she was selected queen of FFA. Editor of the school newspaper, the Mirror, a varsity cheerleader for the past two years and a member of National Honor Society and of Student Council, Ruth Anne is a happy example of beauty and brains. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Haynes of Canal Winchester — Lithopolis-rd, she is off to Miami University this fall.

Get On Your Horse

The word is out in the Southeast—"Saddle up and head Groveport way." Members of the Cruiser 4-H Club who are sponsoring an all-day horse show at the Big City Garden Center this Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m., promise a great show with classes in the morning for Franklin County 4-H equestrians and open classes in the afternoon. It's free for youngsters under 12 but teenagers and adults are asked to divvy up 50 cents for admission. Refreshments will be available.

Inside The Spectator

PART TWO on Ohio's Civil Rights Commission — answering complaints about it — is discussed by Richard Zimmerman on the Editorial Page.

A KIND of revolution by the "New Left" at Ohio State is reviewed in the final part of an exclusive Spectator series — on the back page.

A SPECIAL section on one of Columbus' most unique communities — the German Village — is contained in this week's issue.

TWO LITTLE girls arrived a couple weeks early Sunday for the real excitement in Ashville, but they consoled themselves with admiring the dozen or so planters placed throughout the village after Mayor Charles Morrison sold the idea of "think-flowers" around. The children are, Marlene, left, and Jeannie, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harmon of 682 Moler-st, Columbus.

Ashville Sets Big Weekend

The fish are ordered, teenagers and tots are pressing their ruffles, and the Village of Ashville is in the midst of its annual frantic rush to get ready for its Fourth of July Celebration.

With four nights and three days of festivities planned, the excitement will officially begin with the Little Miss and Mister Parade, sponsored by the Women's Civic Club for children between four and seven at 7 p.m. Friday, July 1.

Teenagers will have their moment of glory the following evening when Miss Ashville will be chosen from contestants 16 or over, and the winner will have the honor of leading the big parade on the Fourth which opens the climaxing day at 11 a.m.

It is here that the floats, bikes, pets, antique autos, horses, ponies and individual entries will be judged and prizes galore handed out.

Although it is a community affair, Ashville is far from unfriendly, and con-

Fever Tick Rides In On Spring's Coattail

Spring and early summer bring warm weather, June roses, green grass — and a hitch - hiking freeloader whose popularity is zero wherever he may go.

The unwelcome immigrant is the tick that bears Rocky Mountain Fever.

According to Dr. Ollie Goodloe, health commissioner, the ornery critter made his first trip East in the late thirties aboard the cattle rescued from starvation during a great drought on the western plains.

Last month a post morten performed on a middle-aged man who died in a local hospital, showed evidence of the "exotic's disease.

However, as he was an itinerant whose trail was next to impossible to trace, authorities are at loss to know whether he became an unwilling host to the parasite locally or hundreds of miles from here.

Also, because of general debilitation, he was a poor medical risk, thus it was difficult to say whether Rocky Mountain fever was more than "a contributing factor" to his death.

The case of a four-year-old recently discharged from Children's Hospital after a bout with the disease was much clearer.

Her grandmother relates that her extremely high fever (105 degrees) and livid rash and depression had physicians stumped until one suspected Rocky Mountain Fever.

His suspicions were strengthened when a tick was found buried in her scalp.

It is believed the tick had fallen into the child's hair during a weekend on a Ross County farm a few days before the first symptoms appeared.

Fortunately, the disease responds well to antibiotics, especially if treatment is begun early.

With these and at least two other recent cases (a man and another child), Dr. Goodloe stated that he intends to issue a bulletin on the malady which is extremely difficult to diagnose. (One patient was reported by a member of his family to have been treated "for everything from flu to measles" before a correct diagnosis was made.)

Although most genera of ticks are relatively harmless, all are annoying and can be a source of local infection.

Anyone who has been in a heavily vegetated area likely to be tick-infested (hunters, hikers, campers, etc.) are advised to check their persons for presence of the reddish brown insect. As one usually moves over the body for several hours before attaching itself by burying its head in the skin to draw blood, this

Attempt Made To Lure Nurses To Help Meet Medicare Rush

By The Spectator's
JANE ROBINSON

Local physicians and hospital administrators are anticipating a land-office business when Medicare goes into operation July 1.

Last week, The Spectator reported that with hospitals operating at near-capacity, additional beds will eventually be provided by new construction and the addition of extended-care facilities. Also the fortunate position that Franklin County enjoys in doctor-patient ratio was noted.

This week the burden, considered critical, which will be placed upon the nursing profession will be discussed.

Although the $34,500,000 expansion planned for local hospitals by 1970 will raise beds from 3,000 to 4,100, no one knows where the additional nurses are coming from.

A recruiting program to lure qualified nurses from retirement is meeting limited success. (Last summer 80 inactive nurses attended refresher classes to ready themselves for re-entry into their profession.)

The training facilities of both University and Grant Hospitals are being enlarged and consideration is being given to reducing the training period for non-teaching nurses from three to two years.

However, according to Grant Drennan, associate director of the Columbus Hospital Federation, a sharp division of opinion exists here. (There is no thought of reducing the four-year baccalaureate training considered necessary for women planning to enter their field through the teaching or administrative doors.)

Dr. Frederick Dierker, chairman of the legal committee of the Academy of Medicine of Columbus and Franklin County, and others concerned with the problem attribute the relatively low salaries commanded by an RN as a negative factor.

The hospital ratio of five registered nurses to one practical, according to an administrator at Riverside, could probably be reduced—IF licensed practical nurses were available.

Here again, the demand already vastly exceeds the supply. And although their training requirements are under those for an RN, many feel wages are not commensurate with the 12 months of classroom and in-hospital training that is mandatory for licensing.

Alum Creek Project Threatened

COLUMBUS' CREMEAN
Wants Water Control

By The Spectator's
BOB TENENBAUM

Columbus and Westerville city councils will sit down within the next few days to try to iron out a dispute that threatens the future of the multi - million dollar Alum Creek dam project.

The dispute, centering around water supply from the dam and Westerville's plans for a new sewage treatment plant, hasn't yet delayed planning for the dam — but spokesmen for the Army Corps of Engineers in Huntington, W. Va., warn that a prolonged disagreement could seriously delay the long-debated flood control project.

Both sides insist they want the dam built as soon as possible, presumably aiming for a 1971 completion date set by the engineers. But both sides also admit that unless concessions are made by both parties, there is a "very real danger" the project could be placed in jeopardy.

A corps spokesman indicated that in order for planning to continue without interruption, some local agreement should be reached by the end of this year.

Key to the dispute is Westerville's proposed sewage treatment plant just south of the Columbus Outerbelt. The Ohio Department of Health has given approval for completion of final plans.

Columbus' objection to the plant, as explained by service director Warren J. Cremean, is that as much as 15-million gallons of water a day may be needed to wash away the effluent produced by the plant.

In other words, Cremean claims, Columbus would be footing a $12-million bill for 37-million gallons of water a day and could wind up with only about 25 million gallons.

Westerville City Manager Tom Bay, however, insists that even if Westerville and neighboring Huber Ridge reach their full 50,000 population potential, the sewage plant would require a maximum of five million gallons a day.

"The dam is designed for a normal daily streamflow of three million gallons which does not affect the 40 million gallon water supply "feature," Bay said. "We could use that three million gallons without cutting into Columbus' supply. We could hope for another two million to take care of all our sewage but if we couldn't get it, we would be perfectly willing to limit the use of our plant."

Westerville feels it will want a maximum of three million gallons daily for public consumption. It feels it should have the right to contract directly with the state or the Corps of Engineers for the water, paying for it when it uses it.

But Cremean wants Columbus to have control of all the water, selling it back to Westerville or any other suburb that wants it — at higher rates than Columbus customers would pay.

Bay indicated that "we don't think we should have to buy water from Columbus and pay an additional 50 percent for it. This is more than just a city-suburb

SOCIAL TRAVEL NOTES:

Dunbars Pen From Saudi Arabia; East Siders In Vienna 'Love It'

By The Spectator's
MARY SELLECK

Travel notes, big news these simmery, summery days, indicate the annual exodus is on in full sway. Colorful cards, winging in from various and sundry global shangra-las, reveal that a goodly portion of Columbus' continent - commuting population is in absentia.

From far-off Saudi Arabia comes word that the Neil T. Dunbars have completed their European travels prior to making their new home in Arabia. The Dunbars, accompanied by their youngsters, Robin, Tim and Kim, departed several weeks ago.

THE FAMILY, for the next two years, will reside in Ridadh, where Mr. Dunbar will be in charge of a newly founded Civil Service program.

From Vienna, city of lilting laughter and Strauss waltzes, comes word that a trio of young coeds "love it dearly." Touring the continent are East enders, Miss Kathy Bidlack, Miss Susie Larson and Miss Harriet Nalty. Prior to their return in late August the girls will have toured 13 countries highlighted with side trips to Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and East Berlin.

A bubbly note from Mrs. G. F. Holmes, vacationing on Mallorca, indicates she has found the perfect Shangri-La!

I'VE TRAVELLED extensively," she writes, "but never, never anywhere have I found such a spot and such warm, exciting people."

The Paul Evans, popular surbanites are on a world tour. From Columbus they jetted to the West Coast, hopped to Hawaii and are currently Orient-bound. By mid-August they hope to be camping through the length and breadth of romantic, ruin-blessed Italy.

Enjoying England's picturesque charms is Mrs. Thomas J. Ryan who jet-hopped to London in April. Mrs. Ryan, who is visiting her sister, has been feted with a gay and gala round of parties, teas and soirees since her arrival.

TODAY'S TRAVEL notes read like an Aladdin adventure! Everyone is everywhere! A local quartet, Miss Emily Anderson, Miss Jane Johnson, Miss Ann Ward and Miss Mary Lee Roberts, are on the continent either teaching or as guests of local families.

Ensconced in their Swiss domiciles are Miss Roberts and Miss Ward. The former is a houseguest of a Geneva family while the latter is the summer guest of a family in Neuchatel. Miss Anderson is enrolled in the Florence Art School and Miss Johnson is continuing her French studies in Paris.

The final three weeks of their nine-week European stay will be spent exploring central and south Italy.

THAT VETERAN traveler, Southsider, Miss Mabel Mauger, accompanied by Grandview-ite, Miss Betty Mullen, will be Scandinavia bound this weekend. From Frankfort, first leg of their exciting itinerary, the Columbusites will hop to Copenhagen and on to Oslo prior to boarding ship at Bergen for a cruise to the land of the midnight sun.

Another Southsider, Mrs. Eleanor Felkner, will scoot across the Atlantic to Paris where she will join a Linje tour for an exciting and fun-filled continental sojourn. A year ago Mrs. Felkner visited Switzerland, Austria, Italy and Spain.

"I succumbed to the lure," sighed the about - to - depart holiday-er. Mrs. Felkner, incidentally, speaks Spanish as fluently as she does English.

A LITTLE note reveals that the John R. Mitchells, while en route to Sorrento, via the fabled Amalfi Drive, (it can only be described as a Renaissance Miami Beach), scooted up to a toll gate to discover Capri-bound, Mr. and Mrs. James Herbert, former Westgate neighbors who now make their home in Cleveland.

"Everyone, every where here in Italy is the 'ottimo' (epitome of hospitality," pen the Mitchells.

"Italy," wrote the poet Keats, "is forever engraved in my heart." Most Americans succumb to the lure and the lore. The mere word is, for me, magic. It evokes a necklace of memories.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Let's, For Freud's Sake, Flex

WHITE

WASHINGTON—Senator Russell Long of Louisiana, the assistant Democratic leader of the Senate, has fresh cause to realize that you can't win them all.

Some time ago he evoked the pitying scorn and displeasure of the happy few who form the New Left by roundly confessing that the mere sight of the American flag stirred emotion within him. The case he had meant to make (for the American position in Viet Nam) was of course ruled out of order at once by the lefties, on the ground that his social error was so unpardonable as to make his logic inapplicable.

Now, unrepentant and unshriven, Long has got himself into a similar fix. Again, it is not so much because of the substance of his argument as his unwise way of making it.

This time, the subject was last Sunday's Father's Day. In objecting to the solemn adoption by the Senate of the United States of a resolution praising Father's Day, he rested upon the charge that this holiday was mainly good only for merchants who sell very odd ties for Daddy to teen-age daughters and sons.

In this foredoomed sortie, Long was met only by a cold silence. What need he have done?

First, he should have announced that seven forward-looking psychiatrists were ready to testify that Father's Day was clearly a backward-looking device to coerce the free spirit of the young into harmful respect or affection for their paters.

Next, he should have waved a clutch of telegrams from the more freedom-loving campuses protesting that the constitutional right to dissent from Father's Day was being shamelessly denied in the Senate without even the small grace of a public hearing on TV.

He could have pointed out the sinister implications of an act of government to force a reactionary Father's Day down the throats of young men who, by a similarly brutal act of government, were confronted with the possibility of having one day to serve in the armed forces of the United States.

Given some anguished brow-clutching — to show that he was in truth a committed intellectual — he would then have needed only to adopt some of the richer rhetoric of the New Left: Let us dare to think the unthinkable. Let us, for Freud's sake, be flexible.

And, come to think of it, what might not "world opinion" — or rather that elite world opinion whose duty it is to lead the intellectual peasantry — see in this Father's Day affair? Might not the best and most sensitive of foreign minds recoil from it as only another poorly disguised effort to promote that crude American materialism already so threatening to the really good life abroad? — Copyright 1966 by United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Bitter Look At Glitter Critter

GOLDWATER

The shabby reality behind the glittering propaganda of the Great Planned Society's so-called war on poverty is being exposed in the one urban poverty area which, because of its size and centrality, was to have been a model.

The anti-poverty operations in New York City's Harlem reportedly are so laced through with corruption that even the administration's fondest hopes of keeping the situation quiet or covered are crumbling.

- A wire service survey of the operations shows these examples:
- The anti-poverty program failed to pay some $500,000 in payroll and Social Security taxes and bills.
- Part of its millions of dollars in federal aid went to finance a Black Arts Theater which staged violently racist, anti-white dramas of the sort which, in reverse, would have called down the wrath of the administration.
- The entire program is being investigated by the district attorney.
- When the program last was audited, a little item of $800,000 was missing.

Yet, the federal government is trying to press nearly $2-million more on the Harlem poverty fighters. And, in what must be an all-time record for brass, the poverty fighters are refusing to accept unless the amount is tripled.

Putting Sargent Shriver to work on it full time, which has been President Johnson's lone contribution to solving the poverty war's many problems, has had no noticeably beneficial effect except to clamp a lid on much of the intra-office griping that has become a hallmark of poverty's Washington warriors.

President Johnson, however, has made excessive political profits from his poverty program. By institutionalizing poverty, as I have frequently pointed out, he has assured himself a virtually personal voting bloc.

Such political profits should not forever go without some repayment or explanation to the folks who are footing the bill. The ironic truth of this situation is that even the poor, with whom President Johnson is supposed to be so deeply concerned, are beginning to pay an ever steeper share of the bill, thanks to the money-cheapening policies of this administration.

All Americans, therefore, are owed the common courtesy of some Presidential attention to the obvious crisis that is growing in the poverty program. It would be too much to expect the most honest attention of all—an admission that poverty's cure is work, not public programs. It is not too much, I hope, to expect some attention to common honesty in the program.

The President has never been shy in demanding that Americans pay his bills for political programs. We should not be shy now, in asking that he give us some candid accounting of where the money really has been going and for what purpose. — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

How Valid Are Complaints?

By RICHARD ZIMMERMAN

Dayton Journal Herald

A brief look at the continuing Ohio Civil Rights Commission (OCRC) investigation into charges of racial discrimination made by the Columbus NAACP against building-trade unions and contractors working on the twin towers of the OSU-Olentangy dormitory project suggests ways to evaluate the validity of complaints that the Commission is understaffed, underpaid and unaggressive.

While discussing discrimination in the building-trades business, a Negro masonry contractor, standing in the cold, unfinished concrete shell of the new high-rise dorm, pointed unhappily to still exposed electrical wiring.

"We'll have to cut brick to fit around that wiring, and that costs time and money. The plans call for the wiring to be flush with these door frames," the young contractor patiently explained to his visitors. The wiring obviously was not flush. The electrical company on the OSU project is one of those building-trade contractors whom Columbus civil-rights groups claim will not hire skilled Negro labor.

"We don't know if they (the electricians) do this on purpose to us," the masonry foreman put in, "but it sure seems that way."

The Negro contractor has other problems as well. Because the relatively few Negro bricklayers have difficulty finding work with white contractors, the Negro masonry contractor hires mostly members of his own race. But now well into a busy construction season, the Negro contractor needs brick-layers of any color to join his integrated crew. But he claims repeated requests to union officials generally fail to produce his fair share of the available labor pool.

One of the masonry contractor's most skilled craftsmen presented a less complicated complaint. He told of repeated efforts to hire on with a white contractor during a slow season. After being told there was no work now nor would there be in the future, the Negro bricklayer claimed to observe the contractor hiring white masons. The complainant said he went to his mostly-white union for help but got a polite brushoff.

At this writing, the general charges of discrimination against unions and contractors at the OSU project are still being investigated by the OCRC. The bricklayer's individual complaint already has been ruled invalid by a commission investigator.

There are two "professional" OCRC regional staff members assigned to cover the quarter of the state which includes Columbus. The single field investigator for the 24-county area is a former employe of the Columbus Water Department. He has no professional or personal background in human relations or investigatory work. He holds no college degree. He is paid $500 a month.

The regional director in charge of the entire southeastern section of Ohio was an auditor for 10 years in the office of then-State Auditor James A. Rhodes. He holds a teaching degree in education and has been active in the NAACP, but has no educational or professional qualifications for human relations work.

The executive supervising these two "professionals" and the commission's other 23 staff members is OCRC Executive Secretary Ellis Ross, a respected 19-year veteran of the Ohio State Employment Service.

But Ross, a Republican, won his post only after his Democratic predecessor was summarily bounced soon after the Rhodes administration took office. Because civil-rights leaders generally are suspicious of politics and because of the questionable qualifications, size and budget of the OCRC staff, Columbus NAACP leaders are not expecting much help in their drive to integrate the building trades.

"Ellis seems to be very competent," says OSU Professor David McConnell, chairman of the Columbus NAACP's Labor and Industry Committee and a violent critic of the commission. "But he knows his job — it's to keep the lid on things."

After meeting with the commission staff earlier this year, McConnell charged that their approach to the building-trades investigation was "all but irrelevant." Referring to an earlier study made by the Cincinnati building-trades, McConnell said: "This information (being collected at the OSU project) merely corroborates what we already know is true throughout the state: Few, if any, Negroes are employed as carpenters, electricians, iron-workers, plumbers and other skilled craftsmen. At the rate the commission is going, it will take it two years to get around to the real problem, which is that the AFL-CIO craft unions have been lily-white for years."

Judging from an OCRC letter concerning its initial findings, McConnell's charges of duplication seem substantial. As in Cincinnati, the commission counted heads and found a disproportionately small number of Negroes in the building-trade unions and on the job at the OSU project. Its initial suggestions call for written promises by unions and contractors to end racial discrimination.

"It is planned to sit with each joint apprenticeship committee to acquaint them with the present image in terms of the enrollment of more minority group applications," wrote OCRC Chairman Hugo Sabato.

It is just this sort of mild attempt to solve the long-standing problem that riled McConnell about the otherwise statistically-valuable Cincinnati study. He suggested it is time for firm action, not more conferences. He said the Cincinnati report's recommendations were "seriously deficient" and called for court orders and contract terminations to enforce state and federal anti-discrimination laws.

Regardless of whether all the statements of the Negro masonry contractor, the bricklayer and McConnell are completely valid, it becomes clear the job of investigating racial discrimination in the building-trades field should include more than a simple, annual head-count. An investigator must have a knowledge of the complex apprenticeship systems and know when they are being used to keep the labor market tight and when they are being used for racial reasons. He must also be aware of the more subtle means of discrimination, such as those involved in the masonry contractor's charges.

Jduging from their background, their workload and their initial report, it is highly questionable whether OCRC investigators can do more than a superficial job. For example, even though OCRC has reported that its field work at the OSU dorm was virtually completed, the Negro masonry contractor said he had never been approached by commission field investigators.

NEXT WEEK: How did Ohio's Civil Rights Commission get into the situation it is in today and what can be done about it?)

White House Press Conference, Current Style

Dam The Differences

Petty Inter-governmental jealousies are causing a delay in the badly-needed Alum Creek Dam. It's a delay that could postpone the project for years . . . perhaps indefinitely.

The communities of Columbus and Westerville are locked in a fight over who should control the water from the dam and treatment of affluent by Westerville in a proposed new sewage treatment plant.

Construction of this dam overrides all other considerations. Further delay could create a critical water situation in the area — a situation obviously more critical that two communities attempting to show each other who's who and what's what.

Columbus and Westerville councils are planning to meet to iron-out differences. It is imperative that they reach an agreement and get the wheels turning again.

The Spectator urges these governmental bodies to put differences aside in the interests of all residents in Central Ohio.

Any other course would be a flagrant and inexcusable violation of the public trust.

Not So Wonderful World

The "Wonderful World of Ohio" is going to be embarrassed this week.

Already under way is the 10-day Ohio Walk for Decent Welfare, a march of welfare recipients beginning in Cleveland last Monday and culminating with a demonstration at the statehouse here June 30.

All marchers want is that the state raise the level of welfare payments to the standard that has been set by the state for minimum existenco.

These people, chiefly women and children, are not shiftless beggars nor chronic idlers. They can't work.

And their misery will be on parade this week for the state and the nation to

The Spectator Newspapers are generally not sympathetic to marches and pickets or other demonstrations. In an ordered society other means are available to seek redress from government.

But sometimes the demonstrations are a result of frustration with the regular

Often they result from the failure of government to assume its responsibilities.

This appears to be the case with the Welfare March.

If Ohio were a poor state which could not afford to look after its own the march might be a futile gesture. But this is one of the richest states in the nation and state officials are sitting on a fat surplus of public taxes.

The Spectator urges Governor Rhodes to mount the statehouse steps June 30 and tell the marchers of the glories of "The Wonderful World of Ohio."

Or, better still, to take the necessary steps to raise welfare payments to the niggardly level of minimum existence.

They Said It

"Two movements in diametric opposition to each other are receiving much attention in the national press: the ecumenical movements and the 'God Is Dead' movement. It signifies something. Could it be an increased awareness of our spiritual needs and an accelerated search for the answer to those needs? Let us hope so."—One [illegible] (Ala.) Democrat.

Letters To The Editor

Heart Beat Flickers

To The Spectator:

I was certainly interested in the activities of the Heart of the Hilltop organization. However, it seems it is a case of "too little, too late."

Seiller's, a Hilltop institution for years, changed hands and moved to Central Point; Palmer Motors closed; the Lamplighter shut down; it is rumored that Cussins and Fearn will leave in September and that Harry Graham Shoes is going to move to a shopping center. It is also rumored that the Hilltop Lanes (Heart President Roy Borghese's establishment) is soon to shut its doors, along with the Hilltop Market (which now closes one day a week).

That's seven. It seems that the lifeblood of the Heart of the Hilltop is being drained away.

Says Primary Diluted

To The Spectator:

Unfortunately in the Franklin County Democratic Party, the party primary (one of the last enclaves of individual political expression) is being seriously diluted by the maneuvers of Mr. (Jerry) Ryan, the county chairman.

He has seen fit to appoint to the executive committee (an executive committee that is larger than the parent body) those people whom he had supported for party office but who had been defeated in the primary.

This virtually robs many local party supporters of significant political participation.

Winchester Wins Pair After Loss

Canal Winchester of the Mid-State Little League put a pair of victories together last week after falling to strong Baltimore, 2-0.

The Canal wins came over Julian Spears (11-2) and the Ravens of Columbus (8-0).

Canal winger Cary Hanners flipped a one-hitter at Spears. He whiffed 13.

Sunday night John Hartman's towering home run paced Winchester's eight-run attack.

LAFB Leads In TAC Title Race

Lockbourne AFB holds a narrow lead in the race for the Tactical Air Command Commander's Athletic Trophy.

Atop the standings with a 795 point total, Lockbourne leads Seymour-Johnson AFB, Goldsboro, N.C., by 10 points. The trophy is awarded to the base compiling the most participation and competition points in 13 base level sports.

In the 10 to 13 competitions completed, Lockbourne has participated in six. Base athletes captured TAC basketball, wrestling and track and field team and individual championships.

Mets' Don Montgomery Sparks Groveport Play

The Mets might not be the top dog in the big leagues but their counterpart in the Mosquito Division of the Groveport Baseball League appears to be on its way to a banner season — if nine-year-old Don Montgomery maintains his pitching pace.

Young Don has already turned in back-to-back no-hitters for the Mets, fanning 14 in the first whitewash and 11 in his second no-hitter, called after four frames.

THAT SECOND win was a 12-1 verdict over the Jolly Rogers — a victory which kept the Mets deadlocked for first place (2-0) with the Mustangs, who outslugged the Angels, 15-8, with Porter picking up the mound decision.

In the other Mosquito Division game, the Jets outlasted the Redskins, 14-12, with D. Willison besting Edwards on the mound.

In the Little League Division, the Dodgers stayed on top with their fourth straight win — 9-2 over the Dodgers with Cassidy the winner.

THE COLTS stayed right behind at 3-0 with an 8-2 verdict over the Chiefs with Johnston picking up the win.

In other Little League action, the Reds pounded the Blue Darts, 21-3, as Ranft got the win and the Bombers "bombed" the Falcons, 19-8, with Pack securing the victory.

Here are the standings:

LITTLE LEAGUE

Team	W.	L.

South Range To Host 'Beat Pro' July 8-17

The South Golf Range at 2980 S. High-st will host the 1966 "Beat the Pro," a project of the Nightingale Cottage Wing, Friday, July 8, through Sunday, July 17, (7:30 till 11 p.m. each evening).

Through this annual project the Nightingale Cottage receives support to accommodate the convalescing, babies and children up to 16.

BALLS WILL be sold five for 50 cents or 10 for $1. Top half-hour prizes will be made and three prizes will be awarded at the end of each evening.

The Big Bear Stores will give $100 to each amateur golfer who scores a hole-in-one and the top man and woman golfer having the best shot for the 10 - day period will receive the John W. Roberts Trophy.

Here's the list of pros to beat (shown here in order of appearance, July 8 through 17): Jim Lucius (Brookside), Charles Steiner (Lockbourne AFB), Duff Lawrence (Scioto), Don Shock (Columbus C. C.), Vince Scartz (Stoney Creek), Army Gianvito (Groveport), Jack Ross (Walnut Hills), Joe Scurtz (York Temple), Al Effler (Winding Hollow) and Nick Scarpetti (Airport).

EACH EVENING a Pro shoots five balls with his closest shot to the hole chalked — thus marking the radius for contestants to better.

Gahanna Sea-Lions To Hold Swim Meet

The Gahanna Sea-Lions Booster association will hold a Swimming Invitational Saturday at the Jefferson Local Recreation Council Pool.

Members of the Central Swimming Association will officiate and trophies will be awarded to the first, second and third finishers with ribbons going to the fourth, fifth and sixth placers.

The 80-event card will start at 9 a.m.

East, Ready, Whetstone Hold First Place In Summer Loops

East, Bishop Ready and Whetstone hold down the top spots in the three high school summer loops in the metropolitan area.

The Tigers of Paul Pennell head the Eastern division, the Braves of Paul Eckelberry top the Northern loop with Ready currently in front of the Western (only two games played thus far).

East behind curve-baller Erkie Byrd eased Eastmoor out of the top spot with a 2-1 win last week. Paul Pennell's group head the Eastern League with a jazzy 5-0 record.

WHETSTONE'S BRAVES, sailing along with a sporty 6-0 summer loop mark, has been getting strong pitching help from a nifty trio headed by George Rutan (3-0). The other three wins came from Bruce Powell (2-0) and Dale Ross (1-0).

Paul Eckelberry's crew is being led in the hitting department by Rich Clouse and John Davies.

Whetstone didn't suffer any graduation losses this June as Eckelberry had 19 of his top 28 diamondmen registered in the sophomore class.

BISHOP READY uncorkled a 12 run, 13 hit attack to rip Grove City in the first of a double dip last weekend. The Knights won both outings, 12-0 and 7-1.

That win settled the Knights, a fair 13-10 team during the regular season, in the top slot of the just-starting Western Division of the Summer League.

Paced by Greg Nesser's torrid .431 batting clip, Worthington's Legion squad is locked in a tie with Capital City for the top spot in the American Legion race.

WORTHINGTON is led on the hill by Gene Rogers, Watterson's pitching ace, John Savage and Dave Cowgill, both from Worthington High and Bill Wagner from Lansing, Mich.

Besides Nesser in the hitting department, Watterson's Tom McKeon and Worthington's Mike Cohee have fashioned .360 bats thus far.

Trophies and cash prizes await the winners.

UMPS NEEDED

Umpires are needed badly for duty in the Eastern Ohio Pony-Grad League. Interested parties should contact George Hardy at BR. 4-7528.

Giants Maintain Lead; Maez, Frost Standouts

The Giants boosted their seasonal record to 11-1 last week, clinging onto the lead in the Major Division of the Lockbourne AFB Little League via 10-2 and 10-5 wins over the last-place Dodgers.

Ray Maez upped his pitching mark to 5-0 by copping the opener with Mike Frost's homer accounting for the Dodgers' lone tallies.

FROST TAGGED his third four-bagger of the season in the second game but still got bested on the mound by Giant hurler Roger Coleman.

The Pirates held onto second place in the Majors with 16-3 and 8-2 decisions over third-place Mets. Biggest blow for the losers was Eric Murphy's double.

The Twins held the lead in the Minor Division with the Red Sox, Orioles and Yankees deadlocked for second and White Sox and Indians tied for last.

STAN MOWERY allowed nine hits as the Orioles clobbered the Indians, 26-6 — the losers bunching their runs with three-run first and fourth frames.

Big frame for the winners was the fifth when the Orioles pushed across ten big markers. Charlies Jones' unassisted double play proved to be the Orioles' fielding gem of the day.

Hitters Set Early Pace In T-V Baseball Loop

The Mets, Dodgers, Cardinals and Redlegs were most successful in recent Teays Valley Little League play.

With Bob Archer (two doubles, single) showing the way, the Mets clobbered the Indians, 17-7. Rick Jones, Dave Archer, Jim Logsdon and Lester Scarberry were other Met hitting standouts with the latter also picking up the mound win.

JAY DERR, Jeff Beatty and Jim Pabst each had two hits for the Indians.

Pitcher Sammy Wilson and hitters Jimmy Wilson (single, double) and Jack Brinker (triple, two singles) set the pace as the Dodgers edged the Giants, 3-2.

Steve Clay had two singles for the losers.

ELSEWHERE, the Cards outslugged the Mets, 10-8, with Dale Partlow (two singles) getting the pitching victory and Joe Lombardo (double, two singles) taking hitting honors.

Bobby Archer's two doubles were best fo rthe losers.

Don Crosby (three singles), Bob Smith (three singles) and Jim Jenkins (two doubles) provided the offense as the Redlegs outlasted the Indians, 16-11.

JAY DERR (single, double, triple), Terry Althouse (three singles), Jeff Beatty, Jim Pabst and Terry Lambert hit best for the Indians.

Randy Nungster was the winning pitcher.

ALL MANAGERS are urged to turn in a resume of their game to Marvin Hicks at the completion of each game.

The girls' softball teams opened their summer season yesterday and will play each Tuesday and Thursday.

The league will sponsor a dance at Ashville Elementary Saturday from 8 till 11 p.m.

IN & AROUND TOWN

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

'Arsenic' In P.O.G. Tent

"Arsenic and Old Lace," Playhouse-on-the-Green's opener for the season, is a hilariously enjoyable evening. The play is delightful, full of surprises, suspense and comedy. Combining a creaking window seat, Teddy Roosevelt, dead bodies, basement burials along with an experienced, talented cast, one is guaranteed a good show.

While there were the normal opening night flaws, the show was fun. "Arsenic and Old Lace" is old show that is well written. Possessing many great lines, including a whole bagful of funny punch lines, it still requires a capable cast. Bob Slatter as Teddy Roosevelt does a good job on a difficult role. Not being constantly on the stage makes it hard to keep up a characterization. Teddy's part is one of running on and off stage constantly. Yet, Slatter has the knack of stage mechanics that permitted him to retain the proper characterization.

Another outstanding performance is that of Edward Wright. Wright portrays three elderly men, all different in personality and character. He does a convincing job in all three parts. Ray Giradin, as Mortimer Brewster, a theatre critic, turns in a memorable acting job. The elderly sisters, played by Philippa Bevans and Agnes Young, gave the audience a solid acting job. However, they seemed to be bothered with opening night flutters.

No matter how many times you have seen "Arsenic and Old Lace," it's a sure bet you will enjoy POG's production. The 'Arsenic' is served every night this week, through Saturday. See it. Who knows, it might prove to be educational. One never can be certain that you won't have a Teddy Roosevelt or two sweet old ladies in your family.

The Russians Are Coming

"The Russians Are Coming! The Russians Are Coming!" With these words, the title of a new comedy, pandemonium breaks loose on the screen of the Cinema East Theater. Considered by Charlie Sugarman, operator of Cinema East, as "the greatest comedy to come down the road in 10 years," "The Russians are Coming. The Russians Are Coming" is a story about a Russian submarine stuck on a sandbar off the U.S. coast.

Fearful of being spotted and destroyed by the American Navy or Air Force, the sub crew decides to go ashore and steal, or rather borrow, a power boat to tow their craft off the bar. Nine members of the crew swim to the shore of a little resort island located in the Massachusetts area of our country.

The Russians, intending no harm to anyone, are serious about their intentions of obtaining a boat. They find they must resort to a little rough play. Being on foreign soil, stealing a boat causes the Russians to be more scared than the islanders.

The "scouting party" lands at a desolate beach home, a few miles from the main village, which is occupied by a playwright and his family. They do not believe the Russions' story. So they are tied up and guarded by one man while the rest head to town. As in old melodrama, the husband, Carl Reiner, attacks the guard, who is as frightened as the captives, and heads for town.

Meanwhile, the Russians are already there trying to get a boat. Word gets around. Rumors begin to fly. Instead of eight, the total is reported in the hundreds. They are supposed to be landing at the airport, parachuting into the village and coming by sea. These rumors cause many wild, funny events to take place on the screen. An old World War I veteran in his American Legion uniform, complete with sabre, forms a "home guard." This adds more chaos than order to the situation.

The movie is full of surprises. You never know what will happen next. Some of the funniest lines ever are in this one. It is witty and clever. This is not a slapstick, Jerry Lewis type movie.

While being a comedy, it vividly points out how people react under various emotional circumstances. These reactions create some very funny situations.

The Community Stage

BY CLAUDIA ELKINS

A special treat was in store for community theatergoers last weekend as Little Theater Off Broadway presented an original comedy "Shirt Off His Back." Too seldom does community theater indulge in original scripts. The author, Dick Grace of WTVN-TV, had the lead role of Edison Fimore.

Edison Filmore, a kind-hearted soul, gets into a peck of trouble when his wishes start coming true; his wife becomes the sexy chick next door; his money problems cease when borrowers turn up with payments in full.

Grace turned in a delightful performance. He captured the humbleness of Edson Filmore, yet gave the audience something to laugh at. Grace's scene with the ironing board was simply delightful.

Others cast in the play gave good supporting performances, with special talents coming from Ginny Lee, Jim Hodges and Jim Dippel.

Ginny Lee, as the next door neighbor, had a poodle dog that kept the audience in real suspense. The remaining cast gave passable performances.

The director, Jean Meier, welded together a fine script, good talent and excellent staging, into an almost solid production. Having an original play with the author under foot and being the lead surely could have presented some problems.

OSU'S STADIUM Theatre will open its 17th annual season Wednesday, June 22, with the teenaged musical comedy "Bye Bye Birdie." The run will continue nightly at 8:30 p.m. through Saturday, July 2. Featured in the production are Sandy Ellenwood (left) and Joy Bond as two of the teenagers. Miss Ellenwood plays Kim who is selected to receive the last kiss from the Army-bound rock-and-roll singer Conrad Birdie. Tickets for "Bye Bye Birdie" and all summer productions are now on sale at the Gate 10 Drive-In Box Office. Phone reservations may be made at any time of the day or night by calling CY. 3-2295.

'Birdie' Sings At Stadium

Burlesquing the rock and roll mania that swept the country's juveniles, the musical comedy "Bye Bye Birdie" is now playing nightly at 8:30 p.m. at OSU's Stadium Theatre through Saturday, July 2.

This is a light - hearted musical comedy that delighted New York theatre - goers for 18 months in 1960-61 and toured the globe with enormous success.

The rollicking story of the show centers on the tribulations of a man who is about to lose a gold mine. The gold mine is a guitar-strumming singer whose sideburns, horse warbling and hip-swivelling have made him a teenage idol.

This rock and roll king is about to be drafted into the army and a publicity stunt is dreamed up to make his departure so memorable that he can return to popularity after military service.

The musical is decorated with an abundant set of lilting songs, most of which are well-known all over the country.

Striped and spotted cucumber beetles carry harmful bacteria to cucumbers and muskmelons. So, if you control the insects, you control the bacteria which cause plants to suddenly wilt and die. Spray or dust plants with an insecticide such as methoxyclor, Sevin, Rotenone, or purified DDT. If you use DDT, be sure it is purified. Technical grades of DDT can injure these plants.

Daniel Firestone, president of Firestone Photographs, Inc., recently returned from a quality control and automatic printer maintenance seminar held by Eastman Kodak in Rochester, New York. The seminar was held to acquaint photo processors with the latest developments in the field of automatic color printing.

On The Lawn

By LARRY LAWRENCE

I know a man who got so fed up with the mole runs in his lawn that he finally backed his car up onto the grass, ran a piece of tubing from the exhaust pipe and started the motor. An ingenious and dangerous idea but it didn't work. Either the carbon monoxide escaped or the moles enjoyed it.

A mole is a very persistent animal and if you want to get rid of him you have to understand him. He doesn't dig tunnels for the fun of it or just to get from one place to another. He does it in search of food, particularly grubs. Where there are no grubs to be had there are rarely any moles. So instead of waging war on moles you elimnate their favorite food. It's as simple as that.

Grubs are mostly the larvae of various beetles, including the Japanese variety. They live in the soil and by getting rid of them you not only avoid grub damage but send moles, skunks and raccoons on their way to dig elsewhere.

Garden Group Schedules Show

Members of the Prairie Gardeners are awaiting the completion of the printing of their annual flower show schedules.

Chairman of the show is Mrs. Robert E. Lohr, 138 Fernhill-rd, who is also club vice-president. The show has been scheduled for Saturday, July 23.

bus health commissioner, has already anticipated the impact on public health services that Medicare will trigger.

Under the clauses governing out-patient care, all persons over 65 are entitled to 100 home nursing visits a year. Those signing up for the voluntary part of the program are allowed an additional 100.

He recently received an okay from City Council to raise his table of organization by 30 staff members with Federal funds to begin training "Home Health Aides."

A random survey of two percent of local home made three years ago showed that there are 30,000 chronically ill in the community.

"If these persons avail themselves of only one-half the care to which they are entitled, it will mean 150,000 visits a year," he mused.

Currently public health nurses are making 90,000 visits annually, of which one-sixth are to the elderly.

Goodloe sees meeting the coming avalanche of demands on his staff as possible only through use of non-professional aides.

"Many people will need only a bath, a hot meal, or even dishes washed." Goodloe added, explaining that the skills of the aide will be matched to the needs of the patient.

A representative of Blue Cross which will act as fiscal intermediate between the government and the doctor or patient believes some of the elderly are currenty putting off elective surgery until July 1.

If this is true, it will further aggravate the impact of Medicare as it attemps to get rolling.

Although most are alarmed by the protest of a veritable army of Golden Agers demanding immediate and even "Cadillac" care for a lifetime of accumulated ills, many believe the wrinkles can be ironed out as the program gains momentum.

But one one is denying it will be a long, hot summer.

Chaotic, hectic and overwhelming are a few of the words being used to describe the greatest challenge the medical services of the Central Ohio area have ever faced.

Next week in the final part of this series, the functions of the relatively new "utilization committees" which insure that hospital beds are occupied only by those who need hospital care will be reviewed.

Project—

dispute. It's a matter of principle."

The state's role in the squabble is cloudy. Cremean feels legislative action is needed to allow the Ohio Water Commission to move in and that it would take at least a year before the legislature would act — thus jeopardizing the project. Bay, on the other hand, says he has been assured the state has already exercised such power without legislative action in other cases and could do so again if it wanted to.

Each city feels the other is holding fast to a one-sided position. Bay says Westerville council "might change its mind if Columbus comes up with some reasonable proposals for getting us our water." Cremean claims Westerville's attitude is that Columbus should give the suburb "everything it wants."

Bay also feels his city's case has been badly misrepresented in newspaper stories which implied Westerville's proposed plant would pollute Alum Creek above a point where Columbus would want to get its water.

"That's just not true," he said. "Columbus would get its water between the dam and our plant. Our plant would not cause any pollution of anyone's water supply."

The biggest fear is delay. The Huntington district of the Corps is also responsible for the huge Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal project. That project is a pet of U.S. Rep. Michael Kirwan of Youngstown, powerful member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee.

"If a project favored by a powerful congressman gets in ahead of our project in this district," Cremean said, "it may be a long time before the Alum Creek Dam is built."

It doesn't pay to take chances with your lawnmower. Pick up all stones, sticks, children's toys, and any debris before you start the motor. Then make sure the children and pets are clear of mower range. Lawn mowing isn't a family affair.

And So It Grows . . .

When cutting roses, be sure to use sharp tools. Breaking or twisting off flowers injures the remaining wood. If you'd like your bushes to develop large bushes, it's a good idea not to cut any flowers during the first season after they're planted. If you do cut them during the first season, cut them with very short stems. Removal of foliage with long-stemmed flowers robs the plant of its food-manufacturing capacity and cuts down on growth and flower yield.

Blossom drop on tomato plants can have several causes. One may be variety. Some varieties, such as the "non-acid" types, naturally drop more blossoms than others. Cool nights also can cause some drop. Temperatures below 60 degrees for several nights in a row usually will do it, too.

Too much nitrogen in the fertilizer also might cause blossoms to fall. Thus, fertilizer such as 4-12-8 is preferred. Other causes might be overwatering or hot, drying winds when temperatures stand around 90 degrees.

An inch of water a week and more during hot, windy periods is the amount of moisture needed by your vegetable garden for good plant growth. Horticulturists at Ohio State say this is equivalent to about 560 gallons on a garden measuring 30 square feet, or about 27,000 gallons an acre.

You can water your garden when the rains don't fall, but the specialists advise that when you water — soak the soil thoroughly to a depth of at least six inches. And water it only once in a week, rather than merely sprinkling at frequent intervals.

You can measure the amount of moisture you apply by setting three or four tin cans in the garden. They will collect about the same amount of water as applied to the soil.

Stop harvesting rhubarb when the stalks become thin. Cut off seed stalks as they appear.

You can keep most insects and diseases that attack garden plants under control by periodic applications of an all-purpose insecticide-fungicide dust or spray. But be sure to use the amount specified by the manufacturer. Using more than the amount recommended won't do the job any better.

Be on the lookout for bacterial wilt on your sweet corn plants. Early symptoms are yellow streaks in the leaves that gradually turn brown. In some cases the entire plant dies before it produces. Most corn varieties are tolerant to the disease after the corn has developed four to six leaves, but all varieties are suspectible in the first leaf stage.

The bacteria that causes the disease are carried by the corn flea beetle. So, to control the bacteria, aim your control toward the insect. Spray plants with DDT or Sevin.

Don't mix different pesticides together unless the label recommends it.

Need An Answer?

A neighborhood group would like to take the children on a tour of gardens. Can you suggest some place where youngsters would be welcome?

Yes, a place that children will enjoy and adults will not be on edge because of to little space in Kingswood Gardens in Mansfield. Wide paths, lawns to walk upon, there is lots to see including a mansion that will thrill the whole group. They do not have picnic facilities but there are an abundance of roadside parks and tables between Columbus and Mansfield. Have fun.

Is it true that nasturtiums are sometimes used as a garnish for salads?

Yes, this is true. The leaves are tender and peppery and make a good addition to a tossed salad, but be certain that you do not get any of the garden sprays on your plants if you intend to use it as a food.

ANOTHER WEEK, ANOTHER BIKE

Jack (left), son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Babbert, 5736 Bromley-av, became the proud owner of a Firestone 500 last week. It wasn't a gift. Jack and his brother, Steve, both Spectator newsboys in Worthington, earned their bike and radio with their respective sales of 20 and five pre-paid subscriptions to The Spectator. This week, Joe Achtner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Achtner, 6345 Wilcox-rd, Dublin, entered the winner's circle, and he, too, now boasts two-wheel transportation. With the contest open to one and all, Joe isn't even a carrier, just a first-rate salesman. Circulation Manager Jack Schleup is stealing someone's slogan. Schleup doesn't care how many times a lad comes collecting a radio or bike. "Just bring those subscriptions in, boys," he said. "I've got a whole Firestone production line to draw from." If you want to be a winner, call him at BR. 4-1155 and he'll put you in the running.

they were interested in college preparation only, in a combination of college and vocational courses, in vocational classes only, whether they were undecided but liked the idea of vocational courses, or whether no decision at all had been made.

A total of 53 percent stated they needed vocational education.

The breakdown, by school districts, follows.

Canal Winchester — 268 students responded; 30.8 percent are interested only in college, 18 in vocational school only; 23.7 in both; 13.2 undecided, with favorable leanings toward vocational education, and no decision, 4.3.

Madison — 635 students responded; 19.5 percent, college only; 33.5 vocational only; 27.9, both; no answer on the fourth, and 19.1 undecided.

Whitehall — 120 students responded; 25.8, college only; 25.7, vocational only; 22.2, both; no response on fourth, and 26.3 undecided.

Jefferson — 965 students responded; 30.9 percent, college only; 17.6, vocational only; 27.3, both; no response on fourth and 24.2 undecided.

Reynoldsburg — 822 students responded; 19.8 percent, college only; 20.3, vocational only; 38.8, both; undecided but favorable to vocational, 4.5, and no decision, 16.6.

Fever—

precaution can greatly reduce the possibility of infection.

Goodloe warned that if a tick is found imbedded, care should be taken to remove it without mashing it, or leaving the head at the site of the bite.

This can easily be done by applying heat from a lighted cigarette or a heated nail or a drop of turpentine which will cause it to withdraw.

Although the health commissioner reported the mortality rate of Rocky Mountain Fever is relatively high with the aged, he stressed it is not nearly as dangerous a disease as "for example, measles or TB."

And, very significantly, it is not a contagious disease.

The only way man can contract the fever is transmission by the tick.

Bazaar A Vote Of Confidence In German Village

German Village has not arisen from an area slated for slum clearance by the effort of one man, or even one Society, with one governmental agency behind it.

It has been the awakening of the spirit of history, and the sustained efforts of many that have made German Village not only what it is today, but takes the hopes for its future out of the realm of pipe-dreams.

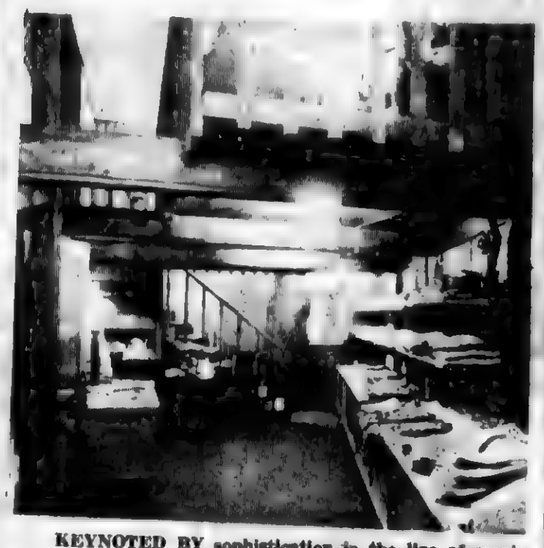
The original dreamers have fought everything from squalor to bankers' skepticism and are at last waging what seems to be a winning battle.



One of the latest votes of confidence in the historical restoration came when several business men with a faith in German Village conceived the idea of an "Old War Bazaar."

Not only did they have faith, they had the vision to see the possibilities of converting an old car barn at 555 City Park-av (more recently a car wash) into one of the show places of German Village.

In the long and narrow structure which wanders a full village block from City Park west to Pearl-at, they created an arcade of shops on three levels which currently is the "talk of the town."

With leases available only to those who too share the Village concept of combining the best of the 20th century with the charm of a world passed by, a unique gem has been added to German Village.

Pictured on this page are views of the "Bazaar" which will be on display during the annual Haus Und Garten tour Sunday.

KEYNOTED BY sophistication is the line of men's clothing carried in the Squire, LTD. It is a shop where even a bride cannot go wrong in selection of a gift for her favorite male. B. J. Meeks, owner, also stocks an exclusive line of toiletries and unusual items such as a stapler fit for a monarch's desk.

OFF THE COURTYARD of the Bazaar is the balcony leading to the gift shop owned by J. Dwight Rogers, Jr., where metal work, china, glass, woodenware and ivory have been brought from all over the world. Primitive ebony figures from Africa, Sheffield steel, Earl of Butte martini pitchers and glasses and Spanish sailing ships are among the many items of special appeal to the masculine whim, and decorator items that "send" the fairer sex.

FEW ARE BETTER able to portray the mood of "The Prisoner" than Martin Tischler, who as a Rumanian refugee during and after World War II, knew of thousands imprisoned by their political enemies. The walnut sculpture is the eye-catcher of the balcony above the "Wood Carver's Shop."

Ein Haus Frau Reported Lost But Unlamented

Many of the frontiersmen in the backlands of Ohio had never seen a printed page when the first German newspapers rolled from Columbus presses.

Now, almost a century and a half later, people (regardless of stock) are still chuckling at the sly humor of the ad appearing in "Der Westbote."

"(1) My wife has left me.
"(2) I will not be responsible for her debts.
"(3) I do not know where she has gone.
"(4) I will prosecute anyone who tells me where she is."

"THE BEST this side of Schrafts." With these words the cheese cake offered at Jergens Konditorei has been described by its patrons. As in the old country where Jergen Klimke and Lothar Sudse learned their trade, in the quaint coffee shop full-meal preparation is left to others and the owners concentrate on what they know so well — the preparation of mouth-watering cakes, rolls and pastry.

Chimneys Askew Common Sight

"Those old slates remind me of miniature sleds poised on runs high above the heads of your villagers."

The comment was made when a young woman looked at the vista afforded by the haphazard and unexpected tumbling of the gleaming blue-black slate roofs of German Village as viewed from a high window in its heart.

And then the chimneys, projecting from odd-angled roofs with peculiar angles of their own, caught her charmed eye.

The drunken staggering of the brick smoke stacks was further accentuated by the terra cotta chimney pots, worn with the flourish of a plume in a Gay Nineties bonnet.

Bob Schmitz Shares A Morning's Stroll Through Village

By ROBERT SCHMITZ

Yes I, too, proudly call German Village home.

By now I know its every street and alley, for I explore them so regularly that I have been named "Der Willage Vanderer." On each jaunt I note favorite architectural jewels anew and usually discover more curiosities and delights. Typical of my jaunts was one I took recently.

Out my front door and onto the corner of Beck and Lazelle-sts I strode. This odd-angle intersection is more European than American and has been called "the most picturesque corner in Columbus."

First a car, then a truck slowed down and their drivers honked at me. In the lead was George Hammond, executive director of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants. George and his wife, Marian, not only live in a beautiful restoration but they have restored property next door and across the street.

Now the truck pulled up to my corner and hesitated.

"Wass ist los, Vanderer?" the driver called out.

This was ebullient, mirthful Phil Kientz, son of a German stone mason and, in his own right, mason, sculptor and painter. Because of his unlimited fund of tall stories and high spirits, Phil has become the Baron Munchausen of German Village.

I waved fondly at Phil before he drove from my corner. Truly, small town camaraderie exists here in German Village next to the heart of a city of 500,000 population.

After all, those who have improved German Village properties have combatted the same problems — local squalor, torpor on the part of city officials, and the incredulity of bank officials. Now we are blood brothers all.

Having walked several blocks, I paused in front of a cheese store and chatted with the owner — young, personable Bob Isaly. A member of a family whose name since 1833 has been synonymous in Ohio with delicious cheese, Bob was one of the far-sighted. He opened his shop in German Village when few Columbus businessmen appreciated the cachet that the solid, on-the-upswing German Village neighborhood could give to its businesses.

Bob and I walked across the street from his old brick building, which he has sandblasted and prettied up with flower boxes. From there we admired Ivan Pusecker's mouth-watering paintings of the Bob Isaly specialty — cheeses of all sizes, shapes and national origins.

Bob surveyed the changing face of S. Third-st. "Imagine what the thrifty old Germans would say if they could see how posh this neighborhood is becoming," he remarked.

We both laughed.

Having fled the uniformity of suburbs, many have chosen character-laden old Deutsch houses to frame their antiques and art collections with values that would cause many an old German to exclaim "Gott in Himmel."

Although many German homes look small on the outside, with their high ceilings and unexpected angles, they give a paradoxical illusion of spaciousness. In our servantless age, this compact spaciousness is appreciated by my new neighbors.

A sleek Merceder-Benz 190SL stopped at the traffic light on Bob Isaly's corner and the driver waved in our direction. As it pulled away, a Mercedes-Benz 220S Grand Touring Car approached from the opposite direction and its driver also waved.

"Both Villagers," I explained to Bob while waving a greeting.

GERMAN VILLAGE has no more enthusiastic supporter than Bob Schmitz (The Willage Vanderer) who, with his wife stopped at a Hans Und Garten tour three years ago and stayed. The restoration of his home at 129 E. Beck-st and its wedge-shaped, PLAN award garden have brought him national acclaim. Schmitz is responsible for much of the materal presented in this section. He orginally prepared it in magazine form, but allowed The Spectator to rearrange its contents for this section.

He shook his head in astonishment. "From jallopies to Mercedes-Benzes in only two years," he exclaimed.

After conversing leisurely with Bob, I waved goodbye and started walking again. Across from Beck Square I came to the imposing home of Alice and Marion Boyer.

The Boyers, who deserted a large country home and acreage for the amenities of German Village living, greeted me at their much-photographed front door.

"Listen," Alice advised.

We cocked our heads, then smiled understandingly as the sound of nearby sand-blasting greeted our ears.

"It began this morning," Marion explained.

"The music of German Village," I announced proudly.

As though in answer to my remark, carpenters' hammers rat-a-tat-tatted from a side street. Now Marion decided to join me on my jaunt. In almost every block we paused before an old home, discussed its recent sale, and speculated upon the outcome of its restoration.

Soon we reached the German Village Society headquarters.

Once a ruin, this charming story-and-a-half brick cottage typified many in the area. Built longways upon a narrow lot, its front windows are flush to the sidewalk. A garden along the side entrance to the rear calls out "Velkommen."

The colorful, folksy German Village office was presided over by handsome, graying Frank Fetch. Frank was one of the leading visionaries of the German Village movement and since the inception of the Society seven years ago has been its president.

Frank was shaking hands with a visitor, a journalist with a national wire service. Soon the visitor was writing down Frank's words.

"We are a cooperative, non-profit organization of 300 members, mostly present or former Columbus residents. We offer advice and counsel to those starting out to restore local property."

Usually in the office with Frank Fetch is another city employe, friendly, efficient Mrs. Helen Bell. Various German Village residents also drop by and answer telephones and help with the many guided tours of the area.

Typical of these selfless beavers is Mrs. Ralph Fischer. Dorothy's duties as treasurer of the Society, and the nearness of the Fischers' story-book Deutsch cottage bring Dorothy to the office frequently.

Now the petite, enthusiastic volunteer accepted a telephone from Mrs. Bell, while Frank Fetch and the wire service man moved to one side and Marion and I stood just inside the door, bemused at bustle where, only a couple of years ago, quiet had ruled.

"Members of the German Village Society give their own time, effort and money to rehabilitate an area of Columbus that contains 1700 homes," Dorothy Fischer told the inquirer at the other end of the telephone. "Most of the society funds come from the sale of tickets for the annual Haus und Garten tour.

Marion Boyer gave me a knowing wink, for it was during the 1964 tour that 4600 tour-takers visited my home.

We found William Scheurer, a local businessman who lives and breathes German Village affairs, in the Commission room.

There an attractive blonde, Miss Helen Wagner, vice-president of August Wagner Breweries, laid down a set of before-and-after photographs of a German Village restoration and greeted the journalist and me.

Commissioner Wagner moved to a front window and nodded across the street at well-maintained shops and newly sandblasted homes.

Now a long file of men and women proceeded past the side windows of the chamber and overflowed the front sidewalk. One of the many tours that inspect the area was about to leave from the back garden.

It makes the days of hard work, the nights of planning and the frustrations that are synonymous with restoration worthwhile.

The sun was now on high and at my doorstep I bid my new-found friends auf Wiedersehen.

As they walked down Beck, several looked back at me and my old house.

Who knows—perhaps soon someone from the group will become my neighbor.

The genial conviviality that is a way of life in German Village is contagious and many who come as sightseers return with architect, contractor and dreams in tow.

Architect Explains Commission Functions

Exactly what is the German Village Commission?

This question is asked again and again. Many have the governmental agency confused with The German Village Society, a private, non-profit organization dedicated only to the historical restoration of the area.

The German Village Commission consists of five members, appointed by Columbus' mayor.

It was formed by city ordinance after the area was declared a historical one, its boundaries defined by statute, rigid zoning enacted and guidelines set that govern new buildings and the exterior changes of existing structures.

Designed to insure that development of the village will conform with the concept of restoration of the area to its original style (brick construction, shuttered windows, tidy courtyards, brick or iron fences, etc.) the ordinance makes application for a "certificate of appropriateness" mandatory prior to the issuance of a building permit.

Approval or disapproval of such applications is the responsibility of the commission.

George Tilley, professor of architecture at Ohio State University who serves on this board, explains, "The area of controls is a sticky one. We are governed by the German Village Code of the City of Columbus, which sets up the ideal of preserving and restoring German Village property and to retain its charm and Old World atmosphere. For that reason, we frown upon such obvious anachronisms—such as fiberglas awnings on an old house. Most of . . ."

He paused, exchanging glances with a local resident who was well aware of the bitterness that has arisen when a property owner with the idea it was strictly his business what color he painted his house or what kind of a fence he built, rebelled at the unsolicited advice.

Tilley continued "MOST of the people who remodel or restore here do so because of a feeling for this area. They are therefore open to the suggestions of the commission."

The commission was first appointed three years ago by former Mayor Westlake. Fred Kaiser and Miss Helen Wagner were chosen from a list of four submitted by the German Village Society, as the ordinance requires. The choice of the other three members (one of whom must be an architect) is the responsibility of the mayor. The terms of Kaiser, Tilley, Miss Wagner, Fred Gockenbach and Bill Scheurer all expire in August. Whether any of these will be reappointed is not known.

LEFTY'S MURAL A FEAST FOR THE EYES

OLD WORLD atmosphere has long been a by-word at Deibel's Grille, on Whittier-st, but it rang out like the Stein Song since the oil depicting the festivities at eventide customary in a German household went up to face the massive bar. It was painted by German Village artist, Ivan Pusecker, better known as "Lefty" who also serves as a trustee of German Village Society.

History Of German Village

Louis, Sofia, Karl, Emil.

Those were the good Deutsch names Luisa Scharfenberg and Louis Schmitz (grandparents of Bob Schmitz of German Village) gave their children.

They often spoke of the names proudly, given they claimed, "To remind dem of der Vaterland und make dem goot American citizens. After all, what vould Columbus be mit out its Germans?"

Who knows?

But it certainly wouldn't be the Columbus we know today.

By 1821, five years after Columbus became the state capital, enough Germans had settled here to form a German Church.

The first German band um-pah-pahed its way down the Columbus streets in 1832, the same streets that today bear the names of the first families—Jaeger, Berger, Rinehard, Beck, Stimmel, Blenkner, Hoster and Brust.

The first German language newspaper appeared a year later and by 1848 the German colony on the South-side of Columbus was a closely-knit one of churches, schools, social organizations and business activities.

Bob Schmitz recalls his grandfather, pulling upon his medrschaum, describing the great breweries which were manned by hundreds of German immigrants.

Before the turn of the century, job applicants along the main thoroughfare of Columbus were asked two questions:

"Do you speak German?"

"Do you smoke?"

A "yah" to the first and a "nein" to the second, and you were on the payroll.

The great steeple of St. Mary Church rose 100 years ago and the bells of Sancte Maria Kirche became as familiar as the voices of Maennerchor, Germania and other singing societies.

Schmitz' Gros Mutter once explained why Germans "vere velcome in Columbus with their gemutlich (cozy) were too often untutored in thrift, order and immaculate ways."

Bending forward a finger at a time on her right hand she clicked off the reasons:

"Ein—German vork hard.

"Zwei—Germans save deir money.

"Drei—Germans believe in education.

"Vier—Germans are social people.

"Funf—Germans vorship culture. Ven O Pa comes get him to sing Schumann's 'Die Bieden Grenadier' for you."

The Volstead act dried up both the German beer and high spirits and the exodus from what is now German Village began.

It was saved by those supporting the German Village concept—and with it, the German music, German poetry, German churches, German architecture that form the local atmosphere — and that have helped shape the City of Columbus.

Artists Add Talent To Tour

The German Village Haus und Garten Tour presents a unique opportunity for the artists of Columbus.

Take for example the case of Michael McFarland, 772 Demorest.

Near each home and garden on tour, an artist will set up his work. McFarland has been invited to work in front of the Robert Schmitz home, 129 E. Beck. Eleven of his pieces will be exhibited.

Schmitz became interested in McFarland when he saw two of his paintings at the home of a mutual friend in the West End. Schmitz purchased one of the works and says he is very proud of it.

"The boy has a great deal of talent," Schmitz said. "This will be my way of fostering such talent."

McFarland, 18, will be the youngest of the 15 exhibitors stationed in front of homes and gardens on the tour.

The recipient of a scholarship from the Columbus College of Art and Design, McFarland hopes some day to do free lance work.

He knows this is a difficult field in which to succeed but he plans to work out of a studio and make his living by holding exhibits. Many times unknowns find this road an unprofitable one to follow.

McFarland is looking forward to this chance to let the public see his work.

The blond and slightly built youth became interested in art when he was very young. "I found painting a way to get compliments," he said. "I'd draw something and someone would say he liked it — so I'd repeat it."

McFarland had been working under his instructor at West High School, Robert McLinn, until he graduated this month.

The works to be exhibited include some he did for his class at West. They are basically two types: Tempera —opaque water color, and crystal kraft — pieces of thin, bright paper fitted together and then shellacked.

McFarland has three sisters. Pat and Carol are students at West, Peg is at Wedgewood Junior High. Pat seems to be following in her brother's footsteps toward a career in fine arts. He has an older brother, Phil, who lives in Chicago.

Exhibits such as McFarland's will not be the only attractions for art lovers.

Ivan E. Pusecker, chairman of the art displays for the tour, said that an exhibit exclusively for artists living in German Village will be in Daeumler's storeroom, 177 E. Beck.

"From 30 to 40 persons will probably bring items for this exhibit," Pusecker said. "Each artist is bringing only one work."

"In addition, artists from throughout the city have been invited to come and paint an interpretation of German Village Day," he said. "They are to capture the mood and feeling of the tour."

During the tour, these artists will set up their easels throughout the area. At 6 p.m. they will meet at Beck Square where the artist with the best work will be awarded a $50 prize.

There is no restriction on the technique to be used — realistic or abstract in pastels, oils or water colors are all eligible.

Most of the works to be seen Sunday will be for sale.

Sunday's bill of fare will indeed be an opportunity for the artist and the art connoisseur.

SITTING on the floor of his home, Michael McFarland looks over examples of his work to be displayed at the Schmitz home, 129 E. Beck-st. Fourteen other artists will set up exhibits at homes and gardens on the German Village tour.

SAUERBRATEN?

ALTHOUGH Frank Fetch is one of the busiest men in the village as a city employe assigned to the area, the president of German Village Society and one usually knee-deep in a restoration project, he does take time to eat. Recently he was discovered at Plank's, the site of one of the oldest beer gardens in Central Ohio.

Cottage Industry Way Of Life To 19th Century Artisans

The German immigrants who settled German Village during the 19th century brought with them from thir homeland their craftsmanship which allowed them to establish a flourishing "cottage industry."

Along the streets which are now largely residential, the dwellings once housed the family business.

In the front room of one shop-home, a cobbler hunched industriously over the last for a custom-made boot.

Across the street from him a harness-maker sorted through piles of leather while his frau stirred a savory kettle of Hasenpfeffer (spicy rabbit) over the kitchen fireplace.

Nearby, a sedate two-story brick haus sported a gay barber pole.

Bakers, weavers, providers of feathers for pillow makers, seamstresses, upholsterers, candlestick makers, butchers, cabinet makers — all followed the old-world pattern of cottage industry.

The familiar sight of the carpenter at his bench in the shuttered window of his home gave rise to the famous "Schnitzelbank Song."

In the teeming bierstubes coached by a "professor" the noisy high-spirited routine went thus:

The professor pointing to a picture of a carpenter's bench, would (between quaffs) roar, "Ist das nicht ein Schnitzelbank?"

The chorus, with steins held high in the smoky air responded, "Yah, das ist ein Schnitzelbank."

Latchstring Out In G-V

Although German Village as a whole is up to its eaves in good grooming as tour day approaches, 10 households are making an all-out effort to look their best.

Those are where the latchstring will be out as thousands eager to see the homes — some quaint, some stately — that stud the area like candles on a cake in an area once distinguished only by its squalor.

The $2 tickets allow admittance to any or all of the following residences (unless otherwise noted, the house is owner-occupied):

554 S. Grant-av, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Hall; 708 City Park-av, Robert Spangler, occupant, and Ralph Longer, owner; 115 E. Willow-st, Miss Dorothy Hildreth.

Kaiser Platz, at 614 Rader-al, James Callahan, occupant and Ohio Home Builders, owner; Robert Gease, 831 S. Fifth-st; 157 Berger-al, James Berutti and Todd Barnum, occupants, and Barry Zacks, owner; 574 City Park-av, Burt Gordon; 870 S. Fifth-st, Vincent J. Baker and William E. Hoffman; 192 E. Beck-st, Mrs. Natalie Harper, occupant, and Wilburn Kerr, owner, and 114 E. Beck-st, Mr. and Mrs. Robin Fosnaugh.

Each of the houses "on tour" will be marked by an American flag and the red and black banner of the German Village Society. A historical vehicle will also be parked in front of each.

Capital Reveals Details Of Auto Showroom Remodeling

Capital University regents have released detailed plans for converting the former Lee Mayers auto dealership into a classroom building for Franklin Law School.

The building is to be named the Williamen Building in memory of John A. Williamen, who left a $100,000 bequest to the university.

The former new car showroom in front of the building at 2212 E. Main-st will be converted to a law library containing 23,000 volumes.

Sales offices will be redesigned to house faculty members and a reading area. Executive offices will be converted to an office for the law school dean and his secretary.

Capital itself will use two areas in the rear of the law school facilities for maintenance and storage. Some 3,630 square feet of floor space on the second floor will be used, although a specific purpose has not yet been announced.

General contractor for the $190,000 project is Robert W. Setterlin & Sons Co.

Educate To Save Lives, Goodloe Says

By The Spectator's
BOB TENENBAUM

"At least some" of the nearly 200 babies who die each year in Columbus before they are a month old could be saved by a massive educational campaign, according to city Health Commissioner Dr. O. M. Goodloe.

All it would take, Goodloe tells The Spectator, would be a drive in the city's low-income neighborhoods to convince mothers they are risking their babies' lives by not bothering to take advantage of pre-natal care.

"We're educating some people, but apparently not enough and not very well," Goodloe says.

The statistics bear him out. Last year, 260 babies died in Columbus before they reached the age of one year. Of those, 182, or 16.4 out of every 1,000 born, died in the first month of life.

"In many cases, inborn defects cause the deaths," Goodloe says. "These can't be helped."

"But there are many, many cases where pre-natal care would definitely save a baby's life."

Pre-natal clinics, open to anyone who can't afford private care, are operating at University, Mt. Carmel, St. Anns, Riverside and Grant hospitals—but the people who need them most don't know about them.

"Our visiting nurses try to find these people and steer them to the clinics," Goodloe says, "But many of them either don't bother to attend or go once or twice and then give up."

The answer, Goodloe feels, is a community effort in the city's "target areas," the lower income areas where care during pregnancy is most needed and least often taken care of.

Some of the work could be done through the federal anti-poverty program under the Economic Opportunity Act. Goodloe feels what is needed is an army of "door-knockers" who could go through the target neighborhoods and spread the gospel of pre-natal care.

"We've got to get these people early and get them to a facility that's near at hand," he says.

There is a shortage of doctors for pre-natal clinics, and that can't be helped. Goodloe says most doctors naturally are reluctant to give up part of their private practice to devote time to the clinics.

"But there are other things we can do something about," he says. "New York City has done a good job in establishing pre-natal facilities close to home. Why can't we?"

Surprisingly, the United States has a higher infant mortality rate than such countries as New Zealand, Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries.

"Obviously, something can be done," Goodloe says. "We haven't reached the irreducable minimum. If they can do it, why can't we?"

St. Vincent's Orphanage Dates Picnic; Lists Prizes

The 85th Annual Saint Vincent's Orphans' Picnic is scheduled this year from 11 a.m. until midnight Monday, July 4, at the orphanage grounds at E. Main-st at Kelton-av.

Featured will be a barbecued chicken dinner which will be served from noon to 8 p.m. All the chicken will be charcoal broiled over open pit fires. Prices are $1.50 for a half chicken and $1 for a quarter chicken.

Soft drinks and ice cream will also be available.

Entertainment will include folk singers, a traveling zoo, a Dixieland band, amusement rides for children and clowns.

Prizes to be given away include a '66 Chevrolet, a '66 Corvair, $1,000 cash, $500 cash, 10-$100, 15-$50 and 21-$25. Winners need not be present to collect these prizes.

Two portable televisions and two AM-FM transistor radios will be given away during the picnic. The winner must be present.

Saint Vincent's Orphanage hopes to raise some $40,000 to make a home for children whose parents are unable to care for them.

COLUMBUS HELPS

Columbus Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner, center, presents a $5,000 check from the city to Will Hellerman, right, president of the Columbus Day USA Association. Stuart R. Jones, left, is general chairman of the Columbus Day Celebration which will be observed Oct. 12-15.

Scioto Downs Harness Racing Has Become A Family Affair

By The Spectator's
MARY BILDERBACK

The big clock clicks.

It is two minutes until post time.

The mobile starting gate gathers up the horses on the backstretch, guides them up to the starting line, and then takes off swiftly.

It is the fourth race of the night.

There are five more to go.

Sleek, high-spirited, almost like graceful ballet dancers, the standardbreds trot around the oval shaped track at Scioto Downs, and scramble into the home stretch.

The horses begin to fan out. Number four, a coffee brown pacer gets a break. He maneuvers along the white rail fence and dashes across the wire. Inhibitions are lost and people begin cheering wildly. Another name is added to the winner's list.

Families hug each other. For some youngsters it is their first time at the harness races and the thrill will never be forgotten. This same enthusiasm for harness racing was shared by the inhabitants of Turkish Asia Minor in 1350 B.C. Tablets have been found that give detailed accounts of the training of trotters.

Today, Scioto Downs has made harness racing a sport for the entire family to enjoy for an evening of entertainment. The sport features beautiful gaited horses in fast and thrilling action. The stands, clubhouse, contemporary in design and comfortable, offer ample seating and dining facilities while one views the race.

Known as Ohio's "Showplace of horse racing," Scioto Downs opened its gates in October of 1959 and since this time has served record breaking crowds. In October of 1965 a total of 429,978 racing fans clicked through the metal turnstiles for an increase of 18 percent over 1964 and more than 14 million dollars were wagered.

In the late 40's, sports writers tagged harness racing as "America's fastest growing sport." Scioto Downs is an example of this growth. Located on a 140-acre site it is only nine miles from the heart of downtown Columbus. Its address is 6000 S. High-st.

The unique white grandstand and Turf Club adds elegance to the sport of harness racing. The grandstand is shaped in a winged design from concrete and steel mesh, reminiscent of Kennedy International Airport in New York. It seats 2800, and is built on two levels.

The structure was nominated as the "Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement of 1959" and finished second only to the St. Lawrence Seaway.

"People who attend the harness races dress in their finest clothes and have dinner or a cocktail while watching the race," said Chuck Stokes, public relations director for Scioto Downs. "More and more it is becoming a place to be seen."

The five-eights mile track is the fastest racing strip of its size and type in the United States. It is a complete all-weather track. Adios Butler, a famous pacer, more than substantiated this claim when he established the first sub-two-minute mile at Scioto Downs, at 1:59 4/5 in the rain.

There is no comparison between harness and thoroughbred racing. Harness horses must maintain a specified gain, and are guided by a driver seated on a sulky instead of being ridden by a jockey in a saddle.

Weight makes no difference in the driver of a harness horse, for some of the best reinsmen tip the scale around the 200-pound mark. They are able to get by with this because of the extreme balance of the sulky.

The trotter is a diagonally gaited horse. The pacer is thought to be slightly faster and moves in a lateral motion. A horse bred to trot or pace will usually follow its heritage, but because neither gait is a natural one at high speed, careful training is necessary to help develop the horse's speed and stamina.

In actual competition, before parading to the post, a harness horse will have gone six or more warm-up miles in the hours before its race. A tough line, the standardbred needs the work to bring it up to racing pitch and loosen its muscles. A horse is usually two-years-old when its racing career begins and 15 years old when it ends.

Wagers are accepted at mutual windows at Scioto Downs for $2 or more. One may wager on a horse to won, to place (finish second) or show (finish third).

How to pick a winner? Unfortunately, there's no magic formula, but there are several important factors to consider: the horse's best record time, his actual time in recent races; the size of the track; the quality of opposition; his driver's ability; track conditions; his age; post position and how your luck is running that day!

Follow Marriage Laws, Probate Judge Warns

For June brides, getting married isn't all hearts and flowers. It includes a goodly hunk of red tape, according to Franklin County Probate Judge Richard B. Metcalf.

Metcalf issued a "friendly reminder" this week to couples anticipating marriage that Ohio's marriage laws require strict compliance with details.

Applications for licenses must be made by both parties, in person, in the probate court of the county in which the female resides, Metcalf said, except if one party is a member of the armed forces, in which case application can be made in the county where he is stationed.

Under Ohio law, males 18 and over and women 16 and over are eligible for marriage, but must have parental consent if they are under 21. Blood relatives closer than second cousins cannot marry, nor can habitual drunkards, narcotics addicts or persons infected with contagious syphillis.

Within 30 days of making application, both parties must submit to a blood test.

Licenses must be issued between five and 30 days from the time application is made, but the probate judge has the authority to waive the time period in certain cases. The license must be used within 60 days of issue.

Only licensed ministers, judges of county or municipal courts, mayors of municipal corporations and the superintendent of the State School for the Deaf may perform marriages. A certificate of marriage must be filed with Probate Court within 30 days of the ceremony.

Metcalf estimated that June would double any other month in the number of marriages. Extra hours have been set up by the court to take license applications due to the tremendous crush of applications during the month.

TRYOUTS

Ohio State's Stadium Theatre will hold tryouts this week for the fourth production of its 17th annual summer season.

The play is Moliere's popular farce, "The Doctor In Spite of Himself." Tryout dates are Thursday, June 23, and Friday, June 24. Auditions will be held in the Derby Hall Theatre at 7:30 p.m. each evening.

The director of the production is Charles Ritter and the play dates are July 19-23.

Monday, June 27, and Tuesday, June 28, tryouts are to be held for "The Birthday Party." Roy Bowen is the director and production dates are July 26-30.

Auditions for the musical "The King and I," will take place Thursday, June 30 and Friday July 1. These nights are for the adults cast only. Readings for the children's roles and chorus are to be conducted Saturday, July 2 at 2:30 p.m. All other tryouts are held at 7:30 p.m. in Derby Hall Theatre on campus.

LAST OF A SERIES ON OSU'S 'NEW LEFT'

A Revolution In The Making

By DAVID HAGLUND
and
SHELDON KELMAN

The Progressive Labor Party (PLP) acts to further the "New Left" revolution in many ways.

During the Harlem riots in the summer of 1964, PLP brought guns into the New York City area in an attempt to arm the rioters. PLP vice-president William Epton, recently sentenced to one year in prison for violating New York's anti-riot laws, was reportedly involved in teaching the youths of Harlem to make and use Molotov Cocktails.

At Ohio State, the PLP and Spartacists have done some shooting of their own . . . with cameras. The targets for their shots have been, according to Stuart Smith of PLP and Michael Houser of the Spartacists, FBI agents who are engaged in undercover investigation.

"By passing around their pictures to certain people," said Smith, "we can acquaint them with the agent who then loses his value for undercover work and must be transferred . . . all at the cost of government time and money."

Smith and Houser claim to have forced at least one FBI agent to leave Columbus.

Not only the FBI, but the Columbus police, and even the university administration come under attack from the "New Left."

Participation in protest marches, sit-ins, and rallies has put the names of many demonstrators in police files.

"We've had members arrested at various times by Columbus police on trumped-up charges," said Houser. He also said that he was arrested by campus police, and that a university official "came to my residence, tromping around, looking for me," in connection with the arrest.

The part that the "New Left" plays in campus reform movements is a very small one. They do not initiate these movements. This is usually left up to the more moderate groups: Free Student Federation (FSF) and Students for Liberal Action (SLA). The moderates can, at best, follow a movement which they consider just.

The militant of the "New Left", PLP and Spartacists, have concentrated party efforts toward work in the community rather than on campus.

The small size of PLP at Ohio State, said Smith, "is because we don't organize on the campus but in the community."

Many people believe that the "New Left" was involved in the recent marijuana arrests by Columbus police in the campus area. "No serious politico is going to get messed up with narcotics," Houser says. "Narcotics are only the symptoms of a sick society. Radicals want to clean up narcotics."

The leaders of the PLP and Spartacists are undoubtedly "dedicated politicals." They intend to make the work of the militant left their profession.

The Du Bois Club, on the contrary, does not espouse any party doctrine. It is, as recording secretary Jeffery Gould called it, "an education process with an extremely flexible philosophy." He pointed out that most of the members of the club also belong to some other reform organizations, and that the club is "actually engaged in the exchange of ideas."

PLP and Spartacists are seriously expecting the revolution to occur, possibly within the next 25 years. Their faith is indicative of those seriously dedicated to an idealistic philosophy; they believe that events in the nation are certain signs that America has finally "gotten the word."

Shoe Corporation Reveals Increased Sales, Earnings

Net earnings of $313,000, or 19 cents a share, on sales of $55,500,000 have been announced for the first quarter of 1966 by Herbert H. Schiff, president of the Shoe Corporation of America.

The figures for the period, which ended April 30, compared with earnings of $301,000 on sales of $49,500,000 for the same period a year ago.

During the quarter, the company opened nine new shoe units while closing 10 locations. Plans call for an additional 64 shoe units to be opened and 18 units to be closed during the current year, Schiff said.

In addition, a major appliance unit of the company's Kelly and Cohen Division was opened and construction began on a unit of the firm's Hills Department Stores chain. Another Hills unit, the 13th in the chain, will be started in the near future in the Monessen-Donora area of Western Pennsylvania.

Shoe Corporation has entered into an agreement that will lead to construction of its fourth Wilmington Dry Goods Department Store unit in the Wilmington, Del., area.

Volume for all Shoe Corporation activities in the last fiscal year totaled $233,000,000.

Mystery Man Sought

A theme for Canal Winchester's annual Labor Day parade has been chosen — maybe. After choosing "Famous Place or Landmarks of the World" as a float guideline, the man who signed the entry could not be located. If its author is around, the committee would like to hear from him. The job of parade marshal is awaiting.

Strouse Leaves South

Jim Strouse, South High band director for the past two years, has resigned. It is reported that he plans to open an out-of-city music store. The question has arisen whether he will move to that city, which would necessitate his resignation as president of the Hamilton Local School Board. However it is rumored that he plans to maintain his Hamilton Meadows residence.

Ever Caught A Pig?

A last minute bulletin has come from Groveport which makes an extra set of clothes mandatory for youngsters under 18 at the Fourth festivities. A pig rodeo has been scheduled where it will be kids vs. 100 pounds of greased porker in a ring. Anyone who can catch the creature will have the privilege of "bringing it home alive." There's a new pig each day.

Dam Confab Planned

The joint Westerville-Columbus committee formed to iron out problems over control of water from the proposed Alum Creek Dam will hold its first meeting tomorrow. The committee will attempt to solve the dispute which threatens to delay construction of the dam if not settled by the end of the year. Named to the group were Columbus Councilmen M. D. Portman and James Baumann and Westerville Councilmen James Grissinger and Kenneth Cole. Columbus Council President William Hoermle and Westerville Council President Warren Ernsberger are ex-officio members. The $25 million dam would be financed half by Columbus and half from federal funds.

Dunloe Reserve Site Carries $52,091 Tag

With bids for the 16-room Dunloe Elementary School to be opened this Thursday, the Madison Local School Board will purchase the 14.3 acre site at a cost of $52,091.

This price includes all street, sewer and water improvement assessment made by William Davis, developer of Blacklick Estates.

An option on the property was not necessary, as Regional Planning had required a school reserve be set aside before approval of the plats was granted.

According to the architects, construction of the new junior high is on schedule and it appears the September opening is assured. This should be good news to Asbury teachers where there are no lunch room facilities (it is a walk-in school) as the board has ruled Asbury teachers may use the junior high cafeteria.

In accordance with a request of the county auditor that operating levies be renewed a year before expiration, the board will place such a levy that expires the end of 1967 on the November ballot.

Preliminary plans for the elementary planned for the Herderick site will be presented to the board Monday, July 11; and final drawings should be ready for consideration at the Aug. 8 board meeting, according to Superintendent Phil Williams.

The district has lost three more teachers, including Thomas Mohr, from the commercial department, who is leaving to enter industry. The other two are William Pfeil, who taught junior high health, and William Walker, social studies. Pfeil is going to an Upper Arlington school and Walker to Dayton.

Added to the faculty are Thomas Iles of Akron, Miss Evelyn Sliwa of Independence and Mrs. Angela Weingates of Columbus.

Mrs. Weingates will teach an Asbury second grade. Iles will handle special education and Miss Sliwa has been assigned to instruct business education.

Other recent business includes the authorization to purchase equipment for the kitchen and the home economics, industrial arts and music areas for the new junior high and of a sewing machine for the high school home economics department.

Lockbourne Park Growth Is Expected To Accelerate

Owen H. Dickerson, president of the Walker T. Dickerson Company, has taken several giant steps this month toward his dream of the development of Lockbourne Industrial Park.

The biggest of these involved a solution to the problem of serving the entire area with city utilities.

Sewers and water were laid to the northern part of the park between Williams and Obetz-rds and bound on the west by Lockbourne-rd and the east by the C&O tracks a couple of years ago. However, he has been stymied by in his effort to give the balance of the tract the same services.

The chief stumbling block was the refusal of Hamilton Township trustees to grant Columbus a right-of-way across Obetz-rd.

According to Dickerson, the city has now re-engineered the project and the lines will run parallel to Oetz-rd, 500 feet to the north under privately-owned property.

A'though he welcomed the news, it did not entirely erase the disappointment of a year ago when he "lost" the DuPont plant. Unable to promise water and sewers, Dickerson saw it located in East Columbus.

"I still can't understand the trustees' attitude," he said. (He was referring to the fact that although the Park has been annexed to the city, it remains in the Township School District, and industry is a tax bonanza to any school system.)

Another goal recently fulfilled was noted when city officials and Chamber of Commerce representatives toured the remodeled building Dickerson acquired after years of negotiations with its absentee owners. (Originally built for an aluminum fabricator, it stood empty for several years after the Pepsi-Cola Co. vacated it).

Dickerson plans to use the plant, which contains 1,600 feet of office space and 2,500 plus feet of working area (adaptable to warehousing, processing or light manufacture) as an "industrial hatchery."

He explained that he will make the facility available to a relatively small organization with growth potential. During the growth-period the prospective tenant, through lease, can have the advantages of a modern

Ashville Celebration Always Spectacular

Anyone who is bored this weekend just isn't "with it."

As anyone who's ever been to Ashville at Fourth of July time (and who hasn't?) can tell you, the village puts on a show that rivals any spectacular in Central Ohio.

Any community can put on a few fireworks and open up a pop and hot dog stand, but that isn't Ashville's way of doing things.

Not satisfied with festivities limited to a gala Fourth, the fun begins Friday evening with a parade climaxed with the selection of Little Miss and Mr. Ashville for pre-school tots, the carnival will open with its rides and barkers, and the fish fry which has put Ashville on the map will begin.

Saturday's activities include the selection of Miss Ashville from contestants from miles around and a vesper service at 2 p.m. in the shaded park grounds will add a religious note to the program on Sunday.

The big parade with floats that make the usual homecoming parade look amateurish will roll at 11 a.m. Monday competing with equestrians, pets, and antique cars for attention.

After the last day of carnival atmosphere with dancing and games, pony-pulling contests and a bevy of bands, the big show will end with fireworks at 11 p.m.

With parking unlimited and something of appeal to every age group, the community has the welcome mat out to Central Ohio.

It's 'Bombs Away' In Groveport July 4

One of the largest fireworks display ever seen in Central Ohio will climax the first annual Fourth of July celebration sponsored by the Groveport Lions and the Groveport Businessmen's Association.

Beginning at 10 p.m. Monday night, an aerial bomb will be exploded every 15 seconds for one solid hour.

The big parade will leave the Groveport Madison High School grounds at 10 a.m. on the Fourth, led by the girl named Miss Groveport when contestants are judged at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

The peewee and bobby sox entries will be judged in dress - up clothing and the winners presented with trophies.

However, the contest for older girls will be along customary beauty contest procedures, with bathing suits the garb of the day. The queen will receive a $160 Noni Modeling course, and the first two - runners up will receive certificates for similar $50 courses. It is asked that contestants be at the Big City Garden Center by 1 p.m.

Other events planned include daily watermelon eating contests with the finals Monday, and a donkey baseball game at 6:30 p.m., Sunday, July 3.

The last tailey indicates at least a dozen neighborhoods are preparing floats for the parade, and that all the youngsters in town with a two - wheeler are buying crepe paper at a furious rate to enter the decorated bike division.

Dancing nightly is scheduled and, for the more sedentary, a half-acre pay lake has been stocked with catfish weighing up to 4 pounds apiece.

Fishing poles are furnished.

The parade route as announced leaves the high school to proceed west on Main to Tallman. It will turn left on Tallman to South-st, march by way of Kessler back to Maine and then out College-st to the Big City Garden Center.

Parade entries should be at the school house by 9 a.m. sharp.

Groveport Authorizes Auxiliary Police Force

Increased police protection in Groveport is promised by action taken by Groveport Council this week.

By ordinance, an auxiliary police department was established with a maximum strength of 10 men.

However, according to Mayor Bob Baer the new unit working under Al Whipple whose post has been changed from that of marshal to chief of police, will probably be limited to five volunteers at the present time.

The new force which will receive only $1 a year (and possibly an equipment allowance from the benevolent fund raised by Whipple) will not carry firearms until they have completed the 120 hours training required by state law.

They will be permitted to use a billy club, however.

Besides regular municipal patrol, the Auxiliary members can ease the demands on the force (Whipple and three deputies) by serving on private property, during school athletic events, dances at Torch A Go Go, and such.

Duty of this type will rate $4 an hour, to be paid by the individual or organization employing them.

Deputies serve the village at a maximum of $2 an an hour after two years' experience, and receive $25 quarterly which usually goes to cover the cost of uniforms. (For private duty, they also charge $4 an hour.)

Challenge Of Fair Bus Bill Is A Big One

By The Spectator's
JANE ROBINSON

"It will be interesting to meet the challenge presented by the Fair Bus Bill."

That is about the kindest statement made by county and city school officials as they face September with more students to transport and no additional buses in sight.

At the other extreme is the transportation man who surveying the situation, stated, "I don't know whether to retire or shoot myself."

No one knows exactly what to expect, but a few facts have emerged.

With bus chassis manufacturers declining to bid on the specifications advertised by the state for the individual districts, it is improbable that any buses will be delivered this calendar year.

With the attorney general threatening a suit against manufacturers on grounds of collusion, it is possible that readvertising will find the manufacturers more eager for business.

However, with a five month or longer time lapse customary between placement of orders and the day a big yellow bus actually joins a school fleet, no immediate relief is seen.

Secondly, body bid of International accepted by the state is for a "stripped-down" model that, per se, is inacceptable to most districts.

This fact promises to wipe out any savings to the individual school boards that were anticipated.

Columbus and many county systems, believe that a five speed transmission is a necessity rather than a luxury, and that less than three heaters is inadequate for driver and pupil comfort.

The International bid calls for four forward speeds and two heaters.

Fewer school districts believe power steering essential.

A school district can purchase the additional equipment, but only with its own funds and without state subsidy.

By a formula which considers the tax duplicate behind each student, the state reimburses the individual

HERE'S A STORY YOU CAN GET YOUR TEETH INTO

To Chew Or Not To Chew—A Sticky Question

By The Spectator's
JANE ROBINSON

That "O" on your summer school exam paper may be a result of chewing gum in class, according to at least one Columbus school administrator.

Psychologists, however, say "phooey" to the idea that chewers have anything in common—with the possible exception of having a penchant of discarding it in the place most likely to be stepped in, sat on, or laundered into a gooey mess.

THE ADMINISTRATOR (he's a Columbus principal but I'll withhold his name to protect him from the wrath of Wrigleys) has his foot stuck in an anti-chew crusade -- especially during summer school — but he says that it is developing a kind of "Frankenstein" aspect.

He explains the monster-image came when he learned how many hours of counseling it takes to be the Carrie Nation of the Chicle community.

Yet, he is determined to statistically prove his "hav; gum, will flunk" theory.

MOST SCHOOL systems ban bubble bursting and the Columbus School Board has a policy putting gum-chewing on a par with tobacco chawing (or, smoking) with suspension only a doublemint minute away.

At least one superintendent shamefacedly admits his Beeman-demon teachers can hardly be expected to put the Blackjack on students sharing their own vice.

Another chuckled that he preferred his faculty to teach and leave the detective work involved in the Chiclet-chasing to Student Council or similar student organizations.

FAINT SUPPORT came our crusader's way from the head of a county district who speculated that a student violating a minor rule might break a major one with equal aplomb.

But, that's hard to buy. It's like saying today's jaywalker will be tomorrow's Jack-the-Ripper.

Several educators even came to the Dentine defense. "For some youngsters, gum provides a release of nervous energy," one theorized.

BUT — PRO or con — all agreed on two things:

First, 95 percent of illicitly-chewed gum ends up on cafeteria floors, trays or tables and, secondly, it's a sticky business to control.

A SHELL-BLOUSE

This jiffy knit one-needle shell-blouse from the cast-on at the neck to the finish at the hem is never removed from the needle.

With the bind-off of the last stitch, the garment becomes almost immediately wearable. To the best of our knowledge, never has a shell-blouse been designed in this manner.

The neckline features a decorative zig-zag border, and the bodice is worked in a design of cable panels.

Illustrated instructions are written in sizes eight through 22. All sizes are included on one pattern.

To make this a complete outfit, we used pattern 90 and knitted a matching skirt. In order to match the shell, we used the purl side as the outside.

Instructions for skirt 90 come in sizes 10 through 22. All sizes are included on one pattern.

The shell-blouse pattern is 119. To get it and/or the matching skirt pattern, send 50 cents for each pattern, in coin, check or money order to:

Contact Lens Wearers Take Hope; Answers In Sight

Stinging, hot, gritty, burning, cool . . . just plain irritating.

These are sensations some people get from wearing contact lenses. But what really causes the trouble?

Dr. Richard M. Hill, youthful researcher at Ohio State University's School of Optometry, is trying to find some answers. The Lions Clubs of Ohio help support his research.

It was once thought that contact lenses brought on the irritation by causing "hot eyes." By that it was meant the lenses caused the temperature of the cornea, that highly sensitive membrane with which the lens makes contact, to go up.

This is not true. Hill found out through his laboratory experiments on rabbits and other animals.

It has been known for sometime, Hill said, that the cornea — the transparent cover over the iris and pupil — "breathes" directly from the atmosphere as the lung does.

Actually, the cornea takes its oxygen from the air through the ever present tears and in turn gives off carbon dioxide. The usual process of cells taking oxygen from the blood simply wouldn't work because blood vessels wending their way through the cornea would interfere with sight.

ly small lenses cover about 60 percent of the cornea. In an attempt to reduce impairment of the breathing process, someone came up with the idea of putting minute vents in the plastic lenses.

Unfortunately, these lenses do not meet expectations, said Hill, who has conducted exhaustive tests on them.

Now his attention is focused on the recently developed hydrophilic plastic material from which lenses called "gel contacts" are made. The material was developed in Czechoslovakia.

It is soft because of its high water content which cuts down on the interference with corneal breathing, and it is also probably more comfortable to the contact lens wearer, Hill said.

Its unique property in the form of a lens is its facility for conforming to the surface of the eye. There are still some problems to solve, however, before it is practical for general use, Hill said.

A major activity of Hill's laboratory has been the application of tiny "microprobes" to the study of how the eye responds to a contact lens. Some of them are so small they can be built right into the lens which is being evaluated on a subject's eye.

With the "microprobe" any change in such eye characteristics as temperature, acidity of tears, oxygen in-

Even today's comparative-take and carbon dioxide output can be accurately measured, Hill explained.

Such work, which includes some experiments on fish as well as rabbits and humans, is designed to add to the knowledge of how contact lenses affect the eye.

Ultimately, Hill hopes to have a battery of prognostic tests which would point out possible problems a prospective contact lens wearer might have, before he is actually fitted. Then allowances could be made for any given characteristic in the design of the contact lens for that person, Hill said.

Another of Hill's interests is surface tension of the tears. Using rabbits, Hill has been able to measure the force required to dislodge a contact lens from the cornea.

A subject fitted with a particular type of lense is placed on one side of a highly sensitive balance. The lense is attached to the balance by a slim wire. The weight on the other side of the balance can be increased or a sudden force applied which is sufficient to pull the lens free, and this is measurable in terms of units of force.

Such research has human implications. For example, Hill said, it will help in the design and fitting of proper lenses for the football and basketball player and for the man in space who may have to undergo yet unknown forces.

Youth activities provide the source of material to highlight this week's activities of the type that renews one's faith in the younger generation. Three teenagers from St. John's United Church of Christ who deserve special recognition for their accomplishments are Jim Norris, Becka Kutz and Steve Redman. Jim received an American Field Service Summer Student Exchange Award, one of 860 chosen from 8,000 applicants. The 17-year-old left for Turku, Finland, June 19, will return home on Sept. 10.

Becka Kutz, 16, departed June 21 for Mexico, where she will spend eight weeks in the headquarters of "Heifer Project," where she will be able to use her knowledge of typing and Spanish as she helps to clear up a back-log of paper-work in this agency that helped to provide farm animals for rural residents of Mexico.

Steve Redman, 17, is one of the five Ohio delegates attending the UCC National Youth Forum in San Francisco. One hundred and fifty delegates will spend seven days discussing ways that modern youth can contribute to the needed tasks in today's world.

To enable college-age youth to use their special talents in a worthwhile manner, St. Paul's United Church of Christ, sister Church of St. John's U C of C is conducting a "Student Summer Service," which began on June 14 and which The four guests of St. Paul's are Diane Kightlinger, Connie Sharp, Virginia Allen and Philip DeVeny. The four young people will assist in many areas, such as making surveys of a new section of the city, assisting with the Christian education departments, working with community youngsters, helping with the tenting, camping programs of St. Paul's, etc.

Miss Kightlinger, Cleveland, is a senior at Miami University, while Miss Sharp is a junior at Wilmington College and a resident of Highland, O. Miss Allen, a resident of Minnesota, attends Yonkton College in South Dakota, where she is a junior. Mr. DeVeny, a resident of Dayton, is a sophomore at Ohio University.

The three girls are residing at Kaefer Hall, of the church, while Mr. DeVeny will reside with a family of the congregation.

Professional basketball came to Columbus last week following a meeting of prominent leaders at the Athletic Club.

The squad will be headed by Louis A. Mitchell, who was a basketball star at Denison University. The Columbus entry will play in the North American Basketball League along with Benton Harbor, Holland, Grand Rapids, Muskegan, Battle Creek, Lansing and Chicago.

A twenty-one game card was approved. Opening day will be Saturday, Nov. 12 and the Columbus group will play 12 home games at the Fairgrounds Coliseum.

Home opener will be Saturday, Nov. 26.

Blue Plan Study Cites Need For More Federal Offices

Franklin County will need as many as a dozen new post office stations and a new federal office building by 1985, a Blue Plan study indicates.

Blue Plan Director Philip D. Hertenstein said the estimate is based on a projected population increase of 400,000 by 1985 and a survey of federal employment and land use in the county.

Postal facilities currently employ 2,473 persons and occupy 430,000 square feet of floor space at 36 locations. Postal employment should rise to 3,213 by 1985.

The study also showed that federal administration employment will increase from 1,150 to 1,500 in the next 20 years, requiring 320,000 square feet of office space, preferably downtown. It recommended a new federal office building providing an additional 150,000 square feet of space.

The study showed that Uncle Sam is the largest landowner and second largest employer in Franklin County. A total of 10,267 civilians are employed by the federal government, including 6,642 in defense work, 1,150 in administrative jobs and 2,475 in the postal service.

In addition, 10,278 military workers are employed in the county, the bulk of them at Lockbourne Air Force Base, the Defense Construction Supply Center and Ft. Hayes. Among administrative agencies with large employment are the Social Security Administration, the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of Agriculture.

Fashion Party Is Scheduled

The Parents' Group of the Franklin County Society for Crippled Children will sponsor a fashion party and style show Thursday, June 30, at 7:30 p.m., at the Treatment Center of the Society, 555 S. Monroe-av.

Ladies' summer and fall selections will be shown as well as many fashions for men.

Refreshments will be served by the group following the show. The event is open to the public and further information may be had by telephoning the Society at 253-5523.

All profits from the fashion party will go to the Franklin County Society for Crippled Children.

New Neighbors Plan Activities During July

The New Neighbors' League Club will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Jai Lai Restaurant Tuesday, July 12, at noon. A bridge session begins at 10 a.m.

Inez B. Williams Flowers, Inc., will present the program.

The Arlington Bridge Club of the Neighbors' League will meet every fourth Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the Canterbury Apartments until further notice.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: Scorched Leaders Meet In July

WHITE

WASHINGTON—President Johnson and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson are preparing a get-together here in the heat of July that could not be more appropriately timed nor more aptly placed.

For Washington in July is a steamy headship post indeed, and both leaders are being scorched by other kinds of heat as well.

Wilson, long under pressure from the left wing of his party to cease backing the United States in Viet Nam, now must contend with another latent foreign-policy rebellion.

Like the left-wing rebels in England, Johnson's own dissenting faction in the Democratic party is small in number but large in decibel power.

In a word, both Wilson and Johnson are under the gun politically, and even though this new-isolationist gun is essentially an empty one, it is all the same a symbolic weapon which neither can ignore.

It does not truly endanger either man at home, but it does endanger both men to the degree that it compels them to rely for support on foreign affairs from political groupings which fundamentally reject nearly everything they are trying to do in highly liberal domestic affairs.

What has happened is a striking exercise in irony. At bottom, the two most liberal leaders in the Western world are under genuine attack not from traditional opponents but from implacable party colleagues who in truth demand that both countries retire from the world of reality.

The Democratic far left in this country acts as though Barry Goldwater and not Johnson had won the Presidency, and it cannot be consoled. The Labor far left in Britain acts as though the Conservative candidate, Edward Heath, and not Wilson, had won the prime ministership, and it equally cannot be consoled.

The coming Johnson-Wilson White House conference, therefore, will no doubt publicly present an agenda dealing with the affairs of this world. But in reality it will most of all confront two skillful professional politicians with all the implications of rump left-wing disaffection at home.

The rebels can never deflect Wilson from his foreign course for the simple and unalterable reason that he can take no other and continue responsibility to lead England. The rebels here can never deflect Johnson for precisely the same reason.

This does not mean, however, that these rebels cannot make a great deal of trouble — only incidental trouble for Wilson and Johnson as men, but trouble far greater for the irreplaceable world interests of both countries. This is what will bring the sweat of July to this high-level meeting. — Copyright, 1966, by United Features.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Let's Take Some Powers Away

GOLDWATER

A few weeks ago I warned of the long-range possibilities that the federal government would set up a central file containing every scrap of information they could get on every U.S. citizen.

Exactly such a proposal is under serious study by the Johnson administration. It was disclosed in a Senate hearing that it has been considered since last December, proposed by a firm named, ironically, Resources for the Future, Inc., a consultant to the Bureau of the Budget.

News stories, which seemed to treat the matter as a routine extension of the Great Planned Society, report this consulting firm sees a central data center on our citizens as more efficient than the dozens of separate files now being maintained.

The most chilling statistic is the firm's estimate that the federal government already has "billions" of pieces of information on the citizens it is supposed to be serving.

An official of Resources for the Future, Inc., apparently sensing that some Americans might view their proposal with alarm, explains: "What is proposed here isn't any kind of extension of the authority of the power of government to seek information from individuals." The data center, he goes on to say, "would have the classical records that have been established as appropriate for many, many years . . . records that pertain to the public face of the individual."

Well and good so far as the recommendation goes, so far as such a system would be efficient. But what of the actual use of such a system, not under the control of a conscientious consultant, but by power-seeking bureaucrats?

This administration has gone further than any other in the use of supposedly secret information to harass and even ruin its political opponents or to force "consensus" with administration plans.

Would such an administration confine a central file on all the citizens to "classical records" and the "public face of the individual"?

Would a President, who might enjoy reading income tax returns the way some people enjoy mystery novels, exercise real restraint in the use of a vast central file?

Greater political power than ever before has been taken over by the White House. To give it, in addition, the central-files power of a police state to snoop and pry more than it does already would be to invite disaster to boast of efficiency.

Considering the one-party, one-personality power to which we are subjected under the reign of Lyndon Johnson, this is not the time to give federal computers more power or information. It might be a far better time to start taking some of that power away before it burns us all. — Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times.

OCRC: Where From Here?

By RICHARD ZIMMERMAN

Dayton Journal Herald

Why is it now questionable whether Ohio's Civil Rights Commission (OCRC) can do more than a superficial job and what can be done about it?

A large part of the answer to the first question probably can be found in Governor Rhodes' rather simplistic approach to civil rights, best revealed by this well-known Statehouse anecdote:

In the spring of 1963 a delegation of civil-rights leaders won a long-awaited audience with Rhodes. They were seeking his moral support of then-pending fair-housing legislation.

When the delegation was admitted to the governor's office, it found Rhodes flanked by Industrial Relations Director W. O. Walker and gubernatorial aide Llewellyn (Jack) Coles, both Negroes. Rhodes noted that he was the first governor to appoint Negroes to such high positions and then invited the delegation to "go in the other room" with Walker and Coles to talk over their problem.

The delegates were furious. They promptly staged an all-night sit-in at the governor's office. Rhodes seemed genuinely bewildered by their behavior.

The governor has an uncompicated view that the best interests of the Negro community can be served by his generous practice of appointing Negroes to state jobs and by his constant efforts to create new jobs. He seems really to believe that all social ills, from mental health to racial prejudice, can be solved by more jobs.

If his theories are as valid as he thinks, there is hardly any need for a civil-rights commission. But he apparently does not understand that the creation of a new job may mean nothing to a Negro if a Jim Crow union keeps him from it, or if he is not properly counseled in high school on how to obtain it, or if the new job brings in money he cannot use to buy the house he wants in the neighborhood he wants.

Yet the practical application of Rhodes' theories of secrecy to state government has helped to shackle the OCRC with an abysmally low budget — even by Ohio standards — and with commissioners so undistinguished that they do not inspire confidence in a bare majority of even the more moderate Negroes.

The five-member commission is composed of part-time gubernatorial appointees who make $5,000 a year. The five jobs are considered among the best part-time appointive positions available. The commissioner's major task is to study staff reports and decide when a case should be dismissed, conciliated, taken to public hearing, or when cease and desist orders should be issued.

Commission Chairman Hugo Sabato is one of two white members of the commission. He is a Cincinnati insurance executive who has been active in local Republican politics. The other white member, one of two Democrats required to be on the board, also has nothing in his personnel folder to indicate a prior interest in civil rights.

That a majority of the commissioners are Negroes does not impress many civil rightists. While the three Negroes have been active to some degree in their local civil-rights groups, their names, along with the names of the two white members, are virtually unknown in the Negro community.

Even if the commission had the confidence of the Negro community, its budget is too low to enable it to do much. The budget increase won after the first two years of austerity hardly covers minor salary increases and the added burden of enforcing the state's new open-housing law.

Yet in spite of proliferating criticism, the commission's modest accomplishments (it successfully conciliated 125 employment cases and 73 public accommodation cases in 1965 and two public hearings are scheduled) to engender some praise.

Mrs. Miley Williamson, Dayton NAACP secretary, spoke for those who lauded the commission when she said: "I think the commission staff is doing all it can under the circumstances, and Mr. Coates (OCRC's southwestern regional director Robert Coates) did a great deal for the Dayton area."

But there are signs that discontent with the commission is growing and that the Rhodes administration is becoming aware of the possible consequences. When the Columbus NAACP recently snubbed the OCRC and filed a discrimination complaint with the federal government, Rhodes had three members of his administration berate the filing.

A close Rhodes adviser admitted that those in charge of the OCRC's southwestern office too often try to conciliate when they should be in court. "And something is going to be done about it, too," he added.

The fact that John McElroy, Rhodes' top aide, is striving to arbitrate the differences between the commission and the Columbus NAACP and building-trades indicates the governor's concern.

But pacifying one feud will not solve the deeper problems. And there are growing indications that discrimination by labor unions may become an explosive issue in Ohio that only a competent commission can handle.

What can be done? Here are a few of the remedial steps suggested by those in the civil-rights field, including staff members of the OCRC itself:

- A vastly increased budget. Even doubling the commission's budget will bring Ohio barely within sight of states with comparable Negro populations.
- A staff increase, particularly in the OCRC's community relations division. At present one man is trying to tell the entire state about the commission and, at the same time, teach high school counselors how to guide Negro students into better jobs.
- The establishment of educational and professional standards to be met by all field investigators, with emphasis on labor relations backgrounds.
- Changes in state law to permit the commission to have its own legal staff, to initiate investigations into housing, and to appeal cases it might lose in the lower courts.
- A concerted effort by the Rhodes administration to seek out prominent, non-political appointees as commission vacancies occur.

The present status of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission might best be summarized by this lucid comment from one Ohio Negro: "They tell me they (the commission) is doing the best they can with what they've got. Lord, they must not have much!"

Printed With Pride

The Spectator Newspapers are printed with pride by union labor.

And never in more than a quarter of a century of publishing has there been a strike at this newspaper.

Operating with a union shop places The Spectator at a disadvantage in the competitive field of suburban newspaper publishing, especially in an area where most similar operations are carried on with non-union employes at vastly lower pay scales.

However, union printers and pressmen are skilled craftsmen, proud of their trade and of their heritage of organization dating back to the early guilds. When treated like the craftsmen they are, no one could ask for more productive and reliable personnel.

The management of The Spectator Newspapers are assured by the day-to-day performance of its union shop of the loyalty of all hands to the best interests of the newspapers for which they work. The "newest" man in this shop has been here for five years, the "oldest" for 25.

The only "bargaining table" at The Spectator is the publisher's desk and the carpeting around it shows signs of back shop ink and lead. Some troubled printers have walked through the door of that office over the years, but no one recalls an angry one ever walking out.

It is with pride that The Spectator Newspapers point out that they are printed by union labor."

The Hiccup

By The Spectator's TED BEARDSHEAR

The hiccup is unique among human experiences.

After all, the world is quick to forgive a cough . . . even an occasional sniffle or a sneeze.

But start a series of hiccups and one becomes immediately the center of attention.

BEARDSHEAR

If one is at a dinner party, the hostess quickly assumes the dinner has been disagreeable.

If one is at a cocktail party, the host rapidly assumes the drinks have been too agreeable.

In addition to creating wrong impressions, the hiccup becomes a source of quiet amusement to spectators.

If they are reserved spectators, they will politely try to ignore the situation. But it is hopeless. Who can ignore the hiccup?

If they are not reserved spectators, they will helpfully get one to (1) hold one's breath, (2) breathe in a bag, (3) drink water upside down or (4) try to scare the living [illegible] out of one.

None of the active remedies usually work so the hiccupper is left not only with his embarrassing malady but also with the knowledge that by trying these remedies he had made an utter fool of himself.

Probably the most sensible cure for hiccups comes from an undertaker who practiced his trade around the turn of the century.

His advice was: "Walk out in the garden. Pick up a rock. Spit on the rock's underside. Replace the rock as you found it. Don't look back."

Nine times out of 10 the prescription did not cure the hiccups.

It did however remove one from a roomful of people who were on the verge of giggles.

Which is, if a cure is impossible, the next best thing.

They Said It

"Human rights and human responsibilities must go hand in hand. Neither a nation nor an individual can long endure while remaining aloof from the rest of the human race and watching with detached indifference while the liberties of others are crushed. To do so, it seems to us, is to invite inevitable self-destruction." — The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Letters To The Editor

What Is Reasonable?

To The Spectator:

In regards to your editorial concerning the Alum Creek Dam "Dam The Differences," June 22) once again the central city is in conflict with a suburb (Westerville) over water rates.

This usually arises because the charge to the suburb is a total of the central city rate plus a surcharge. The suburb usually contends it should not have to pay the surcharge. The rate plus the surcharge may be more or less than should be paid as a reasonable rate based on the operating costs and the value of the property to the stockholders (residents of the central city).

If the suburb is willing to pay reasonable rates, a rate structure can be devised which is not a rate plus an arbitrary percentage surcharge but rather is a rate based on the cost of serving the suburb with a reasonable rate of return to the central city.

There is basically no reason why the central city and the suburbs served can't agree as to utility rates provided the central city charges reasonable rates and the suburb is willing to pay such rates which will reimburse the central city for the costs of serving the suburb with a reasonable rate return.

There will be controversy as to what is a reasonable rate of return but reasonable rates of return as determined for private utilities can be used as a guideline for agreement whereas an arbitrary surcharge is only reasonable by chance.

Story Needed Telling

To The Spectator:

Our family, for one, is very happy with Richard Zimmerman's fine series of articles on the Ohio Civil Rights Commission.

We, through certain dealings, are fairly well familiar with the OCRC and the work it is trying to do. We have long felt that is it a story that should come to the attention of the public.

Challenge—

districts for a portion of the cost of the buses. This varies locally from about 50 percent in most county schools to 37 percent in the City School District.

Administrators believe the lack of subsidy on improved equipment will outbalance economy afforded by mass purchase of the basic equipment.

Another cloud looming is the realization that one solution may be to discontinue busing for high school students living an unusual distance from their school.

Although it is mandatory by state law to provide transportation for children under the ninth grade level who live more than two miles from their school, most districts go beyond what the law demands.

For example, at Marion-Franklin Senior High with its wide spread attendance area, approximately 500 students are bused.

The effect of the Fair Bus Bill which requires transportation for students attending private schools apparently will vary greatly from district to district.

A preliminary survey indicates almost a 1,000 additional students will be on Columbus routes, and they will attend 29 different institutions.

In Madison Local School District the situation is intensified where, with a student population of only about 3 percent of that of Columbus, 134 pupils who are now attending five private schools become eligible for public transportation.

On the other hand, no one in the Canal Winchester School District attended private school last year.

The surveys made to date include only children in elementary and junior high. If the practice of transporting older children in hardship cases is continued, it must be expanded to include those attending private high schools. No one is willing to make even an educated guess on how many more students this can involve.

Cancellation of retirement for vehicles more than 10 years old (buses older than this present unfeasible maintenance problems) is the obvious step to partially meeting the crisis.

Columbus officials see the eight new schools that will open in September as a Godsend.

These five elementaries and three secondary schools are located in attendance areas where previously most of the students were bused. Designed as primarily "walk-in schools" they will release some buses for the additional pupils demanding bus seats.

Another factor snarling the problem is the lack of interpretation in the new legislation.

It reads that transportation to schools more than 30 minutes driving time away is not required

No one is sure whether this driving time is meant to include pick up time, or straight driving time between the public school the child would ordinarily attend and the private school of his choice.

Hopes that the public schools could lease the transportation facilities already in private operation have been abandoned.

This stems from the fear of parochial schools that such an arrangement would give rise to the charge of intermingling of state and church. Attorneys have advised the Diocese against any such risk.

In the past, an annual meeting has been held by Columbus administrators in the late spring to set transportation policies for the coming year.

This meeting has not yet been set, as the situation is still too hazy to formulate policy.

One of the biggest questions to be answered is whether collection points can be set up so that all private school students from a certain area may be picked up simultaneously.

Another question is whether it would be more practical to pick up private school children on regular routes, take them to a public school and dispatch buses from there.

Also, the possibility of a transfer system, much as that of the Columbus Transit Company, is being considered.

There is unanimous agreement on one thing.

Come the morning of Sept. 7, school switchboards will light up like a Christmas tree as mothers report, "Johnny has waited two hours and no bus yet."

Undoubtedly, the routing will be worked out eventually, but the first week of school is [illegible]d to be one big snafu as busing goes.

Lockbourne--

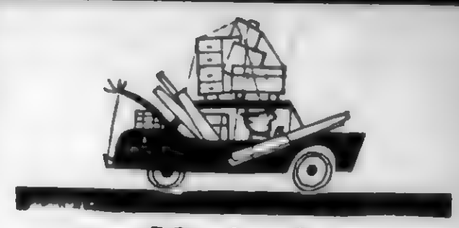
plant without the capital investment required by plant ownership.

When expansion becomes necessary, arrangements will be made to build a larger plant, tailored to the particular needs of the client, thus freeing the original building to get another business "off the round."

A third step was taken when closing papers were signed for the Alderson property at 4000 Lockbourne-rd. With the acquisition of this property, the industrial site is squared up, with one exception. This is the area, fronting on Obetz-rd, occupied by the Hamilton Township Fire House, and a residence to the east of the station. It is owned by J. W. Bailey, Hamilton trustee.

ANOTHER GOAL WAS realized in the development of Lockbourne Industrial Park last week with the completion of the remodeling of the old building on Lockbourne-rd, most recently used as a warehouse for Federal Glass. Council President, right, is shown congratulating Owen Dickerson. In the backgrounds, from left are E. T. Melancon, Samuel Levin and Clyde C. McBee, vice-president of the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce. Melancon and Levin are officers of the Walker T. Dickenson Company, the corporation responsible for the industrial development.

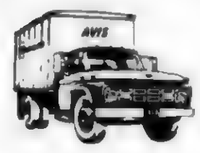
The sight of a light executive plane taxied to the area last week to emphasize the fact that the Park is serviced by air as well as rail and truck, lifted a few eyebrows.



A local resident was apprehensive that eventually larger planes would use the air strip (an expansion of the South Columbus Airport facilities) which runs north and south through the Park.

Dickerson explained that the strip will not be built to accommodate large planes, and such fears are groundless

The same spokesman expressed displeasure that the facilities of Walker T. Dickerson Company, a shoe manufacturer, have not been moved to the Park.



Dickerson has been frank in stating that the company must dispose of its Front-st building before making the move.

And, according to him, the development of the Market-Mohawk area has slowed down the sale of older buildings in the downtown section of Columbus.

On The Lawn

By LARRY LAWRENCE

A lady writes me from Nebraska and I can't resist quoting her letter. She says, "In 1959 we had only sand and weeds. I knew nothing about lawns, but I wanted one and was willing to work for it.

"The local store sold me seed, fertilizer and spreader and I bought burlap bags to cover the seed after planting and spiked them down with rusty nails, letting the grass grow up through the sacks which eventually rotted away.

"I always got perfect stands, no matter what season I planted. Today our home is a showplace and friends bring visiting relatives from distant states to see the lawn."

She's right. You can achieve seeding success any time of the year if moisture is available to the new grass once it has germinated. Her letter also reminds me of another thing I always tell those who plant seed. Don't be discouraged because you get a crop of weeds along with the new grass.

Remember this. The ground is full of weed seeds just waiting for a chance to germinate. When you cultivate the ground and plant grass seed you give them their opportunity and up they come.

But most of them won't survive the first grass cutting. Those that do can easily be taken care of later with wide-spectrum weed controls.

A WORD TO THE WISE

A PORTABLE RADAR is making speeding at Lockbourne AFB and getting away with it almost impossible. The machine, demonstrated by S/Sgt. Carmen Bretzke, not only tells the air policemen a mile away that the speed limit is being violated, but writes half of the ticket. Probably the most accurate traffic gauge ever made, the $1,300 piece of equipment is portable and almost inescapable. The word at LAFB is "Heaven help those jet jockeys."

Three Area Residents Found Dead

The bodies of two Groveport residents and one from Canal Winchester were recovered Saturday in Canada near Villemarie, Quebec.

Authorities say the four apparently drowned in a boating accident June 3 while on a fishing trip at Grassy Lake, 47 miles east if Villemarie.

The victims, Carl J. Baum, 72, 4199 Williams-rd, Groveport; Baum's son, Joseph, 27, and daughter-in-law, Terri, 25, of Canal Winchester, were all identified from papers found on the bodies.

A fourth victim, elder Baum's brother-in-law, Raymond Horing, 65, of Canton, was also found.

Relatives left here Sunday for Canada to make funeral

Thoughts... Of An Amateur.

By The Spectator's
JOYCE LOUGHMAN

I have never really considered myself as being proficient in any one field. Being me, I wander about, interested in hundreds of things but not really knowing too much about any of them.

But, if someone were to ask about my favorite hobbies, I would have to admit to flower photography.

When June comes, I find myself studying the buds and blossoms of each and every flower, whether it be cultivated or wild, colorful or drab. (How can any blossom be drab?). I study its form and size, the depth of color, how it sways when touched by a gentle breeze, the tricks played by sunlight and shadow. Most of all, I study the utter simplicity of it.

And not knowing too much about cameras, I have finally been convinced by many people: "leave the cameras alone that have all the gadgets, think simple!" So, I use a Soligar 66 which my oldest son brought back from a tour of duty in Bermuda. Now, even I have taken some pretty passable pictures.

My favorite subject is the rose. Kordes Perfecta being an especially good subject with its many shades of rose softly fading into white, or Tropicana, or the new, 1966 winner, Apricot Nectar, or for that matter, any rose!

In all graphic illustrations, the form on a plane or flat surface is produced through the arrangement of light and dark. Consequently the finished product depends upon the way it is lighted. If the "angle" of light is on the horizon this gives sidelighting, overhead gives toplighting and when the sun is not shining brightly or it is a cloudy day, then you have "flatlighting." With all this in mind, you can understand why you must "study" your subject before clicking the shutter.

Before you start, remember that you are an amateur and then you won't be disappointed with the end result. But don't give up. Keep looking at your garden for something that pleases your eye then snap it.

I took a picture from an upstairs window using a telescopic lens. I had a branch of a tree as the frame. It turned out to be one of my own favorites.

When trying to photograph your day lilies, remember that a grouping of these flowers sometimes needs just one more slender leaf added to improve the composition. There isn't any law that says you cannot add that leaf, or two or three. The overall picture must please you.

Be certain that you pay close attention to the background . . . no trash barrels, no garbage cans. If you want a favorite person in the scene, have them doing something besides just standing. But avoid the clowning. That makes a "sick" snapshot.

Color in your work is another important aspect when photographing flowers. The new films that are on the market today make pictures look completely natural.

If you plan to spend a summer "shooting" (and boring your friends and family this fall with snapshots or slides) better get started.

Mrs. Wayne Smith of Worthington spent Wednesday with her mother, Mrs. Earl Kissell.

Need An Answer?

I planted Regal and Madonna Lilies four years ago. Should these be transplanted?

Lilies that are doing well do not need to be transplanted until they become crowded. When lilies are crowded they tell you by sending up numerous weak, short stems.

Why do my dahlias refuse to bloom? They have plenty of water and fertilizer and are planted in good soil.

You could possibly have poor air circulation. Dahlias should not be planted against a building or close to a hedge. They may also be infected with insects which are common to dahlias. Try a change of stock. Tubers that are planted in the same soil year after year sometimes deteriorate.

Annual Shuffle Is Announced For City School Principals

CHARLES POLLOCK
JAMES BRANNON
MICHAEL SHEVLIN

Three men, having completed cadet training, have been named to administrative posts in East Side Schools by Dr. Harold Eibling, Columbus superintendent.

James Brannon has been assigned as assistant principal at Johnson Park Junior High; Charles E. Pollock as assistant principal at Wedgewood and Michael Shevlin as principal at East Columbus Elementary.

Donald Richardson is leaving Johnson Park to become assistant principal at Indianola Junior High and Evelyn Swickard, now at East Columbus, will take over as principal at both Leonard and Olentangy elementaries.

Two principals, Don Thatcher of Walnut Ridge and Don Wiley at East, have been assigned to the downtown office. Thatcher, who will be replaced by Raymond Trinter from Clinton Junior High, has been named first director of adult education. Duane Reed, now at Westmoor Junior High, will take over Wiley's position, allowing him to become the director of public services.

William Munsell has been transferred from Roosevelt Junior High to become principal at Starwood Junior High where Robert Browning, now at Linmoor will be his assistant.

Richard Stimemetz, previously assistant principal at Everett Junior High will take over as the chief administrator at Eastmoor. He replaces Morval Goss who has been named principal at Central Senior High.

At the elementary level, Miss Mildred Hoffman has been assigned to the principalship of Oakmont from Pinecrest and Dale Hurst to a like post at Malbury from Oakland.

Amos Snide who has been principal at Alum Crest and Clarfield elementaries will replace Miss Hoffman at Pinecrest.

All assignments are effective Aug. 1.

GETS DEGREE

Marie Ellen Gloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gloyd, formerly of 500 Northview - dr, graduated May 19 from Mt. Sinai School of Nursing in New York City. A graduate of Bexley High, Miss Gloyd is now a staff nurse with the Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Lantz, Former Speaker, To Head Acton Campaign

Former Ohio House Speaker James A. Lantz has been named general chairman of the campaign of Lancaster attorney J. Michael Acton, Democratic candidate for the Ohio Senate from the 17th District.

Lantz, also a Lancaster attorney and president of the North American Equitable Life Assurance Co. of Columbus, plans to name county chairmen in the near future.

Lantz was elected to the House in 1954 from Fairfield County and served four terms, serving as Speaker in 1959-60 and minority leader in 1961-62.

Acton will face State Representative Harry Armstrong of Logan in the November election in the district, which includes Southeastern Franklin County as well as Fairfield, Pickaway, Hocking, Ross and Vinton counties.

ACCEPTED

Bruce L. Palmer of 886 S. Cassingham-rd has been accepted as a Big Brother by the Big Brother Association of Columbus, Inc. Palmer, a staff accountant for Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery, will soon be assigned a boy who does not have a father at home. The association is a United Appeal - United Community Council agency in Franklin County.

Col. L. Lutton New Deputy At LAFB

Col. Lyle D. Lutton, Jr., who holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and logged 400 B-24 combat hours during World War II, is the new 840th Air Division deputy for operations at Lockbourne AFB.

He is replacing Col. Clarence Lackson who is leaving LAFB to become the vice commander of the 314th Troop Carrier Wing in the Pacific area.

The Pittsburgh native established the Southeast Asia air lift system in South Viet Nam three years ago as commander of the then newly-formed 315th Troop Carrier Group.

He and his wife, DNell and their three children, Lyle David III, Delos Nelson and Stephen Michael, live on the base.

Communities Will Choose 28 Delegates

Ballots will be mailed the end of this month to elect three committeemen and two alternates to serve on the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee for the ensuing year.

Following tallying of the ballots which must be returned to the County ASCS postmarked no later than Aug. 8, successful delegates will hold a county convention at the Southern Hotel, Wednesday, Aug. 17.

At this convention, a county-wide committeeman, two alternate committeemen and the chairman and vice-chairman will be elected.

Voting areas into which the county has been divided are: Blendon, Brown, Hamilton-Marion, Jackson-Franklin, Jefferson-Truro, Madison, Mifflin, Norwich, Perry, Plain, Pleasant, Prairie, Sharon-Clinton and Washington Townships.

Rev. C. Brown Retires To Farm

Rev. Carl E. Brown, former pastor of Gates-Fourth Methodist Church, has retired after nine years of service at Gates.

Rev. Brown spent 41 years in the ministry.

He and his wife have moved to their farm near Urbana, O.

As a parting gift, the organizations of Gates-Fourth presented the couple with a color television set.

A "farewell" party was held at the church June 5.

Mayor Appoints Haft

Reynoldsburg Mayor George Twyford has appointed Al Haft, Jr. to serve on the planning and zoning commission. Haft will replace Paul Stenson who recently resigned. Haft lives with his wife, Nina, and four children at 1432 Clemens-pl. He previously served under former mayor Charles Lemart on the planning and zoning commission. Twyford feels this experience will be valuable. Haft recently donated over five acres of park land to the city adjacent to Huber Park. His father recently donated a building for use as a Reynoldsburg recreation center.

Tailored Hen Rations Might Reduce Costs

Tailor - making individual rations for laying hens, or feeding them different rations at various phases or ages, could reduce feed costs, Dr. Edward C. Naber, Ohio State University poultry specialist, said recently.

Speaking at a Poultry Serviceman's School on the University's West Campus, Dr. Naber reported on various research projects being completed at Ohio State and other universities on phase feeding of laying hens.

The real basis for this type of feeding lies in the proper balance between energy and protein in the ration, he said.

The phases or changes in feed would be based on 1) changes in egg output in relation to age and other factors, and 2) the changes in feed intake in relation to temperature, disease, egg output, and energy needs.

EDITED BY ROLAND SUNKER

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

NEVER TOO LATE FOR POG

Stars of Playhouse-on-the-Green's production of "Never Too Late," currently appearing through Saturday, are from left: Robert W. Stewart, Laura Lee, Gary Garth and Deirdre Owen. Curtain at POG is at 8:30 p.m. Tickets for all performances are on sale at Central Ticket Office (Richman's), 37 N. High-st, Sears Northland and Town and Country, Discount Records, 1956 N. High-st, and at the summer tent theatre.

Sportsman's Holiday

Each week color cameras will take viewers to three different locations in the company of well-known sportsmen. Locations will range from snow-capped peaks of Mt. McKinley to the tropical waters of Puerto Rico.

The program, "Sportsman's Holiday," is seen every Sunday at 12 noon on TV-4. The first show featured wild life photographer Dick Borden hunting with a camera instead of a gun, expert fresh-water fisherman Bill Plummer catching large-mouth bass and two American businessmen fly-fishing in Argentina for trophy-size brook trout.

For those who are interested in various types of sports, this show promises to be exciting and interesting.

Stadium Sings With 'Birdie'

The stars are shining bright at Stadium Theatre this week. Part of this glow is coming from Stadium's opener for the season, the musical "Bye Bye Birdie." The remainder of the glow is coming from the shining faces of the cast for their successful production. And rightly so. This musical extravaganza has to be one of the most solid, well rehearsed and smoothest presentations I have seen for some time.

While "Birdie" is not a great book, it does offer a rather strong musical score. Based on the life of a fictitious rock and roll singer, with a love affair and good comedy thrown in, "Bye Bye Birdie" becomes a delightful, fast moving show. Some of the tunes which are familiar from the production are: "What Did I Ever See In Him?," "A lot of Living to Do," "Kids," and "Spanish Rose."

The rock and roll singer, whose life resembles that of Elvis Presley in real life, has a theatrical agent who is torn between his secretary and his domineering mother. Will the delightful Zada Van Doorn as the mother or the beautiful and bewitching secretary, Rose, portrayed by talented Renne Jameson, catch the prize, Albert Peterson, played by Blaine Quarnstrom? As the agent to the hip swinging rock 'n roll star Conrad Birdie, Albert Peterson is faced with the problem of Conrad being drafted. Rose, the ever helpful secretary, dreams up a publicity stunt, and from that moment on, the plot becomes sheer chaos.

All roles are beautifully done. Bob Chase as the rock 'n roll star, turns in a sterling performance. Ursula, a gawky teenager, is done by Joy Bond. She throws herself into the role with such vitality and enthusiasm that she practically steals every scene.

The show is well choreographed. There is only one sour note in the entire production . . . the orchestra. Perhaps it was opening night flutter, which was not the case with the rest of the cast, but the musicians just didn't seem to know the score.

"Bye Bye Birdie" is playing at Stadium Theatre through July 2. This has to be one of the "musts" for your summer theatre schedule.

RUSSIANS INVADE

Little Annie Whittaker (Cindy Putnman) clutches happily at baby-sitter Alison Palmer (Andrea Dromm) during one of the few tranquil moments in the eventful new comedy - drama, "The Russians are Coming The Russians are Coming." Starring Carl Reiner, Eva Marie Saint, Alan Arkin, Brian Keith, Jonathan Winters, Theodore Bikel and Paul Ford, the movie deals with the events that follow the accidental marooning of a Russian submarine on a small American island off of the New England coast.

Bands Battle

The Destinys, an up and coming rock and roll band, will play in the battle of the bands contest scheduled for Wednesday, July 6, at the Torch A-Go-Go. Working together for only six months, this youthful group is developing into a professional outfit. They have an almost full schedule of bookings. Very soon they plan to release their first record, an original written by some of the members in the band. Titled "Gone Forever," it has a commercial sound and looks like this one might rocket them to bigger and better offers in the entertainment field.

Travel Films At Mershon

The Ohio State University is continuing its popular series of Mershon programs, the "Far Horizons World Travel Film Series." There are three events for the summer. The programs consist of color motion pictures filmed and narrated by some of America's finest photographer-travelers.

First films on the summer series is William McCrea's "Portugal, Land To Discover," June 29. Karl Robinson returns to present "South Sea Isles" July 13 and the series concludes with Bob Davis' "Incredible Iceland," Aug. 3.

All programs are Wednesdays at 8 p.m. in air-conditioned Mershon Auditorium. Ticket information is available at the Mershon ticket office, 15th-av and N. High-st or by calling 298-2354.

PHOTOGRAPHER - lecturer William McCrea will personally narrate his color film, "Portugal, Land To Discover," in Mershon Auditorium's summer "Far Horizons" Travel Film Series at 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 29.

Day, Simms

Phil day and Linda Simms paced archers in Wednesday Night League play at Simm's Archery Lanes last week.

Phil collected the scratch high game and series (95-280) in the Men's Division while Linda topped the gals (77-237) in both categories.

Both also took handicap honors — Phil with a 280, Linda with a 257.

Top Archers

High team honors (scratch and handicap) went to "The Agitators" while "The Has Beens" maintained their hold on first place in the standings with a 15-0 mark.

'Tiny Tot' Invite

The Sailfish Booster Club will sponsor its second annual "Tiny Tot Invitational," Wednesday, July 6, at Swimland.

Competition begins at 11:30 a.m. for all swimmers in the 10-11 age groups and under.

Rose Pageant Picks Bouquet

Jimilea Wheeler was crowned "Maiden of Roses" in the Maiden of Roses Pageant held recently in the world-famous Park of Roses, 4015 N. High-st.

The crowning of Jimilea, selected from 32 beautiful and talented Franklin County high school girls, as well as choosing of the four young ladies in her court, proved to be the high point of the pageant.

Jerry Rasor, host of WLW-C's "Dance-O-Rama" and featured vocalist on Spook Beckman's "Coffee Club," acted as the master of ceremonies for the rose queen contest. Al Waslon's Coffee Club Orchestra played for the colorful affair. The Maiden of Roses Pageant marked the official beginning of the Park of Roses season.

The queen and her court received trophies from WLW-C television, in addition to the scholarships, bonds and other prizes presented to the girls.

Judges for the pageant were Irwin Jones, chairman; George Carp, Mrs. John P. Siemer, C. Stanley Taylor, Diane Courtright, Dr. Robert Zollinger and Mrs. Harvey Eagle.

Another Jet 'All Kids' Night Set Tomorrow

The Columbus Jets, battling to pass the "charmed" July 4th milestone as the IL's frontrunner, wrap up their sixth home stand by hosting Toronto's Maple Leafs in a twin-bill tonight (6:30) and a single game (8 p.m.) tomorrow.

Tomorrow evening will mark the third "All Kids' Night" of the season with another pony, bicycles, baseballs and other prizes going to many of the youngsters in attendance.

Following tomorrow's finale with the Leafs, Larry Shepard's defending league champs, travel to Buffalo for a three-day, four-game set.

The Jets return home Monday for a big Fourth of July doubleheader with the pesky Toledo Mudhens.

Toledo will also be the opponent a week from today, preceding Richmond into the visitors' dugout - the Braves here for a three-game set through July 5.

Film Stresses Diamond Safety

The Cincinnati Reds, Babe Ruth League and the Aetna Life and Casualty Co. have teamed up to help keep young baseball players off the disabled list.

In the color, sound motion picture, "Play Ball, Play Safe," Reds' stars give safety tips while a Babe Ruth team demonstrates diamond "don't."

The film covers sliding, exercise, equipment and field condition and is available to schools, sport and community organizations for free-loan showings by writing: Information and Education Dept., Aetna Life and Casualty, Hartford, Conn., 06115.

East Loses Top Spot--- A Tiger Out Of Gas?

By BOB WHITMAN

What happens when the Tiger in the Tank runs out of gas? East High's summer league battlers must have that answer if they are to continue to impress in the Eastern Division Summer League.

Paul Pennell's Tigers gave up sole command of the loop last week with a pair of losses at the hands of Hartley and Eastmoor.

With the Warriors 5-1 spear job, Eastmoor avenged an earlier loss to East and took over the top rung.

HARTLEY, PILOTED by sharpie Jack Ryan made Eastmoor's win pay off big with a 4-2 ride of the now-wounded Tiger.

But jungle lore has it that a wounded Tiger is a dangerous one.

And if that be any incentive for East, who overcame the manacles of a 5-15 regular season by piling up a 6-0 Summer record, they should be putting pressure in the right spots this week.

THE LONE EAST run off of Eastmoor's John Wymer came in the sxth when newcomer Garnett Davis supplied the punch with a home run.

Davis has been a pleasant addition for Pennell. "He is doing a great job" Paul said, "even discounting the fact that he will be a sophomore next fall."

Pennell cited him and Ed Ratleff, who added plenty of pitching strength to the East mound corp by winning his first three times out, as top additions.

TIGER TUTOR Pennell also hailed the improvement of mainstays Joe Smith, Erkie Byrd and Bill Brickford as a major ingredient in the reversal.

And that reversal was a real Houdini trick.

"We put together 11 of 14," (including the Capital City Legion outfit which is almost the same team) Paul said, "it had been so long and we really needed it."

The Capital City 'Tiger' held the road with a pair of wins last week. They turned back Camp Chase Sunday (6-1) to remain in first place with a 4-1 record.

Last Wednesday, Capital City stopped Southway Post, 4-3.

PENNELL singled out Byrd and Davis as top hitters for the Legion team along with Reynoldsburg players Gary Shade and Donnie Woods.

Hartley used the home run ball to great advantage last week in its win over Groveport to gain a tie with Mifflin for third place in the Eastern Summer League.

Sophomore-to-be Joe Eichenlaub and Joe Whitlatch clouted four-baggers in the Hawks' 5-1 win.

Kiwanis Night To Be July 28

A total of 32 Central Ohio Kiwanis Clubs have joined forces to sponsor "Kiwanis Night" at Jet Stadium, Thursday, July 28, when the local nine entertains Syracuse.

All proceeds of Kiwanis Night will be used to support the service clubs' sponsorship of many worthy causes each year.

Tickets ($2 box, $1.75 reserved, $1.50 general admission) are available at the stadium or from any Kiwanis member.

'GETTING THE FEEL' OF VICTORY?

Derby Race Plans Being Finalized

Plans for this year's big Soap Box Derby Race Week moved closer to finalization this week as the "big day" Saturday, July 23, — drew closer.

The Derby inspection has been tentatively set for Saturday, July 16 — one week before the race.

DERBY DIRECTOR Donn Collins also announced conformation of a tour of Lockbourne AFB for all boys competing in the '66 race on Thursday, July 21.

The "Victory Banquet" has also been set for Monday, July 25, at the Whetstone Recreation Hall.

At the banquet — an "informal, family-style evening," according to Director Collins — the '66 champion will receive the local championship trophy, the Chevrolet trophy, his $500 savings bond and the race's checkered flag.

THE RACES' runnerup will also receive his trophy as will contestants who topped four categories—fastest heat time, best designed racer, best brakes and best construction.

All boys who raced in the local Derby will receive Derby plaques at the banquet.

This year's Derby, to be run on a segment of the East Freeway, is again sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, WLW-C TV and local Chevrolet dealers.

Avery Pontiac Club Is Off To Fast Pony-Grad Start

Avery Pontiac entry in the Eastern Ohio Pony Grad League has jumped off to a real successful start this season, the Paul Wyman-managed nine accumulating a perfect mark through their first six games.

Avery, comprised of boys from Bexley, Eastmoor and Canal Winchester, has defeated Gahanna (5-0), the Tigers (19-1), Whitehall (4-1), Licking Heights (2-0), Shadywood (9-5), and the Junior Hawks (9-5).

MANY OF the same boys also make up Avery's entry in the American division of the Central Ohio Babe Ruth League and have showed the same success in that loop winning the first round with a 4-0 log.

Babe Ruth wins came against the Eastmoor Merchants (5-2), Caldwell Temple (19-0), Western Optimist (4-0), and Linden (12-5).

Bexley hurler Jim Moriarty has set the club Pony-Grad pitching pace (4-0) while Roger Chayman and Bob Griffith each have logged one victory.

TOP HITTERS include Griffith, Moriarty, Tim Pettorini, Steve Wyman and Mike Gibson — all clearing the .300 mark in both loops.

Coaching the club is Roger Hanners. As of late last week, Avery and the Columbus Hardware were tied (both 6-0).

Blue Dolphins Pace Gahanna Swim Invite

The Buckeye Blue Dolphins, a powerful array of swimming talent encompassing Springfield, Lincoln Village and western Columbus, dominated the first annual Gahanna Invitational Swim Meet last weekend.

BBD piled up 780 points to easily outdistance the runnerup Swim-land Sailfish (500) and third-place Worthington (300).

THE BLUE Dolphins also won all the age group trophies but one (took eight and under, nine-10, 11-12, 13-14, yielding 15-17 honors to Swim-land).

Other finishers at the 12-team meet were: Mt. Vernon (160), Gahanna (129), Arlington (120), Jewish Center (102), Newark Y (83), Mt. Air (77), Circleville (47), Liv-Moor (24) and Marion Country Club (12).

Only five individuals came out of the grueling 80-event program with triple wins — Jeanne Anderson and Cristy Deer of the Blue Dolphins, Becky Bischof and Alan Zimmer, both swimming unattached and Swim-land's Charlee Heaton.

DOUBLE WINNERS included: Mike Wagner, Andy Pierce, Jim Otte, Bert Calland, Suzie Gywn and Mark Anderson (all of BBD), Swim-land's Jane Stimmel and Jeff Wells, Worthington's Gary Rogers and Debbie Robbins, Arlington's Patrick Doyle and Ellen Merrill — the latter swimming unattached.

EL RANCHO WINS

Frank Harris scored four goals for El Rancho last Sunday and Dr. Ed Kennedy added a pair as El Rancho downed the Dayton Polo Club, 6-3. It was El Rancho's first victory of the season against one loss and a tie.

Sunday El Rancho takes to the road for a rematch with Dayton.

Yanks, Dodgers Keep Winning In T-V Loop

In recent play in the Teays Valley Youth Baseball League, the Little League Yankees added a pair of wins — 7-4 over the Mets and 8-6 over the Redlegs.

Jerry Sabine earned the mound win although Bob Archer (double), Don Archer (homer), Lester Scarberry and Jim Logsdon (two singles each) kept the Mets in contention.

SABINE (two singles, triple) and Tom Ainslie (two singles, double) provided the offense as Mike VanGundy pitched the Yanks to the win over the Reds.

Jay Brinker and Jeff Jenkins each contributed two singles apiece to the Reds' cause.

Elsewhere, the Giants outslugged the Indians, 17-10, as Nichols (single, double), Jeff Sheets (two doubles), Crosby (two singles) and Spurlock (triple) pace the winners' attack.

SHEETS gained the win despite heavy hitting by the Indians' Jim Pabst (single, homer), Tim Carpenter (single, two doubles) and Jay Derr (two doubles).

Redleg Randy Nungster's three hits and two hits apiece by Bob Smith and Steve Sawyer gained Jay Brinker a 14-7 win over the Cardinals.

Joe Lombardo, Jeff Lee and Jeff Hines each had a pair of hits for the losers.

IN ANOTHER Little League tilt, the Dodgers kept pace with the Yankees as Sammy Wilson pitched and batted the Dodgers to an 18-4 verdict over the Indians.

Wilson collected a double and triple while teammates Jack Brinker (three doubles) and Pat McCarthy (two doubles) chipped in with other big hits.

Terry Lambert took the loss but banged out a double and and two singles in defeat.

Utilization Committee Vital To Medicare

In The Spectator's report of how Metropolitan Columbus is girding to meet the impact of Medicare, it became apparent that the functions of "utilization committees" are vital.

Hospital administrators have nothing but praise for the cooperation of the doctors in the program. In fact, it is believed many doctors are grateful. Armed with the letter of review he can more easily discharge a reluctant case without causing hard feelings.

Spokesmen stress this is not a police action, that the attending physician's word is always accepted as final and that no one has lost sight of the fact that "under care" must be guarded against as vigilantly as "over care."

Neither are sociological, psychological and economic problems ignored, but hospitals must first meet the need of the critically ill.

Prospective patients and their families might as well realize now Medicare doesn't mean "Medical Care Unlimited."

It just isn't available, and money, influence or a generous Congress can't buy it.

Local hospital staffs are determined that Medicare isn't going to force the role of "Grandma-sitting" on them.

To combat the problems of "convenience" stays in the hospitals by insured patients while emergency cases lie in the halls on stretchers, "utilization" committees have been introduced in recent years.

With Medicare just around the corner, the functions of such a group are looked at as a God-send.

Usually set up as a revolving board, staff members review the charts of every patient occupying a hospital bed at least once a week.

If the chart indicates the patient does not require the services of an acute general hospital, the admitting doctor receives a written request to justify the patient's presence.

If the review presents evidence showing the patient can be transferred either to his home or a nursing home, the attending doctor is expected to arrange an immediate discharge.

This is sometimes easier said than done, because of resistance on the part of the patient, or (and all too often) his family.

However, provisions of Medicare set up a deadline for benefits after it has been certified the patient is eligible for discharge. Thus it is hoped fewer will try to ignore their moral obligation to make way for others who urgently need hospitalization.

Statistics prove the "utilization committees'" past effectiveness in Franklin County. It has a lower average length of hospital stay (around nine days) than any comparable metropolitan area.

Gone are the days when a tonsillectomy involved a four-day rest in the hospital, when an executive suite was available for an annual physical, or that charts were reviewed AFTER discharge to evaluate the grounds for admission and length of stay.

To insure beds are used by those who really need them, doctors are expected to carry on diagnostic tests in outside facilities, or on an outpatient basis.

"A day saved here, and another there, is of tremendous importance," the chairman of one such committee said, pointing out that patient day load in a single hospital had increased from 120,000 to 168,000 in the past five years.

The stay of the elderly far exceeds that of younger patients. Though only 14.8 percent of admissions were those 65 and older, these persons accounted for 26.3 percent of patient days. Their while that of the younger average stay was 13.4 days was only 7.5 days.

ARE INSTALLED

The new 1966-67 officers for the Guiding Hands of the Reynoldsburg CCL are left, Mrs. Paul Stenson, 6839 Laird-av, president; right front, Mrs. Frank Sainato, 6502 Olde Mill Run, vice president; back row, left, Mrs. Charles Smith, 7437 Donald-av, treasurer; Mrs. Jesse Canady, 1677 Foxchase-rd, secretary. Installations were held at Don's Restaurant, 6960 E. Main-st, May 25.

Der Willage Vanderer

By E. L. SCHMITZ

Villagers are still talking about the English writer-lecturer who visited here. She said England too has a version of urban renewal. The country is fast demolishing old homes and buildings. True, many old homes in London's Chelsea have been restored. Elsewhere, country home refugees from the confiscatory taxes of English Socialism are buying city stables and row houses (similar to those on Lazelle-st between Sycamore and Willow) and are converting these to smart, servantless town houses.

But no single English neighborhood is getting the German Village treatment. When the English woman left German Village she was armed with brochures and photos to illustrate her forthcoming writings and lectures on The German Village Renaissance.

Villagers are still talking about the woman who raised holy tarnation over her neighbor's gas lamp. Finally the neighbor painted out the side of the lamp that illuminated the complainer's house at night. Now the ex-complainer can dance around her house at night like Lady Godiva looking for her horse and not be illuminated by her neighbor's gas light.

Villagers are still talking about the success of Der Village Markt. Operated by Short Stops, a national chain, Der Markt has one of the most attractive buildings in German Village — the old stable and blacksmith shop that Barry Zacks revived. Der Markt has a good selection of S. S. Pierce canned goods. (Bostonians call Pierce "Peer-see.")

Whenever a proper Bostonian takes off on an African safari or in some undeveloped country as U.S. consul, he insulates his palate from the horrors of native cookery by air-freighting the choicest of canned foods — S. S. Pierce from Boston.

Like other stores, Der Village Markt does not give its S. S. foods away but you usually get just what you pay for anyway. In particular I like Pierce's Snapper Stew (turtle soup) which is equal to any served at the Union Oyster House in Boston or Bookbinder's in Philadelphia.

Villagers are still talking about Der Village Markt's small but attractive selection of wines. I have enjoyed their Benjolais very much. This inexpensive French wine is unpretentious but delicious — what wine snobs call "a good honest wine." Beaujolais does not improve with age; it should be drunk young.

Der Village Markt's Beaujolias is two years old, just right. Order this same wine in some of Columbus' hoity-toity restaurants and you get a five-year old bottle that's fit only for Suey Sow's New Year's Eve soiree.

Villagers are still talking about their Old World Bazaar. Whenever Frau Schmitz and I walk through this fabulous collection of shops, which is about every day, we meet other Villagers doing the same thing. The German bakery here, Jurgen's Conditorie, has a few tables and chairs and good coffee to go with its baked goodies and noon sandwich plates. Jurgen's is fast becoming the meeting place of German Village.

Now that we have the best foreign bakery in Columbus almost on our doorstep, we have begun some of our parties with Jurgen's cocktail canapes. I favor the puffs filled with a gooey mixture of mild cheese. Also I like a beautiful creation that is made of a small wheel of airy pastry surmounted by cheese as light as whipped cream, another wheel, this hiding pickle bits, and on top, sculptured rosettes of the same light cheese filling.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed bids will be received by the Board of Education of the Reynoldsburg Local District at its office, 1346 Terry Drive, Reynoldsburg, Ohio, until 12:00 Noon, EST, on July 18, 1966, for furnishing and installing the following items of equipment in the new Graham Road School in accordance with drawings and specifications prepared by Joseph Baker and Associates, Architects, Sharon Valley at King Roads, Newark, Ohio. Bids will be opened and publicly read immediately thereafter.

1. Kitchen
2. Basketball Backstops
3. Metal Shelving

Drawings, specifications and bid forms are on file at the office of the Architect and at the office of the Board of Education, where they may be examined during regular office hours. Individual copies may be obtained from the Architect and they shall be returned with the bid. Deposit of $10 is required with request, but fully refundable (less postage) if the bidder is an established dealer in the kind of equipment which he proposes to bid. For all others, a non-returnable fee of $5 will be charged for each set of documents. All bids must be submitted only on bid forms which will be furnished.

Each bid submitted must contain the full name of every person interested therein and shall be accompanied by a bid bond or a certified check, payable to the order of the Board of Education, in the sum of 10% of the amount of the bid and conditioned that if the bid be accepted a contract will be entered into and the performance of it properly secured by a performance bond in an amount equal to 50% of the contract price. Should any bid be rejected, such bid security shall be returned to the bidder, and should any bid be accepted, such bid security will be returned upon the proper execution and securing of the contract. The security will be forfeited by the bidder if such conditions are not fulfilled.

Bids shall be sealed and addressed to Clerk of the Board of Education, and the envelope shall be marked to show item of equipment bid upon and shall show the name of the bidder.

No bid may be withdrawn in less than 45 days and the right to reject any or all bids or parts thereof and the right to waive informalities or irregularities in bids is reserved.

Jack (left), son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Babbert, 5736 Bromley-av, became the proud owner of a Firestone 500 bicycle. It wasn't a gift. Jack and his brother, Steve, both Spectator newsboys in Worthington, earned their bike and radio with their respective sales of 20 and five pre-paid subscriptions to The Spectator. Circulation Manager Jack Schleup doesn't care how many times a lad comes collecting a radio or bike. "Just bring those subscriptions in, boys," he said. "I've got a whole Firestone production line to draw from." Remember, you need not be a Spectator carrier and the contest is open to both boys and girls. Cotton Makes Sweet Fashion 'Candy'

By The Spectator's
MARIANNE TOMLINSON

Contemporary cotton fashions on tap for Summer '66 are as varied as they are inventive, reports the National Cotton Council. Some are sedate . . . others sensational.

One sensational fabric making fashion news is cotton voile. Designers have discovered its elegance and have transformed it into an "haute couture" status.

The whisper-weight cloth has been turned into fashionable trapeze dresses, scanty bikinis and stunning sportswear separates. For evening, there are the billowing party pajamas and the long flowing evening gowns.

The colors and color combinations are as varied and versatile as the styles . . . candy stripes, leopard prints, solid oranges and reds, muted, pastel florals and exotic, island-inspired prints.

The elegance of voile brings a bright, new look to classic styling. A traditional three-piece suit suddenly takes on dressed-up airs when executed in a vibrant floral print and underscored with a sleeveless shell in a coordinating solid color.

While voile stands beautifully alone, it is equally effective when coupled with another cotton fabric. One designer combines a short evening dress in a printed cotton canvas with a man-tailored voile shirt in the same design. The airy quality of the voile contrasted with the heavier fabric adds a glamorous touch to a timely fashion.

Running second place to the sheers are the chunky cotton cloques (clo-kays) in bright white, pastel shades or startling black and white combinations.

A new, young shape, especially appropriate for a fabric with lots of body, is the trapeze dress that starts out skinny at the top and flares out at the hem like an inverted ice cream cone. The shape suggests a youthful, free spirit and the nicest part about it is that it can be worn by practically all women.

There's a great deal of talk right now about hem length. On one hand we hear about the mini-skirt that they are wearing four inches above the knee and then we get the news that the fashion designers in Paris are starting to drop them . . . what to do???

Well, first off, the mini-skirt is not designed for the majority of the female population. It's a very young style and can be worn to advantage by relatively few young ladies . . . most of whom are attention seekers.

As for the Paris bombshell, we probably won't get the fallout from that for quite a while. It simply takes time for drastic changes to get to our market . . . (or should I say battleground?) One thing most fashion experts agree on . . . there has to be a certain amount of flexibility on the subject of hemlines. Each woman must decide for herself which length is most flattering . . . and which length passes hubby's inspection.

Incidentally, there are many new fashion cottons available in the men's department too. The blazer, for instance, truly lives up to its name this season.

When the odd jacket first began to appear at sporting events some 75 years ago in what seemed to the Victorians (a veritable blaze of color) they were promptly dubbed "blazer" and though in the ensuing decades colors were tamed to more conservative ones, the name stuck. This summer, however, the blazer returns to the original concept of its Victorian ancestors in a blaze of color and pattern.

While navy blue still holds the number one color spot, it is being seriously challenged by jewel tones of red blue and green and also by pin-stripes and brazen awning stripes. The big blazer fabrics this summer will be denim, sailcloths, cotton hopsacking and madras in just about any color under the sun.

There is also a new fashion idea emerging in the blazer suits designed for those occasions when a suit is too much and a jacket not enough.

There are all kinds of exciting news from the National Cotton Council. Have you thought about covering a wall with fabric? Say maybe a striped ticking or a hopsacking texture? It's being done and with very striking results. Your favorite wallpaper man can give you advice on the proper technique, I'm sure. Then for another do-it-yourself decorating tip . . . try "bead" curtains made of cotton ball fringe to create an airy window treatment or a dramatic room divider.

THE ALL-GIRL "man shirt" is a fantasy of flowers on sheer voile . . . to tuck into hip-huggers, or your best shirt, or even over a swim suit. It by Ship 'n Shore.

Project '66 Seeks Outstanding Teens

Project '66, aimed at finding solutions to the problems of poverty and discrimination, is recruiting teenagers for its August program.

Executive Director Margaret Sebastian said Project '66 is looking for "a special kind of teenager, one who is proud to work hard and interested in learning about people from different racial, religious, social, economic and national backgrounds."

She said teenagers selected for participation "must reflect the high standards and goals set for Project '66, including the search for solutions to problems of poverty and discrimination and the acceptance of responsibility of planning and decision-making by the participants."

Five separate community programs are included in Project '66.

At First Community Church, Bill Kinsey is directing a summer stock production involving local residents in Upper Arlington, to be presented in all other project areas.

Recreation and block talent shows are part of the Near North Side Neighborhood Council program, headed by Mrs. Grace Mathieson.

At South Garfield Square, Rev. Hugh Carmichael is leading Operation Vacuum Cleaner, exterior building inspections and a voter registration drive.

Mrs. Bernie Wohl at South Side Settlement House is directing a mock housing inspection and follow-up meeting with landlords and city officials and running a day camp for children of the area.

At Tray-Lee Center, Douglas Comer is supervising recreation and the rehabilitation of houses in the area.

Some scholarship aid is available, although participants will pay some tuition. Applications may be submitted to Project '66, 30 W. Woodruff-av, telephone 294-3749.

March Of Dimes Honors Spectator

The Spectator, along with other media, was recently honored by the March of Dimes at a luncheon held at the Neil House. Jerry Spears, Jr., president of the Franklin County Chapter of The National Foundation, also presented certificates of appreciation to twenty-nine Columbus area volunteers who have accumulated more than 225 years of service to the March of Dimes.

Heading the list with 25 years of service was Ben Z. Neustadt, 81 S. Kelner-rd. Next with 20 years was Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Spears, Jr., 2999 Fremont-st and with 15 was Mrs. Charles F. Bird, 215 Tucker-dr.

Speaker was Judge Richard B. Metcalf, Community Education co - chairman, who urged the news services to continue its support for the March of Dimes program. State Treasurer John D. Herbert, chairman of the Advisory Committee, presented a brief financial report.

Directors Needed To Run Neighborhood Centers

Directors and service directors for four new neighborhood community centers are being sought by the Columbus Community Action Organization.

The centers will be operated under a $391,721 Office of Economic Opportunity grant.

The center director position pays $8,000 a year while service directors receive between $7,500 and $9,800. A college degree is required.

Opportunities for high school graduates are available in fields such as community organizer and receptionist - interviewer. An eighth - grade requirement has been set up for clerk-typists and building attendants.

Applications should be made to the Ohio State Employment Service, 309 S. Fourth-st.

Bolivar Arms Skating Rink Dedicated By Task Force

Mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner's East Side Task Force today dedicated a reconditioned building in the Bolivar Arms Urban Renewal Area to serve as a roller skating rink for the 5,000 area residents.

The rink will serve as an interim recreation facility until a $500,000 recreation center can be built in the area.

The Task Force, headed by Assistant Safety Director Michael Dorrian, was formed last year to work out interim recreational programs for the area. The force was composed of city officials and repersentatives of the Mt. Vernon Avenue District Improvement Association.

Already in use when the rink was dedicated were a half - dozen "tot-lots" and a running track.

The skating rink was formerly a storehouse near the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks. The building is naturally air-conditioned — large barn-type doors provide ventilation and will be kept open during the summer months.

Workhouse prisoners repainted the entire building and polished the wooden floors. Inside, a soft drink machine, first aid station and desk will occupy one end. The rink itself will be divided into three areas for casual skaters, beginners and speed skaters.

Sensenbrenner appealed to the community to donate "old roller skates that are gathering dust and cobwebs in basements and attics in many homes throughout the city."

He said anyone wishing to donate skates could call 469-7644 and arrangements for a pick-up would be made.

Dorrian added that old skates could be placed in refuse collection areas and sanitation crews would bring them in.

The $500,000 recreation center will be part of the $5 million urban redevelopment phase of the Bolivar Arms project. The federal government last week approved a $3.4 million grant to help finance the project.

Local funds will be used to pay for street, sewer and water facilities and schools and recreation facilities in Bolivar Arms.

THE FRENCH HAVE A WORD FOR IT...

"a bon marche."

It means a good value. A bargain. We couldn't say it better. About our Total Comfort System, that is, built around an all-electric Luxaire central air conditioning unit.

But exactly what does Luxaire air conditioning mean to you? Personally speaking. It means your home will stay cooler, cleaner, dryer, more comfortable. You and your family will live better, sleep better. You'll enjoy life more. Entertaining is nicer.

Financially speaking, Luxaire central air conditioning will increase the value of your home. Also, central air conditioning costs less than you think.

Flameless, electric Luxaire central air conditioning can be installed for as little as $3.00 a week, with up to five year to pay, and no payments are necessary until next September. Our survey of your home cooling needs, plus cost estimate, is free! No obligation! A bon marche. Call today.

Oh yes! Our powerful new furnace cleaner is now available. Cleans your complete heating system with gale force cleaning power! It's the best ever!

DON'S READY IF YOU NEED HIM

LESS THAN A WEEK after the Harrison Township Fire Department's new 17 ton pumper arrived, it answered its first call on Goose Pond-pk south of Ashville. According to Chief Don Thompson, the department worked Friday morning and, when the fire broke out again, all Friday night, moving 90 tons of hay to save the large poll barn. Complete with a seven-man cab, the new piece of equipment (which all but four of the company have already been trained to operate) cost the newly-formed fire district $25,600.. The truck which will join the Big Parade at Ashville is capable of pumping 750 gallons of water a minute.

Slap! Smack! Kapowy! Conquer That Mosquito!

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

EE EEEEEEEE!

Who, in the night, has not heard this sound?

EEEEEEEEEEE!

Then stops. Panic. Kapowy! Crash! Splat!

The waiting. That long, long waiting for the sound to resume. It doesn't return. Then you know either the mosquito has bitten you and flown away or you killed him.

But more probably he is still there, crawling silently in the dark. Waiting to stick that needle in and infect you with the itches. SLAP! SMACK! KAPOWY! CRASH! SPLAT! PANIC!

There is the age old war of man against the mosquito. A war that has been going on ever since man lost most of his hair. (Whenever that was that war can be won.

I'm here to tell you that

The "Complete Book of Camping" says: "There are three effective ways to deal with mosquitoes, black flies, no-see-ums, deerflies and other flying pests: (1) avoid them; (2) screen them out; or (3) kill or ward them off!

Avoidance is accomplished by remembering that there are natural elements that are hostile to these insects. Dry and open ground is unattractive to them, and they breed in marshy flats. Wind, even a soft breeze, hampers their flight.. Cold weather kills them. Thus, the main swarms can be dodged in summer by staying in high, dry and breezy places.

As for the screening out, loose clothing snugly buttoned or snapped at the collar and wrists will protect one pretty well. For more intensive screening, one can wear unlined leather gloves and head net. Bobbinet is the best all-around insect netting, it has been reported.

Chemical repellents are really the big gun in fighting these insects. Recommended effective repellents include Off! 6-12 and Pellent. The basic formula for Off! is N, N-diethyl toulamide which has been endorsed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

When modern repellents are not available, a number of old-time preparations can serve the purpose. These include the blend of one part of carbolic acid with nine parts of sweet oil. Another is the mixture of one ounce pure pine tar and one ounce oil of pennyroyal with three ounces of vaseline.

Of course, in a desperate situation when one is attacked by swarms of the insects one can always coat oneself with mud. Or coat oneself with kerosene (which is about as bad as the mosquitoes).

Makeshift bug repellents can be contrived by soaking tobacco in warm water to produce a strong nicotine solution which is deadly to nearly all insects. However, it must be replenished constantly and if you only have one pack of cigarettes, it could be a short-lived remedy.

But these are only defensive weapons. Bug bombs afford good offensive weapons, along with sprayed insecticides, chemical dusts and smudge fire. DDT is probably the best common insecticide used in bug bombs. However, it needs time to take effect. A combination that kills almost instantly is DDT and malathion or lindane. Look for these ingredients on the label to insure getting a quick-acting bug bomb.

Smudge pots do not cause insects, even mosquitoes, to burst off in immediate alarm. but the steady irritation of the smudge will soon move out most of the residents . . . (and perhaps people too).

These are some of the weapons used to fight the battle.

Science has contributed more. It is known that mosquitoes prefer adults to children, men to women, dirty people to clean people light people to dark people, and warm people to cold people (don't ask me, they said it).

Anyway, if you are a light complexioned man who needs a bath and is sweating . . . you haven't a chance.

Now, if you're in bed and you hear the familiar EEEE! and none of the above remedies is available, be sure to pull the sheet over your head!

One final word:

"Time" recently reported European Pyrrhocoris apterus bugs were prevented from molting into adults by a chemical substance in American newsprint.

The article didn't say how effective this is in the case of mosquitoes, but don't take a chance.

Throw this newspaper into a marshy flat when you're finished.

Sgt. Chase Huber Gets Farewell Fete

T/Sgt. Chase Huber of the 32nd Air Refueling Squadron and his family received a sample of "Buckeye hospitality" recently when about 65 Groveport neighbors turned out to bid them farewell.

Veteran of 14 years Air Force Service Sgt. Huber and his family left for a new duty assignment at Bunker Hill AFB, Ind.

Robert Bayer, mayor of Groveport, presented Sgt. Huber a plaque making him an Honorary Buckeye." It was the highlight of the four hour lawn party.

The Huber family came to Lockbourne in January of 1965 and moved into a duplex home on Naomi-ct, Groveport. Sgt. Huber's wife, Sandra, and children, Robert, 6, and Susan, 7, quickly made acquaintances and he took part in the Groveport Players' Club annual minstrel show.

"Friends were easy to find in a community as outgoing as this one," Sgt. Huber said.

This was proven by the lawn party show of joint effort on the part of his neighbors — each arriving with another contribution in the form of hot dogs, baked beans and other cookout items.

"It really makes a man feel good to know that there are people like this, ready to make him feel at home," the sergeant said. "It's sometimes very hard for a military family to have this feeling that they honestly fit into a community."

As for Groveport, the sergeant said, "it will always be an adopted home."

Reynoldsburg Commission Pondering 1967 Budget

At the recent meeting of the Reynoldsburg Recreation Commission, it was determined that as soon as commitments from committeemen were received the proposed 1967 budget would be finalized.

Girls' softball was reported as "unorganized" due to lack of response to the commission's request for help.

Little League and the Pony League were reported as "running smoothly" and progressing "satisfactorily."

Ball equipment was ordered and it was determined to skin the ball diamond and set a backstop.

Two new employes were hired for park maintenance and summer program.

In other action, commission motioned that they pay for secretarial duties and the use of gyms.

The resignation of Warren Parsons was "regretfully" accepted.

REYNOLDSBURG GETS NEW GENERATOR

The Reynoldsburg Police Department has a new emergency generator provided by the Franklin County Civil Defense organization.

It was installed in the municipal building by the Reynoldsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The generator will be used to operate police lights and radio equipment during power blackouts.

In the past it was necessary to keep a police cruiser at the station for communication purposes during blackouts.

Man Drowns After Swim In Quarry

Joseph Carl Smith, 28, of 3581 Glorious-rd, drowned in a water-filled abandoned quarry along Big Walnut Creek near Winchester-pk early Monday, according to sheriff's deputies.

The quarry is between Winchester-pk and new Rt. 33, about two-miles north of S. Hamilton-rd and Winchester-pk.

Smith reportedly was going for a swim in the quarry at 3 a.m. He dove in and never emerged. A surveyor for Thomas Engineering and Surveying Co., Smith is survived by his wife, Rita, and two children.

Don't Slam Chicken Flavor; It's Those Jaded Taste Buds

The American public is eating chicken as if it were going out of style.

Since the end of World War II per capital consumption has spiraled from nine to 37 pounds annually.

This should indicate it is indeed "finger-licking good" and yet about a third of the chicken - eaters interviewed, recently clucked "chicken just doesn't taste like it used to."

To this, the United States Department of Agriculture and the researchers at Ohio State say, "Chicken feathers."

It's a fact that the biography of a bird the customer selects from a supermarket poultry case today is a far scratch from that of the bird marketed 20 or 30 years ago.

Today's pullet or cockerel is a hybrid, bred for ability to hit broiler size within eight or nine weeks. It has been scientifically fed, vaccinated against disease, and raised "on litter" in a dimly-lit "chicken factory" with 10,000 to 12,00 other birds all slated to be electrocuted, dressed and marketed as soon as their weight averages about three and one-half pounds.

But the USDA is satisfied that while modern production methods have cut costs, flavor has been left intact.

To prove this, a few years ago 1930-type chicken were fed a 1930-type diet, and given access to a grass yard. In short, growing conditions of 30 odd years ago were duplicated.

At the end of the experimental stages, they were cooked in almost every conceivable way and compared to test groups of old-style chickens on new-style diets, and new-style chicken raised on both 1930 and current diets.

Results?

Chicken is chicken and no one but the dressers could tell whether an old-fashioned Plymouth Rock reared with backyard privileges or a fancy, hormone fed hybrid was being served.

But an informal (and extremely unscientific survey) made by the Spectator indicated that "people convinced against their will are of the same opinion still."

Most of several dozen persons queried agreed on two things about chickens—they were hatched to be eaten about once a week and taste best when fried. (A notable exception was the sophisticate who will partake of fowl only if it has been baked in cantaloupe.)

Some agree with the USDA but more feel there is a difference in flavor either to the good or bad.

While one 30-year-old bachelor claims he enjoys chicken much more than as a child because his mother was "the world's worst cook," a young married man explains his lack of enthusiasm for a once-favorite dish by saying, "My wife hasn't learned to boil water yet."

Other strictly personal reasons for either believing that chicken tastes better or worse were given by the woman who explained that as one of 14 children she never tasted white meat until she was married, and another who claims she can't look a chicken in the face after serving it several times a week when prices were rock bottom.

The poultry industry, although certain the USDA report was valid, still could not ignore the cry "Chicken isn't as good as it used to be."

Researchers at Ohio State were urged to approach the problem from another angle.

Maybe the cries were coming from older people whose taste buds weren't what they used to be.

Under the supervision of George Mountey, associate professor in the OSU Department of Poultry Science, 80 volunteers between 19 and 69 devoted themselves to tasting chicken broth.

4-H Congress Delegates Named

A July 4-H Club Congress is in store for nearly 900 Ohio youngsters this year, beginning an annual schedule which moves the state 4-H event from September to early summer.

Dates of this year's Congress are July 6-9. According to a spokesman the switch is being made to provide Congress delegates with better facilities and less crowded conditions on The Ohio State University campus, where the Congress is held.

Headline speakers will include the Rev. Otis Maxfield, pastor of the First Community Church, Columbus; Meno Lovenstein, Ohio State University economist; Everett Lindsey, public relations director of the Gulf Oil Company, Houston, Tex.; and Mrs. Marilyn Van Debur Atler, Miss America of 1958.

Congress delegates from Franklin County include Robin Worrall, 5355 Harvest-st, Dublin; Ronald Grossman, 3603 Zuber-rd, Orient; Wayne Barb, 9582 Johnstown-rd, New Albany; Marilyn Miller, 2429 Sunbury-rd, Columbus; Brenda Van Bibber, 4898 Thompson-rd, Gahanna; Marty Lehman, 7591 Dublin-rd, Dublin; Rosemary Durban, 1600 Coler-rd, Columbus; Joyce Avery, 136 Wayne-st, Hilliard; Mary Bussert, Box 94, Harrisburg.

IN AN OLD-FASHIONED GARDEN

HAUS UND GARTEN tourists learned Sunday that all is not plush and avante garde in German Village. When they visited the garden of Ralph Cromer, 885 City Park, they found a garden retreat reminiscent of grandmother's well-tended plain, old-fashioned "back yard." Yet with its fruit trees, her garden, ageratum, coral bells, pinks, stock and day lilies, its charm stands up well beside the more sophisticated "patios" of the concave.

KESTNER

Retired Sergeant Brings Family ToReynoldsburg

A recently-retired 23-year veteran of Air Force service has chosen Reynoldsburg as his new home.

M/Sgt. Lloyd C. Kestner, a native of Saltville, Va., will move to Reynoldsburg with his wife, Mildred, and their twin sons, Melvin and Kelvin.

Kestner retired recently from the technical training center at Chanute Air Force Base, Ill., where he was an instructor in the jet aircraft mechanic course of the department of aircraft maintenance training.

Kestner joined the Air Force on Oct. 13, 1943. During his career, he served as an aerial gunner, aircraft maintenance technican, recruiter and instructor. He saw duty in World War II and the Korean conflict and served in Italy, Alaska and Japan.

Next Year's Wheat Loans Set At $1.25

Next year's wheat program is designed to hike growers' incomes while insuring increased production.

Announcing the price-support loan level has been set at $1.25 a bushel Owen Van Schoyck, chairman of the Franklin Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, outlined other key factors of the 1967 program.

These include marketing certificates valued at approximately $1.32 (representing the difference between loan value and parity), an almost seven million increase in acreage allocated, omission of acreage diversion and privilege of planting in excess of wheat allotment, although no more than 50 percent.

Farmers will also be permitted to substitute wheat for oats, rye or barley. Allotment notices for next lumbus Warhawks were tied (both 6-0) for the Pony Grad lead.

Col. Nelson Takes Reins At Lockbourne

Lt. Col. Omar C. Nelson recently took command of the 40th Troop Carrier Squadron at Lockbourne Air Asia.

Formerly 317th Troop Carrier Wing assistant deputy commanded for operations, Col. Nelson succeeds Lt. Col. George N. Blair who leaves soon to take command of the 315th Air Commando Wing in Southeast Asia.

Col. Nelson, 47, came to Lockbourne in June 1964 from Evreux AF, France. The colonel served as 40th TCS operations officer prior to taking over his wing operations post.

The colonel is a 21-year service veteran. He resides at 6542 Spruce-dr, on base, with his wife, Elizabeth, and two children, James, 10, and Robert, 7.

Schiff Attends PFP Meet As Shoe Corp. Spokesman

Herbert H. Schiff, president of the Shoe Corporation of America, represented his company and its subsidiaries at the fifth anniversary meeting of Plans for Progress in Washington.

Nearly 300 executives of major corporations who contributed to development of the program were honored by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, featured speaker at the program.

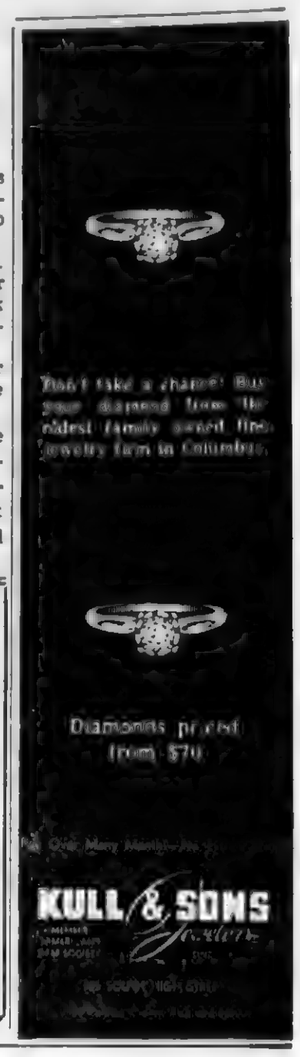
Plans for Progress (PFP) was conceived to go beyond the letter of equal opportunity laws by carrying out action policies aimed at ending discrimination in employment. It outlived its original parent group, the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. It now includes 328 industrial companies, retail firms and financial institutions, employing 8.5 million persons.

Chairman of the PFP advisory Council is Charles E. Spahr, president of the Standard Oil Company (Ohio).

Hot Weather Gives Big Boost To Beer Sales

Soaring temperatures throughout Ohio have apparently caused beer sales to take a noticeable rise.

State Treasurer John D. Herbert announces that beer tax collections for the week ending June 18 totaled $2,299,042.64.



This was the largest beer tax collection in Ohio since the week of July 17, 1965.

The collections for the fiscal year to date are $25,433,144.91, down $508,292.79, or about two percent from the comparable period in the previous fiscal year.

REAL ESTATE SECTION

To Every Home Owner:

A drastic Federal forced housing law now being considered by the Congress would destroy your basic rights—unless you act now!

Here's what it is:

"Title IV" of the so-called Civil Rights Bill—H.R. 14765 and S. 3296—is the forced, not fair, housing proposal that threatens to deprive you, as a home owner, of basic freedoms.

Here's what it would do:

1 Deny you freedom to contract with a person of your choice in the sale or rental of your home, or a room in your own home.

2 Deny you the right even to mention a preference for a person of your own religion in advertising for a roomer or tenant.

3 Subject you to suit by the U.S. Attorney General to force you to sell or rent to a person other than the person of your choice.

4 Delay indefinitely a rental or sale, pending final court disposition of allegations against you.

5 Subject you to payment of unlimited damages if you insist on exercising preference in a sale or rental.

6 Discourage sale of your home because the prospective buyer could not be assured of taking title until the deed is actually recorded.

Because we are concerned about the human rights of all Americans . . .

- We protest a law that gives one person the right to force another to enter into a contract against his will.
- We protest this attack on the human right of freedom of choice in disposing of private property.
- We believe progress in race relations will be retarded, not advanced, by this bill. Equal opportunity in housing is making progress under the influence of voluntary efforts of church, school and people of good will.

How can you make your protest heard?

The Congress will reject the forced housing features of this bill if you and other home and property owners write your Members of Congress and make it clear that you oppose this legislation because it would destroy rights of all Americans.

Write or wire today—and tell your Members of the Congress what you think.
